President Bush and his host, Argentina's President Carlos Menem, plan to hold a joint news conference within the hour. Bush arrived in Buenos Aires this morning by helicopter from neighboring Uruguay. Menem is the only Latin American president to send naval units to enforce U-N sanctions against Iraq, and he did so even though a majority of Argentina's Congress opposed the move. The 60-year-old Argentine leader also backs U-S plans to build a free trade zone throughout Latin America.

Menem has been having problems of his own recently, including a military revolt he calls a coup attempt.

Mixed signals about the economy are coming from Washington. The Commerce Department reports the economy was in slightly better shape during October than originally predicted. But the Labor Deparment says third-quarter industrial productivity was NOT as strong as first thought.

Factory orders were up two-point-eight percent in October for the best increase since March. Increased orders for transportation equipment pushed durable goods ahead three-point-nine percent with NON-durable goods orders up one-point-six percent. Revised productivity figures, however, were up only two-tenths of one percent. The original third- quarter figure had been up a much stronger one-point-six percent.

The jury in the Central Park jogger case resumed deliberations this morning... urged by the judge to rely on common sense rather than emotion to reach a verdict. Defense lawyers say the two black youths accused of attacking a white woman jogger were arrested only because they are black. The two face 13 criminal charges, including rape and attempted murder in the April 1989 assault.

The American Medical Association says women are NOT getting the same quality of medical treatment as men. Members of the A-M-A House of Delegates meeting in Orlando, Florida, this week say there is research that shows men historically receive better health care than women. The A-M-A group recommends that doctors examine their attitudes to see whether they are influenced by social and cultural biases against women.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (DEC. 5) UPI - The Columbia crew continued to fight a balky automatic telescope mount Wednesday, prompting the spaceship's frustrated skipper to question the wisdom of continued troubleshooting at the expense of valuable science.

Although Columbia's seven-man crew doubled the number of astronomical targets they were able to study Tuesday versus the day before, officials said Wednesday, they continued to lose observing time because of problems getting the $50 million Instrument Pointing System to lock onto and track dim stars.

Even so, mission scientist Ted Gull said he was optimistic the glitches ultimately would be resolved and that the astronauts would revolutionize humanity's knowledge about the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe during the course of their 10-day mission.

''We have an observatory that is slowly coming to life,'' Gull said of Columbia and its four-telescope ''Astro-1'' payload. ''While we're still fine tuning the instruments and operations, we're starting to think science. We're transitioning from the checkout period to the science period.''

Since blastoff Sunday, the shuttle's four astronomers - Robert Parker, 53, Jeffrey Hoffman, 46, and civilian researchers Ronald Parise, 39, and Samuel Durrance, 47 - have become adept at manually guiding the ''IPS'' and its three ultraviolet telescopes.

Using automatic control for bright targets and manual guidance for dim stars and galaxies, the astronauts were able to achieve 35 percent of their planned targets Tuesday versus just 17 percent Monday.

Working in the background, commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42 and flight engineer John ''Mike'' Lounge, 44, are keeping Columbia shipshape and pointed in the right direction.

Gull said the science output of the 38th shuttle mission would continue to increase as engineers and scientists learned more about how to coddle the IPS into reliably aiming the three UV telescopes at their targets.

But in an exchange with mission control in Houston, Parker said ''it's pretty clear we could get a lot more data, at least in the short term,'' by using manual ''contingency target acquisition,'' or CTA, ''all the time.''

''In fact, it's not obvious to me we won't be better with CTA if (automatic target acquisition) works,'' Parker said.

A few minutes later, Brand echoed Parker's thoughts, expressing obvious frustration.

"I would like to add emphasis to what Bob Parker said a little while ago about phasing over to CTA operations and forgetting about trying to get the automatic (system) to work,'' Brand said. ''It seems like we're up here to get data. It puts a little more workload on those guys (to acquire targets manually) but they seem to enjoy it.''

Musgrave replied that while the shuttle crew was having better luck with manual operations, the quality of the observations was less than they would be with automatic control.

''Vance, we are trying to get the best science we can right now,'' Musgrave said. ''But we're also considering that ... we're still doing some diagnostics and tests and hope to improve further from where we are operationally.''

''OK, I understand,'' Brand replied. ''It's not up to us. But we're up here to get science.''

The goal of the 38th shuttle mission is to study a smorgasbord of violent stars, explosive galaxies, mysterious quasars and other high-energy targets with a $150 million payload of four telescopes sensitive to energetic X-rays and ultraviolet light that cannot penetrate Earth's atmosphere.

Three ultraviolet telescopes are mounted on the Instrument Pointing System while the Broad Band X-ray Telescope, known as the BBXRT, is mounted in its own cradle at the back of Columbia's cargo bay.

Unlike the IPS instruments, the X-ray telescope is operated from the ground by remote control and after initial problems fine-tuning its alignment, science operations have proceeded normally.

But the astronauts had continuing trouble with the tempermental Instrument Pointing System, reducing the number of planned astronomical observations and forcing mission planners on the ground to list their priority targets for the remainder of the mission.

The targets scheduled for observation Wednesday included a pair of elliptical galaxies, a quasar, the multiple star Capella and a bright X-ray source in the Large Magellanic Cloud, a sister galaxy to Earth's Milky Way.

Capella, the sixth brightest star in the sky, actually is a multiple star system with at least four components, the two brightest of which are separated by 70 million miles.

Another high priority target for the Columbia astronauts is a quasar known as 3C 273, the first such ''quasi-stellar radio'' source quasar ever discovered.

Quasars, roughly the size of a solar system, somehow generate the energy output of entire galaxies. Astronomers suspect giant black holes are responsible for the titanic energy output of quasars and data from the Astro mission could shed light on the matter.

DUMFRIES, SCOTLAND (DEC. 5) UPI - A former British security chief of Pan American World Airways testified Wednesday that Pan Am's administrative problems may have undercut security operations, leading to the bombing of Flight 103 in December 1988 over Scotland that killed 270 people.

British Army Col. Wilfred ''Jumbo'' Wood, 59, issued a bitter attack Wednesday against the airline while testifying before the Scottish inquiry into the Lockerbie disaster.

The 270 victims, some of them on the ground in the town of Lockerbie, included many U.S. students returning home for the holidays from studies in Europe.

Wood, whose was vice president of security training and operation at the airline, set up a global security program called Alert for the airline between 1986 and 1988 but that Pan Am's security administration undercut his program.

When setting up Alert, ''the challenge was up to us to find out what we could '' Wood said. ''There was no point in complaining. There was no line of communication in Pan Am. It certainly didn't exist as a clean flow.

''The best answer was to get on with what we had got. No one was quite clear who was responsible for what, regarding security,'' he said.

Wood, who served 34 years in the British army, said there was never any directive or sign that the Alert security programm was being carried out.

Each Pan Am station manager in Germany, a key point along the Pan Am route, was ''a baron in his own fiefdom,'' he testified.

Wood also revealed that immediately after the bombing, which has neen blamed on unnamed terrorists, he exposed a loophole in airport security on a trip to Germany - with bomb fuses in his own luggage.

''In my little bag, I had half a dozen fuses stuffed among the pens. That showed how easy it was. I went through X-rays about 18 times in the day (at airports in Germany and Britain) and they didn't pick them up. There was no way with X-ray you were going to pick up that information,'' he said.

The inquiry, in its 10th week, has heard that the unaccompanied suitcase bomb that destroyed the aircraft was loaded into the hold at London Heathrow from a Frankfurt feeder flight - but could have started its journey anywhere in the world.

Pan Am X-rayed inter-line passenger baggage but did not match it with passengers or physically search it, as required by Federal Aviation Administration regulations, according to testimony.

Wood described Pan Am's administrative system as ''antiquated and clumsy'' and added: ''It was rather like a procrustean bed. I think they were trying to graft an alien plant into European soil. Basically, the administration wasn't sound.

"The staff was doing its best. But if you had a German X-ray machine you could not put an Alert machine beside it. If an Alert guard found a bomb, he could only communicate that to the German police as a German citizen,'' Wood said.

Wood said he based his program on a report produced for Pan Am by KPI, a New York firm of former Israeli airline El Al security consultants. The firm's bid to set up the security was rejected because of cost.

His program was presented to Pan Am's security task force just before Christmas 1986 by the firm's president at a cost of $1.5 million to $3.5 million.

''He was told to run away and think again,'' said Wood. ''They were very rude to him. It was an antagonistic meeting with everyone defending his own corner. My impression was that Pan Am's flight academy, which trained ground security co-ordinators, saw the program as a threat,'' Wood said.

He said the program set up in London in 1987 was a reduced system and that the one-week course for screeners and searchers was cut to three days.

X-ray operators were given training for only one or two hours and some on-the-job instruction.

He said other training plans - such as bringing instructors from the airline's school in Alabama and the appointment of a security coordinator for each Pan Am station - were also abandoned for financial reasons.

Of the airline's corporate security, Wood said: ''These people were not experienced in anti-terrorism organization. From being policemen thief-takers, they were turned into an anti-terrorist organization and it did not sit well."

He thought the same situation still prevailed.

The colonel told the inquiry the Alert program was set up in Frankfurt in June 1988, six months before the disaster.

VATICAN CITY (DEC. 5) UPI - International Jewish officials praised the ''new spirit'' in relations with the Catholic Church Wednesday and urged that the church keep Catholics up-to-date on developments to help combat anti-Semitism.

This was the main theme to emerge from a full day of talks between a 30-man delegation from the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations and the Holy See's Commission for Religious Relations with the Jews, held in a Pontifical Palace near St. Peter's Square, Jewish Committee spokesman Gunther Lawrence said.

On Thursday the Jewish delegation is to have an audience with Pope John Paul II in the Vatican. It will be the first top-level Jewish meeting with the pope since 1987 when an IJCIC delegation protested John Paul's meeting with Austrian President Kurt Waldheim, accused by the Jews of war crimes in World War II.

The new encounter officially marked the 25th anniversary of the ''Nostra Aetate'' (In Our Times) declaration by the Second Vatican Council that condemned anti-Semitism and removed the centuries-old charge that the Jews were responsible for Christ's death.

It also aimed to build on a similar meeting between the two delegations held in Prague in September that formally declared anti- Semitism ''a sin against God and humanity.''

The Jewish leaders expected the Polish pope to endorse that declaration during Thursday's meeting to curb the resurgence of anti- Semitism in Poland and other newly liberated countries of Eastern Europe.

In a speech to the only open session of the Wednesday talks, held at the Lateran University, Rabbi Jack Bemporad, of Lawrence, N.Y., chairman of the Interreligious Affairs Committee of the Synagogue Council of America, urged that the ''new spirit'' be spread to the Catholic ''grass roots.''

He said the Jewish Community must also educate ''our own people'' to the changes that have developed in Jewish-Catholic relations.

''It will take a long time for the Jewish community to genuinely trust the events that have so radically changed the church,'' he said.

Bemporad also urged that Vatican recognition of the state of Israel ''could do a great deal to alleviate and assist in both the relations and the dialogue.

''You clearly state that no theological objections to Israel exist and that the Jewish state has a right to exist,'' Bemporad told the Catholics at the evening session. ''Why not go all the way and establish relations?

''Such recognition does not imply agreement with a nation's policies, but places the relationship on the same equal level that the Catholic Church has with world Jewry,'' he said.

However, Vatican sources said the pope was not ready to change his frequently expressed position that the establishment of full diplomatic relations with Israel could come only when the Jerusalam has a form of international status guaranteeing access to the shrines by the three religions that regard it as their Holy City.

BEIJING (DEC. 5) UPI - Trading opened Wednesday on socialist China's first national securities exchange, but an inaugural ceremony was marred by the unexplained absence of the only top communist leader expected to attend.

The new Securities Trading Automated Quotations System, called STAQS and modeled on the American NASDAQ exchange, began operation at 9 a.m., linking six financial centers across China over a network of computers and telephone lines.

In the first day of operation, the 18 trading firms registered under STAQS negotiated computer-assisted trades of Chinese government treasury bonds totaling about $740,000.

Officials of the sponsoring Securities Exchange Executive Council said at a news conference that the system had worked well and would serve to build efficiency, flexibility and financial muscle into China's balky socialist economy.

''We call it an over-the-counter market because there is no trading floor,'' said Wang Boming, the council's Wall Street-trained vice president and one of the architects of the new trading system. ''It can be said that the whole country now is one big trading market.''

But a celebratory buffet at the Great Hall of the People, the seat of Chinese government on central Tiananmen Square, was conspicuous for the absense of any of China's top communist leaders.

Securities exchange officials confirmed that Yao Yilin, a member of the ruling Communist Party politburo's elite standing committee, had been expected to attend but had canceled.

Several exchange officials privately attributed Yao's reversal to policy ''contradictions'' in the highest levels of the Communist Party, but none would offer further explanation.

''There is some controversy (in the party leadership) over what we are doing, but I cannot say any more than that,'' said the organization's general counsel Gao Xiqing. ''To tell you more would give our enemies something to use against us.''

The development of financial markets is an important component of China's economic modernization drive, and the new computerized bond- trading system is just one of many Chinese experiments with capitalist- style finance.

But hard-line elements in the party are known to be nervous about financial markets, which many believe represent the adoption of capitalism at the expense of socialism.

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (DEC. 5) UPI - Clashes between government troops and rebels continued Wednesday despite President Alfredo Cristiani's warning that increased rebel attacks would be matched by harsher army suppression.

''If rebels show no desire (to stop fighting) and they want to continue the war, then we will decide to do the same,'' Cristiani told reporters Tuesday at a military celebration about 20 miles north of San Salvador.

Cristiani told reporters that continued attacks by guerrillas of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, or FMLN, threaten peace talks begun in April to end 10 years of civil war that has left more than 72, 000 people dead.

''The armed forces are going to destroy the rebels militarily,'' Defense Minister Rene Emilio Ponce said at the Tuesday celebration.

The government's harsher tone comes after almost three weeks of fighting that began Nov. 20 when rebels launched a limited offensive. Rebel leaders say the offensive is designed to force the government to give concessions in peace talks.

The army reported fighting Wednesday 35 miles north of San Salvador in La Laguna, where a U.S.-made AC-47 military plane was downed by rebel fire Tuesday.

One member of the seven-man crew was found alive and the army has classified the others as missing in action.

Defense Minister Rene Emilio Ponce said the Sandinista army in Nicaragua has supplied Salvadoran rebels with Soviet-made SA-7 and SA-14 surface-to-air missiles, which the army says have been used in the downing of two of the four military aircraft shot down in the past two weeks.

Fighting around the country Tuesday left nine guerrillas dead and 11 wounded, the army reported. Army casualties were reported as three dead and 11 wounded.

Most of the deaths resulted from fighting about 10 miles east of San Salvador in Tonacatepeque, where eight rebels and two soldiers died, the army said.

More than 200 government troops and rebels have died in the past three weeks of fighting, according to military and diplomatic estimates.

NEW YORK (DEC. 5) UPI - Sterling Drug Inc. is talking with a number of companies, including Sanofi S.A. of France, about forming a worldwide ''strategic alliance,'' the company said Wednesday.

Sterling and its corporate parent, Eastman Kodak Co., are ''aggressively moving to reach critical mass,'' Charles Mayr, a Sterling spokesman, said Wednesday.

Mayr said the discussions do not involve an acquisition. He said he didn't know if or when any type of agreement would be reached.

He acknowledged that Sterling is talking to Sanofi, a large pharmaceutical company, but declined to mention any other companies in the discussions. They may include F. Hoffmann-LaRoche & Co., Ciba-Geigy AG and Sandoz AG, all based in Switzerland, and Bayer AG of West Germany and Rhone Poulenc S.A. of France.

Kodak, based in Rochester, N.Y., purchased Sterling, of New York, in February 1988 for $5.1 billion. Kodak has publicly stated it is pleased with Sterling's performance.

However, consolidations have changed the industry, creating the need to form new alliances, Mayr said. Analysts said Sterling is not earning enough to offset interest payments on the debt Kodak incurred to acquire the firm.

Kodak denies persistent rumors that Sterling is for sale.

A new alliance might be reached by the end of the year, sources said, but it's not known what form a joint venture would take. It's likely Sterling would market a number of new drugs in the United States while also gaining a larger presence overseas.

Foreign firms might benefit from Sterling's strong domestic sales force, especially in over-the-counter drugs. Sterling could gain access to new drugs and expand in Europe and Japan.

Sanofi is 60 percent owned by France's state-controlled Elf Aquitaine oil company. Sterling manufactures over-the-counter drugs like Bayer aspirin and Phillips Milk of Magnesia. The firm also sells pharmaceutical products such asdyes used in diagnostic imaging.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 5) UPI - Despite rising factory orders and continued, but slowing, gains in productivity, economists said Wednesday there is little in recent government statistics to indicate economic recovery.

The Commerce Department reported a 2.8 percent increase in factory orders in October. The increase, which was greater than many economists had expected, was the largest boost since a 4 percent gain in March.

New orders for manufactured goods increased $6.8 billion in October to $250.7 billion. Durable goods orders gained 3.9 percent, with most of the increase in transportation equipment.

Orders for non-durable goods rose 1.6 percent with most of the gain coming from petroleum refining.

Shipments of manufactured goods increased 1.7 percent - or $4.2 billion - in October to $247.5 billion. Shipments for durable goods rose 1.8 percent, with transportation equipment shipments accounting for most of the gain.

Non-durable goods shipments rose 1.6 percent, mostly from increased petroleum refining.

Inventories at manufacturers of durable goods, those items intended to last three or more years, slipped 0.1 percent to $246.7 billion, while inventories for makers of non-durable goods increased 0.4 percent to $500 million.

The ratio of inventories to shipments was 1.52, down from 1.55 in September.

''The fact that the inventory-to-sales ratio is still in good shape is a positive sign'' said Robert Dieli, an economist at Northern Trust Co. in Chicago.

''If we keep the inventory ratio on even keel that means we will avoid the standard business contraction problem of inventory build ups.''

Unfilled orders were up 0.6 percent - or $3.2 billion - to $522.5 billion. Excluding aircraft and parts orders, there was a 0.5 percent decline in October.

Manufacturers' inventories increased 0.1 percent - or $300 million - to $377.3 billion. Although small, the rise marked the fourth consecutive increase, the government said.

New orders for durable goods increased 3.9 percent - or $4.8 billion - to $129.8 billion, revised upward from the previously reported 3.6 percent gain.

Much of this gain came from a 14.8 percent - or $4.9 billion - rise in orders from the aircraft and motor vehicle industries.

Cynthia Latta, an economist at DRI/McGraw Hill, in Lexington, Mass., said the orders report offers little in the way of positive news.

''The aircraft will be delivered in 1993 and 1994,'' she said. ''That says this isn't a great number overall.''

''What we're getting is confirmation that things are still weak despite the increases,'' she said. ''Everything else we know about the economy tells us (October) was a down month.''

The Labor Department, meanwhile, reported a revised 0.2 percent increase in productivity during the third quarter. The figure was revised downward from a previously estimated increase of 1.6 percent for the quarter, the government said.

The department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said that in the overall business sector, productivity rose a revised 0.4 percent, while gaining 0.2 percent in the non-farm business sector, 5.1 percent in manufacturing, 7.4 percent in durable goods manufacturing and 1.6 percent in non-durable goods manufacturing.

Economists tended to discount the productivity numbers.

''Productivity in this kinds of environment is not a very reliable statistic '' Dieli said. ''Around (economic) peaks or troughs, the statistic is not entirely trustworthy.''

Productivity rose more slowly in the business and non-farm business sectors during the quarter. In manufacturing, unit labor costs fell, reflecting in part faster productivity growth in the third quarter than in the previous period, the government said.

Among non-financial corporations, productivity declined at an annual rate of 1 percent in the third quarter and output declined 0.8 percent. Despite the reduced output, the hours worked at non-financial corporations increased 0.2 percent.

CHICAGO (DEC. 5) UPI - The New York Mets, seeking speed on the bases and an outfielder to help replace Darryl Strawberry, Wednesday signed free agent Vince Coleman to a 4-year contract worth $11.95 million.

''Vince is the premier leadoff man we have been looking for,'' New York Manager Bud Harrelson said. ''Vince Coleman is going to love New York and the Mets' fans are going to love the way Vince Coleman plays the game of baseball.''

Coleman, who has led the National League in stolen bases the last six years, had 57 straight streals against the Mets. In 1990, the 29-year- old switch-hitter batted .292 with 18 doubles, nine triples, six homers, 39 RBI and 77 stolen bases.

Coleman will help the void left by the departure of Strawberry, who last month signed a 5-year, $20.3 million contract with the Dodgers. Coleman, regarded as a marginal outfielder, likley will play left field, with Kevin McReynolds shifting to center, or possibly put on the trading block.

However, Coleman struck out more than twice as many times as he walked (88 to 35), hardly ideal statsitics for a leadoff hitter.

In his first season with St. Louis in 1985, Coleman stole 110 bases and followed with 107 and 109 the next two seasons. He became the first player to put together three straight seasons of 100-plus steals.

Coleman tied Maury Wills as the only player to lead the NL in steals six straight seasons.

NEW YORK (DEC. 5) UPI - A judge Wednesday set bail at $300,000 for the accused assassin of fiery Rabbi Meir Kahane, touching off a storm of protest by Jews who leapt to their feet screaming, ''God will punish you!'' and ''Filthy murderer!''

Enraged by the outburst, Justice Alvin Schlesinger ejected a shouting woman from the courtroom, which was ringed by court officers.

Moments later, about 40 supporters of the accused killer, El Sayyid Nosair, 35 burst from the room, smiling and hugging one another and shouting in deafening unison, ''God is God! God is Great!''

Kahane, a militant Zionist and leader of Israel's Kach Party, was shot and killed Nov. 5 while attending a Zionist organization meeting in a midtown Manhattan hotel.

In the 30-minute proceeding in state Supreme Court in Manhattan, Nosair, an Egyptian immigrant, was arraigned on charges of second-degree murder, first-degree attempted murder of a federal police officer, second-degree attempted murder, first-degree coercion, first-degree reckless endangerment, two counts of second-degree assault and three counts of criminal possession of a weapon.

''Not guilty,'' responded Nosair, wearing a crocheted black and white skull cap decorated with Arabic writing.

Schlesinger set bail at $300,000. He ordered Nosair, who lives in Cliffside Park, N.J. and was being held on Rikers Island, to return to court March 4.

The bail brought angry shouts from Kahane followers, many wearing yamulkahs and sweatshirts with a fist bursting through the Star of David - the symbol of the Jewish Defense League that Kahane founded.

About four dozen supporters of Nosair, many with their heads wrapped in fringed scarves so that only their eyes were exposed, burst from the courtroom cheering.

Sixteen witnesses have identified Nosair as the man who walked up to Kahane, 58, during a Zionism lecture at the Marriot East Side Hotel and shot him in the head, according to court documents.

The gunman then shot in the leg a 73-year-old man who tried to prevent him from fleeing, ran out of the hotel and commandeered a cab at gunpoint. A block away, he jumped out of the cab and fired shots at Carlos Acosta, a uniformed officer of the United States Postal Service. Acosta returned fire, striking Nosair in the chin and capturing him.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 5) UPI - Israeli officials, in advance of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's visit to Washington, said Wednesday the government sought talks to end the Arab-Israeli conflict but repeated their opposition to linking the peace process and the Gulf crisis.

The theme has recurred over and over in remarks from the prime minister's office to the Foreign Ministry in recent days as Shamir prepared for his meeting next week with President Bush and other top U. S. officials.

In May 1989, Shamir unveiled in the United States a peace plan under the Likud-Labor coalition government.

This is the Israeli prime minister's first meeting with Bush since the Likud-Labor coalition fell apart and Shamir created a Likud-led government. In recent months, Israeli analysts have characterized the U. S.-Israeli relations as icy and at one of the lowest levels.

In addition to expected discussions on the Persian Gulf crisis and the peace process, Shamir likely will raise the issue of immigration to Israel and the absorption of newcomers in an effort to seek more U.S. help. Shamir leaves Israel Thursday, with a stop in London before he continues to the United States.

''Whether there is a (gulf) crisis, or there is not, Israel is always ready to renew the process for the start of negotiations in order to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict in accordance with our peace initiative from May 1989,'' said Yossi Ben-Aharon, director general of Shamir's office.

The Israeli plan called for elections in the occupied territories for Palestinians to elect representatives to talks with the government. The plan has bogged down primarily over whether non-residents of the territories or residents of East Jerusalem could be included in a Palestinian delegation.

On the issue of Iraq, Ben-Aharon and Foreign Minister David Levy reiterated the Israeli government's stand throughout the crisis that Israel would maintain a ''low profile.'' Levy also said Israel had been promised there would be no linkage between the gulf crisis and the Palestinian issue.

The Israeli officials also repeated their warnings toward Iraq that Israel would defend itself if necessary. Before the gulf crisis, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein threatened to wipe out half of Israel with chemical weapons if Israel attacked any Arab nations.

''If someone thinks that by some sort of trick in the name of peace, he (Saddam) will be able to continue to threaten with the purpose of surprising

Israel, he will find Israel forever ready in its power to undermine his security and to cause pain until he will be sorry and regret his actions,'' Levy said.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 5) UPI - Three Israelis were wounded Wednesday when shots were fired at an Israeli civilian bus traveling in the Israeli-occupied West Bank, Israeli military and Palestinian sources said.

The incident occurred about 6:30 p.m. less than 10 miles north of Jerusalem close to the Jalazoon refugee camp and the Palestinian village of Ein Sinya, the sources said. The army declared the area a closed military zone.

The shooting came less than four days before the third anniversary of the Palestinian uprising and in the wake of leaflets calling on Palestinians to fight the Israeli occupation by ''all means.''

The term has been interpreted as condoning the use of guns and other weapons, which Palestinians have generally refrained from using during much of the uprising.

In recent weeks within Israel, however, there have been stabbing attacks by Arabs against Israelis. Four Israelis have been killed.

In the Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip Wednesday, a paramilitary Border Guard was shot in the head and seriously wounded when his unit clashed with Palestinian demonstrators, military sources said. Authorities launched an investigation to determine the source of the shots that wounded the guard, the sources said.

One Palestinian was seriously wounded, the sources said.

Also Wednesday in the West Bank village of Ramallah, at least eight Palestinians were shot and wounded during confrontations with Israeli soldiers Palestinian sources said. The military imposed a curfew on the town's center after the violence.

As part of the military's preparations to discourage violence on Sunday's third anniversary of the Palestinian uprising, the army plans to reinforce its presence on main roads and in sensitive areas, Army Radio reported.

PHILADELPHIA (DEC. 5) UPI - A tentative contract agreement was reached early Wednesday in a five-day-old dockworkers strike that had idled operations at three Delaware River ports and diverted several shiploads of imported fruit to other locations.

Separately, cargo clerks ended a two-day strike against the Port of Baltimore, returning to work after ratifying a new contract.

The four-year agreement between eight longshoremens unions and the Philadelphia Marine Trade Association, an employers group, was announced at about 6 a.m. Wednesday after an all-night bargaining session.

Lucien Blackwell, president of Local 1332 of the International Longshoremen's Association, praised the new contract.

''The contract is a good one,'' said Blackwell. ''We're going to go back to work now.''

Blackwell said members of his union would return to work Wednesday morning, with other unions sending their employees back to the docks throughout the day.

The breakthrough in the negotiations came when management agreed to guarantee the security of union pension and welfare funds.

William Harrison, president of the Philadelphia Maritime Exchange, a trade group of 200 port-related businesses, said he was relieved that ''things are getting back to normal'' because the strike could have been a long one.

''From the tone of the issue, as we heard it ... it sounded like a harsh situation and it could have conceivably, therefore, been a long one. I think both parties are pleased that they were able to come to an agreement,'' Harrison said.

Some 2,500 union members walked off the job at midnight Friday at Delaware River ports in Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., and southern New Jersey.

The strike forced six cargo-laden ships to unload at other ports, while at least five others were waiting at anchorage for further instructions.

Other ships, laden mostly with imported fruit, were turned away by the strike and went on to New Bedford, Mass., Bridgeport, Conn., and Alexandria, Va.

The dockworkers' 14-month contract expired at midnight Friday and union leaders rejected an offer made by management. Negotiations were centered on a new three-year, 10-month pact. The major stumbling blocks included work rules and the size of employer contributions to welfare and benefit funds.

In Baltimore, 430 clerks who walked off the job Monday have signed a new contract and returned to work Wednesday, - although the settlement was assailed by the chief of the Maryland Port Administration.

The clerks, members of Local 953 of the longshoremen's union, agreed to the new contract Tuesday.

But the settlement prompted criticism from MPA Director Brendan O'Malley, who said the pact could threaten Baltimore's ability to compete with other Middle Atlantic ports. O'Malley said the contract grants too many new jobs to the clerks, who handle the paperwork that goes along with the loading and unloading of cargo.

The clerks walked out Monday after failing to reach agreement with management over pensions, job security and health benefits issues.

''We are not happy about the result here because of our apprehension the settlement may affect our competitiveness,'' he said.

''I thought they could have done better,'' O'Malley said of the Steamship Trade Association of Baltimore Inc., which represents waterfront employers.

Few details of the new 46-month pact hammered out by the STA and Local 953 chief Richard Hughes were released.

But O'Malley said the contract adds ''a significant number'' of jobs.

Maurice Byan, the chief negotiator for management, disagreed with O'Malley's opinion, saying, ''I don't see it that way.''

The settlement involved the jurisdictional issue involving computers, Byan said.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (DEC. 5) UPI - The government Wednesday began analyzing an unprecedented joint proposal made by business and union leaders to modify the economic plan adopted last March by President Fernando Collor de Mello.

But Brazil's secretary of economic policy, Antonio Kandir, expressed doubts the government would accept the business-labor proposal, which seeks to keep Brazil's recession from deepening.

''The government doesn't consider it timely to discuss any kind of change that would alter the economic policy,'' Kandir said, adding ''there is no historical precedent that has obtained (economic) stabilization where there was not absolute control of public finance.''

Government sources said a team led by economic minister Zelia Cardoso de Mello began meeting Wednesday to study the proposal. The meetings were expected to continue through the weekend.

Representatives of business and labor organizations presented their proposal, on Tuesday in Brasilia during negotiations for a ''Social Pact.'' They asked the government to respond to the plan by Dec. 10, and Cardoso de Mello agreed.

The proposal, known as ''An attempt for national stabilization,'' includes a reduction in taxes and bank interest rates; readjustments in prices, utility rates, and salaries; a one-time December bonus for low- wage workers; and gradual salary adjustments to recover lost purchasing power.

''I think the proposal surprised the government,'' said Arthur Joao Donato, president of the Industrial Federation of Rio de Janeiro.

''The government, like much of the public, didn't believe it was possible for managers and workers to unite, to forget a little about their own interests, and to sign an agreement with mutual concessions to take care of Brazil's interests,'' Donato said Wednesday at a news conference.

''I can't accept (the government's) policy at the expense of blood and sweat, and which is destroying the country,'' said Luiz Antonio de Medeiros, president of the Central Union Force.

It is believed to be the first time that Brazilian business and union leaders have been able to reach an agreement of this type, and financial analysts say the agreement reflects the effects of Brazil's recession on both sectors.

All economic indicators during the first nine months of 1990 were negative, and at least 500,000 people lost their jobs during the period, according to government statistics.

Since early October more than 80 large and medium-sized businesses have declared bankruptcy or sought receivership due to sharp reductions in sales and high bank interest rates, which currently range between 25 percent and 30 percent a month.

Government statistics show the economy is on the way to its worst performance in at least a decade, predicting a shrinkage of 3.8 percent by the end of 1990 compared to 3.3 percent growth for 1989.

Inflation continues to plague Brazil. It reached 16.64 percent in November, the highest rate since the March adoption of Brazil's most drastic economic plan in history.

So far this year, the consumer price index has climbed 1,501 percent, and it rose 2,359.45 percent between December 1989 and November 1990.

Collor adopted the economic plan to contain inflation, which reached 82 percent in March. Its measures included increases in interest rates, the freezing of $80 billion in savings accounts, privatization of 180 government-owned businesses and the reduction of government spending.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 5) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter says he believes Iraq's Saddam Hussein thought ''the world would accept the invasion of Kuwait and maybe condemn him but not take any action.''

He also said that there is a ''growing dissatisfaction'' on the part of ''just average Arab citizens'' the profits extracted by the emirs and kings from oil in their lands ''have been deposited in the West and the Arab people have not benefitted.''

''This accounts for an enmormous $900 billion. So there is dissatisfaction on which Saddam is capitalizing,'' he added.

Carter discusses the failures and triumphs of his presidency, current events, his treatment at the hands of Ronald Reagan, his campaign to promote human rights and his view of the times in an interview by Jack Nelson, Washington bureau chief of the Los Angeles Times, to be aired by Public Television Stations.

Carter said that Saddam had tried to get the Kuwaitis to forgive the loans they made to him during the ''horrendously costly war with Iran'' and was resentful that in that period Kuwait was pumping about a million barrels of oil a day than allowed under the OPEC oil cartel agreement.

He said that Saddam's attempts to negotiate with the Kuwaitis, the Saudis and the Arab League were fruitless. ''They didn't give him practically anything,'' said Carter. ''He even warned the world he was going to go in. Nobody believed him.

''I think he believed at the time that the world would accept his invasion of Kuwait and maybe condemn him but not take any action.''

The 39th president observed that the United States has the reputation of being ''a warmonger, with the possible exception of Saddam Hussein.''

''We're the ones who sent troops to Lebanon,'' he said. ''We're the ones who bombed Tripoli. We're the ones that invaded Grenada. We're the ones that invaded Panama. We're the ones that orchestrated the Contra war to overthrow the Sandinistas.

''No other country has done that,'' he added, ''and we are very proud of ourselves a nation whose moral standards are the highest.''

On other issues, he said he:

-Was obsessed with the American hostages held in Iran during his presidency and ''felt deeply that I should do everything possible to get those hostages home and protect their lives.'' He said that Reagan and President Bush followed a different philosophy: ''Let's ignore the hostages as much as possible; not escalate their value in the minds of those who are holding them.''

-Is ''aggrieved with the expansion of Israel's borders into the West Bank and Gaza results in now 23, almost 24 years of lack of freedom by the Palestinians whose families have been there since the time of Christ.''

-Had one major failure in his poltiical life: ''It's a total incapacity to deal with the American press, particularly the White House press, when I was in office.'' He said there have been studies showing ''I was treated more negatively by the press than any other president in this century.''

-Was blocked by U.S. ambassadors serving under Reagan when he went to Turkey and Costa Rica to promote human rights and religious freedom.

NEW YORK (DEC. 5) UPI - Marathon Oil Co. has struck oil in Syria in an accidental discovery that could have significant economic potential for the cash-strapped Middle East nation, industry sources said Wednesday.

Marathon, the Findlay Ohio subsidiary of USX Corp., recently had a well come in at 2,800 barrels of crude oil daily while drilling for natural gas, the sources said. The company declined immediate comment.

The discovery could have export significance as a source of foreign hard curreny for Syria, which until two years ago had to import crude for its refineries.

''Syria's got good geology (for oil). There's a lot of good potential in Syria

'' one source said.

In a related development, Occidental Petroleum Corp. of Los Angeles announced a production-sharing agreement with Syria's Syrian Petroleum Co. in which Occidental will drill four exploratory wells over three years.

The sources, who commented on condition of remaining unidentified, said Marathon was reevaluating its natural-gas exploration program in light of its find of crude oil.

It's difficult to determine how much oil is in the field with the results of only one test well, but ''anytime you get something that flows nearly 3,000 barrels a day you can talk about its being significant,'' one source said.

If it's determined enough oil is in the field for commercial production, Marathon may want to delay natural gas output in order to maintain the underground pressure needed for the pumping of crude, the sources said.

The crude in the test well was high quality light crude comparable to Libyan light crude, they said.

The State Department said there are currently 12 foreign oil companies exploring for oil and natural gas in Syria, six of which are American. In addition to Marathon, they include Shell Oil and France's ELF Aquitaine.

A milestone was reached in 1988 when output from Shell's Deir ez-Zor field reached 100,000 barrels a day because that meant Syria no longer needed to import light crude for its refineries, the department said.

(DEC. 5) UPI - An UNidentified Iraqi official is being quoted as saying that President Saddam is feeling the pressure of the countries aligned against him. The official says it means that ''all issues are on the table'' during the meeting later this month between Saddam and U-S Secretary of State Baker. But in testimonty before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee today, Baker made it clear he has NO plans to negotiate with Saddam. Baker says he will tell Saddam to pull his troops from Kuwait or ''risk disaster.''

Armed U-S soldiers, called in at the request of the Panamanian government, have put down a brief takeover of Panama's police headquarters. Local reports indicate the troops captured a group of Panamanan police officers led by a former police chief as they tried to leave the building near the presidential palace. The rebel officers were demanding a number of reforms for Panama's police force, which was rebuilt with former members of General Manuel Noriega's army.

Defense Secretary Cheney, in Poland for meetings with top leaders, has praised the Solidarity movement for helping to lower the danger of confrontation between east and west. His visit is the first by a U-S defense secretary to Poland. It comes prior to a NATO meeting in Belgium. Cheney talked of the Mideast crisis, calling it the most important problem now facing the United States. And he refused to confirm reports that Washington may be ready to make an arms deal with Poland, the first ever with a Warsaw Pact country.

The Federal Reserve's latest periodic snapshot of the U-S economy is showing an overall ''weaker pattern.'' The Fed says it has documented declines in consumer confidence, retail sales and in demands for business loans. But it also noted that the soft domestic economy is offset in part by strong export orders. And it found another bright spot was found in agriculture, which has been boosted by strong crop yields and high livestock prices.

For a few frightening moments today, rescue teams at Detroit Metropolitan Airport feared they had a second disaster on their hands. Fire broke out on the wing of a Northwest Airlines jet with 69 people aboard... but a ground worker grabbed an extinguisher and put out the fire quickly. NO one was hurt. Two days ago, two Northwest planes collided on a Detroit runway, killing eight people.

BOSTON (DEC. 5) UPI - A deadly epidemic apparently has emerged of teenagers sniffing butane, propane and other substances to get high, health care workers reported Wednesday.

The practice has claimed the lives of at least 20 youngsters in the Cincinnati area alone, including two earlier this year involving boys ages 11 and 15, said Earl Siegel of Children's Hospital Medical Center in Cincinnati.

Research ''leads us to believe that abuse of these readily available inhalants has reached epidemic proportions, indicating an urgent need for preventive efforts directed at teenagers and their parents,'' Siegel and colleague Dr. Suman Wason said in a letter to The New England Journal of Medicine.

The dimensions of the problem nationwide are not known because no central reporting system exists to document cases of deaths or injury from inhalant abuse, he said. But Siegel said his experience in Cincinnati indicates that known deaths across the country ''are just the very tip of the iceberg.''

Charles Sharp of the National Institute of Drug Abuse said that in Great Britain, where researchers have tried to systematically track sudden sniffing deaths ''they record well over 100 a year.

''There's no way we've been able to track it, although we know of a number of deaths,'' he said, adding the scope of the practice appears to vary by region. ''In some regions, no one's heard of it and in others, they've run into big problems. But certainly, communities need to be alerted to the situation,'' he said.

Inhaling the fuels butane and propane, as well as gasoline, certain solvents and other substances, can cause a phenomenon called ''sudden sniffing death,'' in which the heart starts beating with wild irregularity, causing death within minutes, Siegel said.

Among a long list of substances teenagers and pre-teens have been inhaling to get high is typewriter correction fluid containing the solvents trichloroethane and trichloroethylene.

Gillette Co. of Boston, which makes one brand of the product, became so concerned about the practice it added mustard oil to the fluid as a deterrent.

''We put in the mustard oil to create a more disagreeable smell,'' said Gillette spokeswoman Joan Fitzgerald. But while this might turn away a first-time user, ''for a chronic abuser you really have to educate them about what a very, very dangerous activity this is.''

Gillette participated in the creation of the Washington-based Solvent Abuse Foundation for Education - or SAFE - which has as its goal education of parents and children about the hazards of solvent sniffing, Fitzgerald said.

Susan Reading, who leads the group Parents for Education on Inhalant Abuse in Cincinnati, said talking with schoolchildren in that city and its suburbs indicates inhalation of solvents and fuel is widespread and extends to children as young as the third-grade level.

''I go to schools and talk to kids and they say they see it in every school,'' she said. ''The kids know these inhalants are cheap and easily available and they say it's the best high they've ever had.

''One boy told me he was inhaling between eight and 10 cans of butane every day. Another boy told me that he could go out to my car and just by sniffing, tell how much octane the gasoline had. That's how much gasoline sniffing he'd done,'' Reading said.

In March of this year, an 11-year-old boy collapsed in a Cincinnati movie theater after apparently inhaling butane, Siegel said. A container of butane cigarette-lighter fuel was found at the scene along with a plastic bag and several bottles of typewriter correction fluid, he said.

The boy was pronounced dead shortly after he arrived at a nearby hospital. Laboratory tests detected butane in his blood and lung tissue.

CHICAGO (DEC. 5) UPI - Widespread selling tied to profit-taking and liquidation pressured the grain market Wednesday.

Grain and soybean futures were mostly lower at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade in relatively quiet activity.

The lack of export credit guarantees to the Soviet Union continued to pressure the entire floor. Senator Robert Dole said he was hopeful President Bush would announce the credits before the end of the week. Late in the day, the Agriculture Department said the matter was still under review.

Liquidation and profit-taking in soybeans was linked to indications of an increase in farmer selling and heavy deliveries of December soybean meal.

Corn futures were mostly lower and were at or near session lows at the final bell. Light buying interest and the lack of export business weighed on corn values.

Trading in wheat was choppy and closing prices were lower. A midmorning rally fizzled at the day's highs, although losses were limited by news that a number of countries were in the market for wheat.

At the close, corn was off 1 1/4 to up 1/4, soybeans down 2 1/2 to 9 1/2, wheat unchanged to down 1 3/4 and oats off 1 1/2 to 2 1/4.

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (DEC. 5) UPI - In an effort to cut costs and operate a balanced budget next year, the Vancouver Stock Exchange has cut its staff by 15 percent, a spokesman said Wednesday.

Twenty-five employees were let go immediately after Tuesday's staff meeting held to explain the cuts, VSE spokesman Dave Laundy said. Another 23 positions have been eliminated through attrition over the past several months.

Laundy said staff, program and internal department cost cutting measures announced Tuesday are the result of falling revenues and low market activity at Canada's venture exchange.

The exchange's staff, which began the current fiscal year in April at 343, now numbers 295. No additional cuts are expected unless market conditions further worsen, Laundy said.

The layoffs are expected to help limit losses at the VSE to $850,000 in 1989-1990 and reduce costs in 1991-1992 by another $850,000, Laundy said. He added that the changes will allow the VSE to enter next year with revenues and expenses balanced.

Laundy said costs in the current fiscal year have been limited to a 4.06 percent rise.

Revenues at the exchange - garnered from listing, trading, clearing and settling and brokerage accounting fees - have fallen, Laundy said, due to a drop in market activity.

Trading value at the VSE is now running at about $15 million a day, Laundy said, half of level it was at earlier this year. The VSE had hit record trading levels earlier this year as a result of the battle for control over the Eskay Creek gold property in British Columbia.

From April 1 to Oct. 31, the VSE reported 3.6 billion shares traded with a total value of $3.15 billion. Trading volume in October was down 7 percent from September and off 18 percent from a year earlier.

Of the 2,356 issues on the VSE at the end of October, 598 posted new lows and only 48 posted new highs.

Trading volume at the VSE represents 31 percent of trading on all Canadian exchanges but only 4 percent of the total value.

The VSE, which was the target of a critical news report by ABC's PrimeTime Live show, will hold a meeting with its 46 member brokerage firms to deal with the exchange's negative image.

VSE Chairman Marty Reynolds called next week's meeting to talk about the exchange's ''persistent reputation problems'', Laundy said.

''One thing that we suffer from is that every problem in the market place is blamed on the VSE,'' Laundy said.

BUENOS AIRES (DEC. 5) UPI - President Bush gave Argentine President Carlos Menem unequivocal support Wednesday in his recent showdown with military rebels, and in return received solid backing from the Argentine leader for his ''no concessions'' stand against Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

In a speech to a joint session of Argentina's Congress, Bush said that some persons speculated last Monday, when President Menem battled a military uprising, that he may ''cancel my trip to Argentina.''

''On the contrary, it (the rebellion) only strengthened my resolve to stand shoulder to shoulder with President Menem and Argentine democracy," Bush said.

Menem crushed the 18-hour rebellion, led by fanatical nationalist officers who temporarily captured the downtown army headquarters and other strategic installations, just two days before Bush's arrival.

Bush's appearance before Congress was slighly disrupted at the onset by a brawl when a left-wing congressman, Luis Zamora, nine times loudly asked Vice President Eduardo Duhalde, the presiding officer over the joint session, for permission to take the floor and give his own speech, which was denied.

Two other congressmen then forcibly ousted the yelling Zamora from the floor. Witnesses said Zamora and congressman Alberto Albamonte, of a conservative party, then fought with their fists outside the chamber.

Bush, smiling and apparently unperturbed by the incident, told congressmen in improvised remarks at the beginning of his speech, ''Don't worry. I feel at home here.''

''Every once in a while you hear an echo from the decling past of Marxism, and if listening to that past is the price we pay for democracy, let's pay that price,'' Bush said.

"The day of the dictator is over,'' Bush said, describing Argentina as a leader in the return to democracy in several Latin American nations in the 1980s.

Argentina was under military rule from 1976 to 1983, when elected President Raul Alfonsin took office. Menem succeeded Alfonsin on July 8 of last year.

Bush is visiting Argentina and four other South American countries to celebrate the return of democracy to the region and tout his ideas on the creation of a Western Hemisphere free trade zone.

In a news conference before his speech to Congress, Bush said he was ''not optimistic'' about chances of achieving a voluntary withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

''I have no feeling whatsoever that Saddam Hussein will do now what he has not done five months ago,'' Bush said in answer to a question as to whether he felt Iraq was ''softening'' its position and seeking a face-saving compromise that will enable it to retreat from Kuwait.

Appearing jointly with Argentina's President Carlos Menem at a news conference in the government palace, Bush said that after meeting with his Argentine counterpart he was ''more convinced than ever'' that the United States will insist on full compliance of U.N. resolutions, without concessions.

''When there is naked aggression, it is not a question of saving face for the aggressor,'' Bush said.

''I am not optimistic,'' he said.

President Menem was ''in full agreement'' with him on this stand, and the Argentine leader, who only two days ago defeated a military rebellion by using artillery and air strikes against the rebels, standing by Bush, told reporters he is ''in full agreement to what was expressed by the president of the United States.''

Asked what his position would be if Iraq Presidient Saddam Hussein offers to leave Kuwait in exchange for an Iraqi oil field, Bush answered crisply, ''The answer is no, thank you very much.''

As he has done in the past, Bush accused Iraq of ''rape and pillage'' in invading Kuwait and stated repeatedly, "They must withdraw without conditions."

Menem reminded reporters at the news conference that Argentina was the only Latin American nation to send warships to help enforce the U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

After the news conference, thousands of persons lined Avenida de Mayo, the avenue that connects the presidential palace to the Capitol a mile away, to cheer Menem and Bush in a motorcade led by 300 blue-uniformed soldiers on horseback.

The spectators yelled ''Argentina! Argentina!'' and threw confetti.

Banners in Spanish and English said ''welcome President Bush,'' who is the first U.S. head of state to visit Argentina since President Eisenhower's visit to President Arturo Frondizi in 1960.

DETROIT (DEC. 5) UPI - A Washington consumer group Wednesday urged Chrysler Corp. to recall about 500,000 1989- and early 1990-model vehicles equipped with Ultradrive transmissions, saying the units are plagued with potentially dangerous defects.

In a six-page letter to Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca, Clarence Ditlow, executive director of the Center for Auto Safety (CAS), also urged Chrysler to warrant Ultradrive transmissions for life and waive all owner-paid deductible fees beyond the first year or 12,000 miles.

Through November, the CAS said it and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration had 165 owner complaints on file, and that NHTSA has received more transmission complaints concerning Chrysler vehicles than any other manufacturer.

Ultradrive, Chrysler's first four-speed automatic electronic transmission, was introduced in late 1988 for its front-drive cars, where they are more precisely known as tranaxles.

Chrysler has billed them as "the world's most advanced transmission." Since then, however, Chrysler has had to repair or replace early units troubled by internal leaks.

It also ordered a "customer satisfaction" recall last winter to about 50,000 owners in cold weather regions because of problems with the transaxle fluid thickening at very low temperatures.

"Ultradrive's dismal showing in its first two years on the road earns it the dubious distinction of the world's most defective transmission," the CAS told Iacocca.

Chrysler, however, called Ditlow's charges "grossly exaggerated," adding that "his allegations regarding safety hazards in connection with this transmission are totally irresponsible."

Although the saftey group said there have been no injuries related to Ultradrive failures, it said "it is only a matter of time before an Ultradrive failure causes a serious, perhaps lethal, accident."

The safety group said most owner complaints have to do with the transaxle locking in second gear, often at random and without warning. But Chris Theodore, executive engineer - Powertrain Engineering for Chrysler, said Ultradrive transaxles are programmed to shift into second gear if it detects a potential problem with the unit so more damage is not done.

Ditlow also said many owners have experienced multiple transaxle failures and lengthy repair times. "The letters consumers have written point to an alarming pattern of repeated Ultradrive failures," he said, noting that "most consumers have experienced transmission failure at exceptionally low mileage, often within the first few months of ownership.

"Chrysler has already spent over $250 million on these fixes, and as long as the company continues to repair defective Ultradrives on a case-by-case basis only, the expense will continue to grow in the years to come," Ditlow wrote. Chrysler has issued its dealers over a dozen Technical Service Bulletins dealing with the diagnose and repair of failed Ultradrive units.

The CAS said some of those builletins point to the transaxle's defective design, while Theodore said many of those bulletins are tips or updates focused on improving customer satisfation.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 5) UPI - Iraq has formally accepted a proposal by President Bush to hold top-level talks as an opportunity to end the Persian Gulf crisis without armed conflict, the State Department said Wednesday.

Joseph Wilson, U.S. acting ambassador in Baghdad, was told that Iraq had accepted the proposal for meetings between Bush and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Washington and Secretary of States James Baker and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Baghdad, the State Department said.

Under the proposal unveiled on Nov. 30, Aziz and Bush would meet sometime after Dec. 15 while Baker and Saddam would talk sometime before Jan. 15, the U.N.-imposed deadline for Iraqi troops to withdraw from Kuwait.

The State Department said that discussions between the two countries are continuing on the dates and arrangements for the meetings, which will not involve representatives from any other nations.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday, Baker refused to disclose what he will say to Saddam, but he made it clear that he will not negotiate or ''walk back from the U.N. Security Council resolutions.''

Baker said he will insist that Iraq observe the U.N. resolutions, which demand the complete and unconditional withdrawl of Iraqi troops, the release of all foreign hostages and the restoration of the exiled Kuwaiti government.

In Buenos Aires, Bush said he was ''not optimistic'' about chances for a withdrawal of occupation forces from the oil kingdom.

''I have no feeling whatsoever that Saddam Hussein will do now what he has not done five months ago,'' Bush said in answer to a question as to whether he felt Iraq was ''softening'' its position and seeking a face-saving compromise that will enable it to retreat from Kuwait.

Iraq has indirectly sought to link its exit from Kuwait to the withdrawl of Israel from the West Bank and Gaza Strip, a formula rejected by the White House.

Bush said on Wednesday that when he meets with Aziz, ''I want to make clear to him the best thing is to go through with the U.N. resolutions.''

The president has indicated that there would be no negotiated settlement that shortchanges demands for total withdrawl, saying he hopes Saddam ''gets the message'' about last week's U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force to bounce Iraq from Kuwait if troops are not out by the mid-January deadline.

Bush recently ordered 200,000 additional American troops to the gulf to bolster the U.S.-led multinational force assembled in the region against Iraq.

MOSCOW (DEC. 5) UPI - President Mikhail Gorbachev ordered a vigorous campaign Wednesday against pornography, erotic videos and smut to ''safeguard public morals.''

Gorbachev's latest presidential decree attacked the rise in erotica now increasingly available on late-night television and in publications no longer subject to censorship.

''Taking into consideration the anxiety of the Soviet people about the spread of different kinds of pornography, pseudo-medical literature, erotic videos and the like ... urgent measures should be worked out to safeguard public morals,'' the decree said.

On Tuesday, Gorbachev expressed his horror at the Supreme Soviet on what was now on television.

''A couple of days ago, I saw on television a certain professor citing Chinese art to illustrate interesting sexual positions,'' Gorbachev said. ''This came as a great shock to our public.

''People are asking does the government have any power at all,'' he said.

Video parlors have mushroomed in the more permissive atmosphere of Gorbachev's perestroika period. Sex newspapers can be openly purchased near Moscow's Pushkin Square and girlie calendars are peddled at subway station entrances.

Gorbachev's anti-smut measure set up a commission headed by Culture Minister Nikolai Gubenko to study the experience of other nations in battling the porno-business.

While a brisk trade in all videos goes on in Moscow and other capitals, porno films are said to bring some of the highest prices.

In what appears a headlong rush to catch up with the rest of the world after decades of official prudery, the Soviet Union is undergoing a belated sexual revolution.

Only last year, the famous Marilyn Monroe calendar was published in a movie magazine, and other publications have written profiles of her great rival of the 1950s, Kim Novak.

At Moscow's rail stations, books about birth control and sexual manuals are snapped up by passengers waiting for trains despite the high prices charged by cooperatives selling the literature.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 5) UPI - Miami defensive tackle Russell Maryland, expected to be one of the top five NFL draft choices next spring, Wednesday was named the winner of the 45th Outland Trophy.

Maryland outdistanced Colorado offensive guard Joe Garten and Clemson offensive tackle Stacy Long in the Football Writers Association of America balloting for the nation's top college lineman.

The fifth-year 275-pound senior has been a mainstay of the Hurricanes' defense for four seasons. Miami, which plays Texas Jan. 1 in the Cotton Bowl, is 9-2 this season and 43-4 during Maryland's stay.

''This is something I haven't realized just yet,'' Maryland said after being presented the award at a ceremony at the Downtown Athletic Club. ''I'll sit back tonight and really think about it - and in the years to come.''

Garten, a 280-pounder, anchored a Colorado offensive line that blocked for star running back Eric Bienemy. The senior is the Buffaloes' first four-year starter and will play against Notre Dame in the New Year's Day Orange Bowl.

Long, also a senior, came back from arthroscopic knee surgery in September to lead a Clemson running attack that averaged 255 yards per game. The 275-pounder will conclude his career when Clemson plays Illinois in the Jan. 1 Hall of Fame Bowl.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 5) UPI - The government Wednesday dropped a ban on blood donations from Haitians and people from other areas where AIDS is common, but announced other measures to protect the U.S. blood supply from infectious diseases.

The Food and Drug Administration said it began notifiying blood donation centers that a new collection system ''will be implemented over the next few months to increase the safety of the nation's blood supply.''

The changes ''eliminate the need for excluding certain donor populations based solely on their geographical or national origins,'' the FDA said.

''The strengthened program will enhance, rather than replace, the current procedures used to safeguard the blood supply,'' Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan said.

''By shifting the focus of screening procedures to cover a broader range of risk factors, FDA will build upon the safety of the blood supply while providing all healthy and willing individuals the opportunity to donate blood '' he said.

An FDA advisory panel in April urged the agency to abandon a policy of barring people from Haiti and other specific geographic areas from donating blood. The ban had sparked protests by Haitians, who said the policy was discriminatory.

Instead, the advisory board urged the agency to take other steps to reduce the chances that someone infected with the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV, will donate blood.

The International Alliance for Haiti praised Wednesday's announcement, calling it ''welcome news to the Haitian community'' in a statement.

About 8 million people donate blood each year in the United States and about 4 million receive transfusions. Although all blood donors are tested for the AIDS virus and rejected if they test positively, health officials discourage anyone at risk for being infected with the virus from donating because a small percentage of people slip through the tests.

Dr. Gerald Sandler of the American Red Cross, which collects half of all blood donations, said the number of AIDS cases blamed on blood transfusions has dropped significantly and the new guidelines should continue that trend.

Under the new program, all blood donors will continue to be tested for the AIDS virus and other blood-borne infectious agents.

In addition to the current practice of giving donors a written explanation of factors that put them at high risk for being infected, the new guidelines call for each donor to be interviewed face-to-face.

''Donors should not be considered suitable unless information about these risks is available in the language appropriate to each donor and is constructed to be culturally sensitive to promote comprehension,'' the FDA said.

But the focus of these risk factors ''should be on behavior and not on stereotypes,'' the FDA said. For example, ''many men who have had male-to-male sexual experiences do not identify themselves as 'homosexual,' 'gay' or 'bisexual,''' the FDA said.

Potential donors should also be questioned about whether they have had syphilis or gonorrhea in the past 12 months, and those who have had such sexually transmitted diseases should not donate blood for at least a year after their diagnosis.

In addition, anyone who has received a blood transfusion or other blood product within the past year should not donate. Currently, such people are barred from donating for six months.

The new guidelines also bar anyone who has ''exchanged money or drugs for sex'' from donating for at least 12 months, up from the current guidelines of six months.

TEGUCIGALPA, HONDURAS (DEC. 5) UPI - The Honduran government will pass a decree to grant general amnesty to all political prisoners even though it has denied having any, a court offcial said Wednesday.

The amnesty decree will be made to ''promote the credibility of the Honduran government with respect to human rights,'' said Rigoberto Espinal Irias, a magistrate of the Supreme Court of Justice.

Espinal said the action - which some hope will be carried out before Christmas - would comply with recommendations for acquiring peace in Central America.

President Rafael Leonardo Callejas has repeatedly denied reports that Honduras has political prisoners.

Anibal Puerto, vice president of the Honduran Human Rights Committee, said a French citizen, a Salvadoran and seven Hondurans accused of subversion are considered political prisoners by her organization.

Puerto said the committee also has classified as political prisoners more than 20 farmers convicted of terrorism for settling land.

She said a number of Hondurans have fled to Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Mexico and Europe to escape political persecution.

''We are satisfied that the government has finally recognized that there are political prisoners in the country,'' Puerto said.

The committee hopes the National Congress will approve the decree before Christmas.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (DEC. 5) UPI - NASA released a new space shuttle launch schedule Wednesday calling for seven missions in 1991 and eight in 1992, including a daring satellite rescue mission by the new shuttle Endeavour.

Other highlights of the 1991 shuttle manifest include two declassified Department of Defense missions, launch of an atmospheric research satellite and the Gamma Ray Observatory, along with a Spacelab mission to study how weightlessness affects human physiology.

Overall, 58 shuttle missions or payloads are listed though 1996, the majority of which are devoted to space science and applications. Only three Department of Defense missions are listed, including the previously classified August 1991 launch of a Defense Support Program missile early-warning satellite.

NASA's new manifest does not list launch days, only the month or quarter currently planned for a given mission. Here is a schedule of 1991 shuttle missions with unofficial planning dates in parentheses:

-March 1991 (Feb. 26): Shuttle Discovery. Payload: A variety of Air Force experiments to learn more about detection of rocket exhaust plumes from space. Crew: Commander Michael Coats, co-pilot Blaine Hammond, Guion Bluford, Gregory Harbaugh, Richard Hieb, Donald McMonagle and Charles Lacy Veach. Mission duration: Eight days.

-April 1991 (March 27): Shuttle Atlantis. Payload: The Gamma Ray Observatory astronomy satellite. Crew: Commander Steven Nagel, co-pilot Kenneth Cameron, Jerome Apt, Linda Godwin and Jerry Ross. Flight duration: Five days.

-May 1991 (May 6): Shuttle Columbia. Payload: Spacelab life sciences mission. Crew: Commander Bryan O'Connor, co-pilot Sidney Gutierrez, James Bagian, Tamara Jernigan, Rhea Seddon, Drew Gaffney and civilian researcher Millie Hughes-Fulford. Flight duration: Nine days.

-July 1991 (June 24): Shuttle Discovery. Payload: A NASA Tracking and Data Relay communications satellite. Crew: Commander John Blaha, co-pilot Michael Baker, James Adamson, G. David Low and Shannon Lucid. Flight duration: Nine days.

-August 1991 (Aug. 2): Shuttle Atlantis. Payload: Defense Support Program early-warning satellite. Crew: Commander Frederick Gregory, co- pilot Terence Henricks, Story Musgrave, Mario Runco, James Voss and a sixth crew member yet to be named. Flight duration: 10 days.

-November 1991 (Oct. 17): Shuttle Discovery. Payload: Upper Atmosphere Research Satellite. Crew: Five, to be named later. Flight duration: Five days.

-December 1991 (Nov. 25): Shuttle Atlantis. Payload: A materials science Spacelab mission. Crew: Commander Ronald Grabe, co-pilot Stephen Oswald, Norman Thagard, Manley Carter, William Readdy and civilian researchers Roberta Bondar and Ulf Merbold of Germany. Flight duration: Seven days.

The 1992 flight schedule is highlighted by the maiden flight of the shuttle Endeavour, built to replace Challenger after the 1986 shuttle disaster.

Endeavour currently is scheduled to be delivered to the Kennedy Space Center from builder Rockwell International on May 7, 1991, for a maiden voyage in late April or early May 1992.

The goal of the flight is to rendezvous with an Intelsat communications satellite that was stranded in a useless orbit in March. During the first of three planned spacewalks, two of Endeavour's crew members plan to bolt a new rocket motor to the satellite to boost it up to its planned orbit.

NEW YORK (DEC. 5) UPI - The Federal Trade Commission said Wednesday that it cleared two major investors in R.H. Macy & Co. of antitrust concerns following their intention to increase equity stakes in the retailer.

Loews Corp. and Mutual Series Fund are contributing to a previously announced equity infusion of $100 million and needed FTC approval for investors intending to acquire at least 15 percent of a company's outstanding shares or stock or assets of at least $15 million. A spokeswoman for Macy's declined to put a value on the investors' contributions.

The remainder of the $100 million will be contributed by GE Capital and Taubman Investment Co., Macy's two biggest investors, or their affiliates.

Analysts said the announcement was a positive sign for Macy's, which has been the subject of recent speculation that it would go out of business.

A spokeswoman for Standard & Poor's Corp. said the move was a positive one but would not be sufficient at this stage to remove a CreditWatch rating with negative implications which the credit-rating agency placed on about $2.5 billion of Macy's subordinated debt in late November.

''This is a positive development for Macy's but not a decisive development as far as the (CreditWatch) rating is concerned,'' said Joanne Legomsky, for S&P's.

The FTC said Loews Corp. and Mutual Series Fund were granted early termination Dec. 4 of a waiting period required by the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act. The FTC said it frequently grants early termination of the waiting period.

The federal agency noted that the two parties were ''among Macy's largest shareholders who have committed to making additional equity invesments in the company.''

Kurt Barnard, publisher of Retail Marketing Report, an industry newsletter, said the cash infusion was ''a vote of confidence and a testimonial for Macy's ability to weather the storm.''

Barnard rejected as ''idle speculation'' talk that Macy's, which lost $66 million in the last quarter, may be going out of business.

He said the two principal investors, GE Capital Corp. and Taubman Investment Corp. with 24.6 percent and 14.8 percent of convertible preferred stock respectively ''have more to lose by letting Macy's go bankrupt than by keeping Macy's afloat.''

He added that Macy's vendors will continue to support Macy's as a vital outlet for their merchandise. ''The vendor community in the U.S. cannot afford to lose Macy's,'' Barnard said.

''Macy's just lost $66 million but it is paying its bills. It may be difficult for them to do it but they are.''

Standard & Poor's Corp. earlier said that it expected Macy's to continue to have a heavy debt service burden despite the $100 million from equity partners another $50 million from a rights offering, and a further $100 million from the planned sale of Macy Credit Corp.

S&P's also placed debt ratings of Macy Credit Corp. and R.H Macy Overseas Finance N.V. on CreditWatch, positive, as a result of their planned sale to General Electric Capital Corp.

When announcing the equity offering in November, Macy's said the offering was intended to purchase its subordinated debt in the open market.

PARIS (DEC. 5) UPI - Increased production from Saudi Arabia and Iran boosted world oil supplies in November to their highest level since May, the International Energy Agency said in a cautiously optimistic report released Wednesday.

Output from the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries cartel jumped from 22.3 million barrels a day in October to 22.9 million barrels a day in November, mostly because of increased output by Saudi Arabia and Iran, the agency said in its monthly report.

The extra output makes up in large part for reduced supplies because of the U.N. embargo of exports from Iraq and Kuwait after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

IEA monitors world oil output and demand for the 21 largest industrialized oil-consuming nations making up the Organization for Economic Development and Cooperation.

The agency said Saudi production exceeded 8 million barrels a day in November though tanker movements suggest a slightly lower export figure of 7.9 million barrels daily.

''Saudi Arabia's main Gulf export terminals at Ras Tanura and Juaymah are reported to be running close to full capacity,'' said the report.

Daily Iranian crude oil exports rose from 2.1 million barrels in October to 2.5 million barrels in November, implying an overall daily production level of slightly more than 3.3 million barrels, the report said.

The monthly oil report by the Paris-based agency also predicted that oil consumption of the OECD member nations will fall over the last quarter of 1990 and early 1991 compared with the same period a year ago.

''In the fourth quarter of 1990, OECD oil consumption is projected to decline by 0.8 million barrels daily, or 2 percent, from the fourth quarter of 1989 to 38.5 million barrels daily,'' it said.

The prediction was based on extrapolating the likely effects of increased oil prices and slowed economic growth in industrialized nations.

IEA members are scheduled to meet in Paris Monday. The report of adequate supplies means urgent measures such as drawing on national strategic stockpiles of oil will not have to be resorted to for the moment at least, oil industry sources said.

Members have met several times since the Iraqi invasion and each time rejected the use of the stockpiles, reasoning that commercial supplies were adequate to meet the crisis.

(DEC. 5) UPI - Secretary of State Baker says that when he meets the Iraqi president in Baghdad, it will be to tell Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait and NOT to negotiate with him. Baker told a Senate panel today that he will NOT link any Iraqi withdrawal to either the civil war in Lebanon or the Palestinian problem. Baker says Saddam did NOT invade Kuwait to help the Palestinians... and the question of their homeland will NOt be an issue.

Operation Desert Shield is into its fourth month, and soldiers deployed in the Saudi desert say they've gotten used to just about everything... except the lack of cold beer. Alcohol is forbidden by the Koran, Islam's holy book and is NOT allowed in conservative Saudi Arabia. So the troops are treated to NON-alcoholic beer. Sergeant Dan Moody of Glenville, Georgia, says it's a long way from real beer, ''but it gets by.''

Computer security has NOT kept step with major advances within the computer industry and the results leave the country at grave risk. Those are the conclusions drawn in a report issued by a committee of the National Research Council. It warns that NO existing organization, either public or private, is up to tackling the problem. The 16-member panel says that unless computer security is tightened, what it calls the nation's ''luck'' in avoiding a major disaster may soon run out.

In related news, a newspaper in Texas says thieves used computers to obtain Millions of dollars in free telephone service through Johnson Space Center. One computer crime expert calls it the biggest such theft in the nation. Telephone service was stolen by using a long-distance credit card number and by direct use of NASA's phone lines. The credit card fraud was discovered by A-T-and-T when use of the card's number exceeded typical patterns.

Police in Prince George's County, Maryland, say a 24-year-old man is in custody, charged with first degree murder in the fatal shooting of James Bias, the younger brother of the late basketball star Len Bias. The suspect turned himself in last night, about eight hours after Bias was shot in a parking lot following an argument about a woman in a jewelry store. Authorities are looking for a second suspect. Bias was 16 when his brother Len died of cocaine ingestion in 1986 three days after being drafted by the Boston Celtics.

The American Psychological Association says women are twice as likely as men to develop depression and it says that may be because women are more likely to suffer sexual and physical abuse. The report by the 20- member Task Force on

But the number could be twice as high because as many as half of all cases may never be diagnosed in the first place. The report calls for improvements in both diagnosis and treatment of depression.

NEW YORK (DEC. 5) UPI - Jurors in their sixth day of deliberations at the Central Park rape trial sent mixed signals Wednesday, asking about robbery charges involving a male jogger and then backtracking to the attack on a female jogger.

The five-man, seven-woman jury asked for the legal definition of robbery and assault. The charges relate to an attack on a male jogger, John Loughlin, 42, who was among nine victims of a roving crime spree in Central Park on April 19 1989.

Kevin Richardson, 16, and Kharey Wise, 18, are on trial on 13 charges stemming from the violence. They are accused of being part of a pack of 30 youths that roamed the park, randoming robbing and beating joggers and bicyclists.

The most seriously injured victim was a 30-year-old investment banker who was gang raped, beaten into a coma and left for dead in a muddy gully.

The note asking for guidance on the robbery charges indicated the panel had moved beyond the charges related to the female jogger: rape and attempted murder.

However, the jury then appeared to be backtracking. It soon sent out another note asking to again watch Richardson's videotaped confession, particularly the section in which he admits getting scratched by the woman.

It is the fourth time since the start of deliberations that the jury has watched the videotape.

Richardson claims he was trying to stop the attack when the woman scratched him.

One question looming in the halls of state Supreme Court in Manhattan is whether the jury has even begun to consider the case against Wise.

In its flurry of more than 20 notes during deliberations, the panel has not once asked a question about Wise.

Meanwhile, Richardson, who is free on $25,000 bail, and his supporters mill about the courthouse, writing Christmas cards and playing cards.

Wise has been held at Rikers Island on $50,000 bail since his arrest days after the attack.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 5) UPI - The administration publicly scrapped its policy of relying on economic sanctions against Iraq Wednesday as too little and too slow, triggering what could be an extended debate in Congress over war and peace.

As Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., told Secretary of State James Baker, ''The administration appears to be shifting to a new policy based on the premise that sanctions will not work and that an early resort to offensive action may be necessary.''

Evidence for Biden's conclusion came from Baker's testimony, from CIA Director William Webster in a simultaneous session on Capitol Hill, and from President Bush, travelling in South America.

''I've not been the one who's convinced that sanctions alone will do the trick '' Bush said Tuesday at a news conference in Buenos Aires.

Webster, in his testimony to the House Armed Services Committee, said, ''Our judgment has been and continues to be that there is no assurance or guarantee that economic hardships will compel Saddam to change his policies or lead to internal unrest that would threaten his regime.''

Baker was even more categorical:

''We have to face the fact that, four months into this conflict, none of our efforts have yet produced any sign of change in Saddam Hussein. He shows no sign of complying with any of the United Nations Security Council resolutions.''

These resolutions demand an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait, release of hostages, and restoration of the former Kuwaiti government.

In a debate that generally broke along party lines, Democrat Biden told Baker, ''Frankly, Mr. Secretary, I don't think the administration has made the case yet, and I think it is going to be tough for you to do so.''

Several senators evoked emotional arguments in which they said they could not look into the eyes of a family that had lost a son in the gulf fighting without the assurance that the U.S. government had first exhausted all steps short of war, including an extended test of the effectiveness of the economic sanctions.

Baker said President Bush has directed himself, Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, ''to work with the other members of the international coalition to reinforce the multinational force in the gulf and to coordinate its efforts. Our aim is to ensure that if force must be used, it will be used suddenly, massively and decisively.''

On Tuesday, House Democrats strongly endorsed Bush's handling of the Persian Gulf crisis, but they also demanded that Bush seek a declaration from Congress before going to war, unless he needs to protect U.S. lives.

On a vote of 177-37, House Democrats, meeting in a caucus as a prelude to the 102nd Congress convening in January, declared that they ''support the actions taken by President Bush to defend Saudi Arabia,'' his demand that Saddam leave Kuwait, and that they back Bush's diplomatic moves.

Baker acknowledged the debate, saying, I know that some here and throughout the country are very uneasy about the prospects of war. No one wants war, none of us. Not you, not the President, not me. None of us have sought this conflict and we are making every attempt to resolve it peacefully, without '' every attempt to resolv

But he said the success of the sanctions has to be judged on whether they change Saddam Hussein's behavior and there is nothing in his violent history to suggest that he will be swayed.

''We have to face the difficult fact that no one can tell you that sanctions alone will ever be able to impose a high enough cost on Saddam to get him to withdraw.''

He added, ''Waiting not only gives Saddam time to break the sanctions, but it imposes costs on us,'' including the further obliteration of Kuwait and giving Iraq more time to break up the international coalition against Saddam.

In September, when he asked for congressional support for imposing the sanctions, Baker said that the U.S. government and people have to show patience and give the sanctions time to work.

Asked what has changed since that statement, he said five months have passed and there is no indication of any change in Saddam's behavior.

However, just after Baker had finished his testimony, he was informed that the Iraqi government had formally accepted the idea of talks, with Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz coming to Washington sometime after Dec. 15 and Baker going to Baghdad before Jan. 15.

Baker said that no one is making a decision to go to war now and that the administration will use the next six weeks ''to exhaust all diplomatic opportunities.''

One Republican senator, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, formally objected to the idea of holding public hearings on the gulf policy at all, arguing that the ''carping and second-guessing is eroding the will of the people to stand united at a time when the president needs all the support he can get.''

Helms said that Saddam must be ''dancing with joy'' at the prospect of ''the petty quarrelling of 535 self-appointed commanders in chief.''

BOSTON (DEC. 5) UPI - The Boston Celtics Wednesday released Jim Paxson, two months after announcing the veteran guard would not play this season.

The 33-year-old Paxson suffered a series of back and wrist injuries during his 2 1/2 seasons with the Celtics. His value to Boston declined with the return of 24-year-old Brian Shaw from Italy and the acquisition of first-round draft pick Dee Brown, who is only 22.

First-year coach Chris Ford intended to change the Celtics' style of play, emphasizing the speed and defense which the younger guards could provide, unlike the slower Paxson.

The Celtics announced on Oct. 6 that Paxson would not return for the 1990-91 season, but did not release him at the time. The team said it wanted to give him the chance to explore other professional opportunities. Paxson, an All-Star in 1983 and 1984, had hoped to be picked up by another team, but it became apparent his playing days were over.

''Playing for the Boston Celtics was and is the ultimate dream of any basketball player,'' Paxson said. ''I not only played alongside players with unique talent, but made a lot of friends along the way. I am now looking forward to new career challenges.''

He did not say what career options he was considering.

The Celtics acquired Paxson from the Portland Trailblazers on Feb. 23, 1988, in a trade for Jerry Sichting. He spent 2 1/2 seasons with the Celtics, including 72 games last year.

Portland's first-round draft choice in 1979, Paxson is a former captain of the Trailblazers. He was a member of the All-NBA team in 1984.

Paxson played in 784 career games and averaged 14.3 points. He played in 53 playoff games, including 20 with the Celtics.

Now a resident of the San Diego area, Paxson is one of three family members who not only played in the NBA, but were chosen in the first round of the draft. His brother John is currently a member of the Chicago Bulls, and his father, Jim, played with the Minneapolis Lakers and the Cincinnati Royals.

DALLAS (DEC. 5) UPI - Calling former Vernon Savings and Loan owner Don Dixon a ''master manipulator,'' goverment attorneys Wednesday said he illegally used thrift funds to provide himself a luxurious house and to pay for prostitutes.

Prosecutors Davis Jarvis and Robert Hauberg used much of their closing argument before the case went to the jury to drive home one of the government's main thrift fraud charges against Dixon - using Vernon funds to pay for a beach house in Solana Beach, Calif.

''This master manipulator didn't care as long as it served his purpose,'' Jarvis told the jury of seven women and five men. ''It was Dixon's house and not Vernon's.''

Defense attorney Billy Ravkind said the government was only trying to make Dixon a scapegoat for the thrift industry collapse and that its case had been scripted with plenty of sex and politics thrown in to persuade the jury.

Ravkind said the government relied on perjured witnesses to build its case of sex and crime against Dixon.

''The whole story is a lie,'' Ravkind said, adding, ''Read the script. It is not even carefully done.''

Throughout his testimony, Dixon claimed he was trying to save Vernon at a time when the economy was declining and the 1986 tax reform act was threatening the incentives for real estate investment.

Dixon admitted that female entertainment was provided on company trips and in hindsight he could see that was wrong. He said his employees arranged the escorts and he was not directly involved.

''This is not a referendum on prostitution,'' Jarvis said. ''The issue is whether federally-insured funds can be used to hire prostitutes and the answer ladies and gentlemen, is absolutely not.''

Jarvis described as ''a most absurd statement and ridiculous lie'' Dixon's testimony that he did not know about laws governing campaign contributions.

''And yet he (Dixon) asked his officers to make personal contributions and approved reimbursement for them from Vernon funds,'' he said.

Jarvis said Dawn Baum Simmons, Dixon's former secretary, was the most devastating witness against her former boss. She said Dixon asked her to ''filter'' political contributions through company expense accounts and she refused.

''Over and over again Dixon was playing while Vernon was paying,'' the prosecutor said.

U.S. District Judge A. Joe Fish later instructed the jury before it began deliberations.

A 38-count indictment charges Dixon with using Vernon funds to make illegal political contributions, pay for female entertainment and to support a lavish lifestyle. Vernon collapsed in 1987 with a $1.3 billion loss to taxpayers, federal officials say.

If Dixon, 51, is convicted on all 38 charges, he could face a maximum sentence of 190 years in prison and be fined as much as $9.5 million.

Dixon bought the thrift in 1982 at Vernon, Texas, and the next year moved it to Dallas. Vernon deposits grew from $80 million to 1982 to $1. 6 billion in 1986, when federal regulators forced Dixon from control.

When regulators declared Vernon insolvent, the FBI began a fraud investigation. Since then, 10 people connected with Vernon have been convicted on various federal charges. Seven of them were former Vernon officers.

(DEC. 5) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, preparing for high-level talks with the United States, said Tuesday he would prefer that the crisis be settled within the Arab world, and an estimated 3,000 Soviet hostages began returning home from captivity in Iraq.

Renewed diplomatic overtures and frank preparations for war have marked the Persian Gulf crisis in the week since the U.N. Security Council issued a Jan. 15 deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait or face a possible confrontation with U.S.-led multinational troops in the region.

Saddam, meeting in Baghdad with King Hussein of Jordan, Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat and Yemen's vice president, said in the joint communique that ''an Arab-Arab dialogue is a necessity'' in resolving the crisis, the Iraqi news agency INA reported.

The Iraqi president has agreed to meet with Secretary of State James Baker in Baghdad and is preparing to send Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to Washington for talks with Bush, but has said he wants the Palestinian question to be included in any discussions.

The first of an estimated 3,000 Soviet hostages held by Iraq began to return home Wednesday, the official Iraqi news agency INA said. Moscow has told that the release would not lessen its opposition to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait.

An undisclosed number of Soviet military advisers and consultants began leaving Iraq on flights to Amman, Jordan, after Saddam said he would allow them to go home even though they had not fulfilled their work contracts.

The Soviet Union supported the U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force to drive Iraq from Kuwait, but has not sent troops to join the multinational force in the region.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, meanwhile, during a visit to Poland, restated the Bush administration view that the United States is impatient for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

Cheney, meeting with Polish officials who told him they have lost $2 billion because of economic sanctions against Iraq, said the talks in Warsaw ''reaffirm in my mind the notion that we cannot wait indefinitely for Saddam Hussein to come into compliance with the U.N. resolutions.''

Bush said Tuesday during a visit to Uruguay that economic sanctions imposed against Iraq by the United Nations have not pressured Saddam into withdrawing from the tiny oil-rich emirate.

Adm. William Crowe and Gen. David Jones, both former chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said Tuesday at a Senate hearing on the gulf crisis that the United States should use resraint when dealing with Saddam and wait as long as a year for the economic sanctions to work.

''I don't agree with them,'' Bush said when asked about their testimony. ''I don't think Saddam Hussein understands (the sanctions). I hope he gets the message. You know, I've not been the one who's convinced that sanctions alone will do the trick.''

Meanwhile, 54 Democratic members of Congress filed a lawsuit Tuesday in U.S. District Court in Washington challenging the constitutionality of Operation Desert Shield, questioning whether Bush is empowered to send U.S. forces into war without the approval of Congress.

In London, the Sky Television News satellite network reported Tuesday that Saddam offered to witdraw his troops from Kuwait to avoid war provided he is allowed to keep an oil field captured during the invasion. It said Saddam will make the offer to Baker during his visit to Baghdad later this month.

The network quoted an anonymous source as saying that in return for a guarantee against Western attack, Iraq would withdraw from Kuwait except for the Rumaila oil field, which straddles Kuwait and Iraq, and was Iraq's primary reason for invading Kuwait.

LINCOLN, NEB. (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Isco Inc. (NASDAQ:ISKO) reported earnings of $678,000, or 16 cents per share, on net sales of $7,958,000 for the fiscal first quarter ended Oct. 26, 1990.

This compares with earnings of $703,000, or 17 cents per share, on net sales of $7,498,000 for the same period one year ago. Cash flow from operations increased from $377,000 to $519,000.

The net sales increase of 6 percent for the first quarter compared with the same period a year ago includes an increase of 20 percent for the Environmental Division and a decrease of 13 percent for the Instrument Division.

The decline in Instrument Division sales is the result of continued weakness in the high performance liquid chromatography (HPLC) market, as well as delays in the initial delivery of new products until the last week of the quarter. Environmental Division sales reflected the continued market acceptance of the samplers and flow meters introduced last year.

For the first quarter of fiscal 1991, the Environmental Division had operating income of $993,000. This compares with $655,000 and $1,420,000 in the first and fourth quarters of fiscal 1990, respectively.

For the first quarter of fiscal 1991, the Instrument Division had an operating loss of $238,000. This compares with operating income of $172,000 and a loss of $150,000 in the first and fourth quarters of fiscal 1990, respectively.

Robert Allington, president of Isco, said, ''While net sales in the first quarter were up, earnings declined primarily as a result of increased staffing in the marketing and sales areas.''

Allington added, ''Fundamental to improving profitability is our ability to increase our sales volume, especially in the Instrument Division. Short term goals include stabilizing the base instrument business and increasing sales efforts on new products such as the capillary electrophoresis and supercritical fluid extraction systems.''

Isco manufactures water pollution monitoring equipment including flow measuring devices, and is the leading manufacturer of wastewater samplers. Isco also manufactures chemical separation instruments for use in biochemistry and biotechnology research.

The airline will also enter the lucrative California corridor with new service between Long Beach and San Jose on Jan. 6, as well as between Orange County and San Francisco on Feb. 1.

Edward R. Beauvais, chairman and chief executive officer for the airline said,

''As part of our route network realignment, America West will discontinue service at Boise, Lincoln and Sioux City as of Feb. 1. These schedule enhancements and additions will require us to redeploy some current operations.

BELLEVUE, WASH. (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Summit Savings Bank (NASDAQ:SMMT) was given the highest possible rating by the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) for Summit's Community Reinvestment Act (CRA) performance.

Summit's outstanding rating indicates that the institution is a leader in meeting the credit needs of the entire community including low and moderate income neighborhoods.

The new rating system, which applies to CRA examinations made after July 1, 1990, has four possible grades: ''outstanding,'' ''satisfactory,'' ''needs to improve,'' and ''substantial non-compliance.''

The purpose of the CRA is to encourage and evaluate each financial institution's performance in serving the credit needs of the community and to eliminate the practice of ''redlining'' or refusing to make loans in certain areas.

''Summit is providing a leadership role in promoting economic development in its community,'' stated the public disclosure document published by the OTS on Oct. 22. ''The institution has an effective training program to prevent prohibited discriminatory practices.''

''We are trying to provide the services and lending programs that our customer needs, and we will continue to work hard to help more people in our community to become homeowners, and to be good corporate citizens in the process,'' said James Grabicki, president and CEO. ''Our strategy of focusing on affordable housing has made good business sense as the values of affordable homes have held up recently, while more expensive housing has depreciated.''

The OTS cited several areas where Summit showed outstanding efforts including involvement of Summit board members in planning and monitoring lending programs and policies to ensure that all segments of the community are fairly represented, and Summit's efforts to offer loan programs designed to serve low and moderate income households.

Summit closed 879 residential loans totaling almost $88 million in the first nine months of 1990, of which, 58% were FHA and VA loans. Summit's CRA program contains an affordable housing concept that includes participation in the Washington State Housing Commission's Single Family Home Ownership program.

Summit Savings Bank is a Bellevue-based thrift institution emphasizing residential lending of all types and offering a wide range of financial services including money market accounts and certificates, annuities and other investment products. The bank serves the greater Seattle metropolitan area, through its full service Bellevue office and also Whatcom County with its Bellingham loan production office.

SEATTLE (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Alaska Airlines and Trans World Airlines Thursday announced the signing of two agreements, one giving Alaska the long-sought goal of adequate access to aircraft boarding gates and facilities at Los Angeles International Airport and the other providing one-stop service between Anchorage and St. Louis and New York.

The Los Angeles agreement was made final yesterday when the Los Angeles Department of Airports approved a plan that will see Alaska sublease two TWA wide body aircraft gates in Terminal 3 and turn them into four gates. Alaska also will have secondary access to two other TWA gates in Terminal 3.

Alaska, which plans to move into the terminal in February, currently operates its 18 daily LAX departures from Terminal 4.

''This is a milestone for Alaska Airlines that comes after many years of intense effort,'' said Ray Vecci, Alaska's president and chief executive officer. Alaska has had to operate around the needs of other airlines since launching Los Angeles service in 1985.

''Scheduling restrictions and delays were among the effects of the previous arrangement. The new agreement eliminates those hurdles,'' Vecci said. The agreement also gives Alaska a 70-foot ticket counter, passenger waiting area, office, baggage systems and other facilities.

In addition, Alaska is seeking space from the airport in which to build a lounge and conference room for ''Board Room'' club members.

In conjunction with the Los Angeles agreement, the two airlines strengthened their marketing relationship with an arrangement -- effective in March -- that will see TWA coordinate flights from St. Louis and New York's Kennedy Airport to Seattle so they connect with Alaska flights to Anchorage.

The flight coordination at Seattle also will give Alaska passengers connecting service to TWA cities throughout the Midwest, East Coast, Europe, the Middle East and Africa. In addition, the agreement contemplates coordination of flights connecting in Los Angeles and other cities.

TWA and Alaska are partners in their respective frequent flier programs. Alaska Airlines, based in Seattle, serves 35 cities in Alaska, Mexico and five Western states.

DALLAS (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc. Thursday announced it had successfully completed a major refinancing and recapitalization and had issued $155 million of senior fixed-rate notes and $85 million of senior floating-rate notes to a group of institutional investors.

The proceeds of the note issuance were used to repay approximately $117 million of bank debt outstanding since Mary Kay's 1985 leveraged buyout, to repurchase up to $122.5 million of the 15 percent discount debentures of Mary Kay Corp., MKCI's parent company, to prepay approximately $17.5 million of notes held primarily by members of the company's founding family and to purchase approximately $10 million of stock options from Mary Kay management.

John P. Rochon, vice chairman of Mary Kay Corp. and managing director of Richmont Corp., a financial adviser to Mary Kay Corp., said: ''This refinancing provides Mary Kay with additional financial flexibility by extending maturities of its long-term debt and replacing some of the high-cost debt incurred at the time of the leveraged buyout.

''The transaction also provides liquidity to members of the founding family and key members of management who have participated in the company's growth since the buyout.''

''We said at the outset that we had two goals in seeking this refinancing -- to enhance the company's financial flexibility and to secure better economic terms on its debt,'' Rochon said. ''Both those goals have been fully met.''

The fixed-rate notes have a 10-year maturity, bear 12.75 percent interest and have no required principal payments until 1996. The company said it expected the fixed-rate notes would be registered under the Securities Act. The floating-rate notes have a five-year maturity and initially will bear interest at 10.56 percent.

The terms of the floating-rate notes require prepayments to be made out of the company's excess cash flow, but otherwise have no required principal payments until 1994. Both series of notes are secured by the company's assets.

Mary Kay on Thursday also accepted for payment discount debentures that had been validly tendered and not withdrawn under its outstanding tender offer. Mary Kay tendered for up to $122.5 million of the discount debentures, approximately 71 percent of the amount outstanding. As of midnight, Dec. 5, approximately $157.5 million aggregate principal amount of the debentures had been tendered.

The company said it would announce shortly the proration factor applicable to the offer, and that payments to bondholders would be distributed promptly by The Bank of New York, the depositary.

The tender offer was made in connection with the solicitation of consents to certain amendments of the terms of the discount debentures.

Those amendments were previously approved by the holders of a majority of the discount debentures and the supplemental indenture entered into by the company on Nov. 8, reflecting those amendments, became effective upon the company's accepting the tendered discount debentures for payment.

The First Boston Corp. served as financial adviser, placement agent and dealer manager and solicitation agent in connection with the transaction.

Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc., with headquarters in Dallas, is engaged in the production and distribution of cosmetics, toiletries and related products through a network of more than 200,000 beauty consultants.

Mary Kay Corp. is a holding company that owns all of the capital stock of Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc.

ST. LOUIS (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Roosevelt Financial Group Inc., the ''company,'' (NASDAQ:RFED) announced that it has borrowed $1.14 million from a commercial bank in order to fund the regular quarterly cash dividend of 20 cents per share paid on Nov. 30, 1990, to the company's stockholders.

The loan is at the commercial bank's prime rate, matures on March 1, 1991, and is secured by 12 percent of the stock of the company's subsidiary and principal asset, Roosevelt Bank, a Federal Savings Bank, referred to as ''Roosevelt Bank'' or the ''bank''. The company plans to repay the loan prior to maturity out of funds expected to be received in early 1991 as a dividend from Roosevelt Bank.

Previous dividends paid by the company to its stockholders have been funded by dividends from Roosevelt Bank to the company. However, under a regulation and subsequent policy recently adopted by the Office of Thrift Supervision, the ''OTS,'' Roosevelt Bank's dividends during the calendar year 1990 are limited to 100 percent of its net income during 1990.

As previously reported, the bank incurred a loss of $4.5 million for the first quarter ended March 31, 1990, largely attributable to losses sustained in liquidating its high-yield bond portfolio.

While the bank has earned a total of $2.9 million during the second and third quarters of 1990, as a result of the first quarter loss, net income for the year ending Dec. 31, 1990, is expected to be nominal.

The same OTS regulation also permits the payment of dividends during any year in an amount not exceeding 50 percent of the bank's excess capital over fully phased-in requirements as of Jan. 1 of that year, provided the bank at the time of the dividend payment would continue to meet fully phased-in requirements after giving effect to such payment.

While the bank had excess capital over fully phased-in requirements of $10.2 million as of Sept. 30, 1990, it did not exceed fully phased-in requirements as of Jan. 1, 1990. Accordingly, Roosevelt Bank is not permitted to pay dividends to the company out of the bank's excess capital until after Jan. 1, 1991.

Roosevelt Bank intends to give the 30-day notice required by regulation of the bank's intent to declare and pay a dividend to the company after Jan. 1, 1991.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Societe Europeenne des Satellites (SES) of Luxembourg has selected Hughes Communications International Inc., a subsidiary of Hughes Aircraft Co., to build its Astra 1C and 1D television and radio broadcast spacecraft for western Europe.

The multimillion-dollar contract announced Thursday, Hughes' first with SES, calls for two HS 601 model spacecraft and associated ground equipment. Astra 1C will be built in El Segundo, Calif., by the Space and Communications Group of Hughes, a unit of GM Hughes Electronics. Astra 1D is planned a year later. The contract calls for a 15-year in-orbit service life.

The Astra satellites are similar in appearance to other HS 601 models, having a cube-shaped body and two horizontal, three-panel solar array wings. Customized features include 18 Ku-band, 63-watt channels -- more powerful than the existing Astra spacecraft -- and two dual-polarized antenna dishes.

Astra 1C is due to be launched aboard an Ariane 4 rocket during the first quarter of 1993, while Astra 1D is scheduled for 1994.

This is Hughes' fourth contract for the new, body-stabilized HS 601 model spacecraft, bringing the total on order to 13.

Other customers are Aussat Pty. Ltd., which ordered two satellites, dubbed Aussat B, for domestic communications; the U.S. Navy, which has signed up for six HS 601s for its UHF Follow-on program with options for four more; and Hughes Communications Inc., which has ordered three C-/Ku-band spacecraft for its Galaxy constellation in the United States.

Hughes program manager Ron Symmes noted: ''All the HS 601 spacecraft use the same basic bus design, allowing Hughes to realize efficiencies gained by production volume, tooling investments and quantity buys. In addition, the HS 601 is designed as a modular spacecraft, so work can be done on the various modules in parallel, thereby shortening manufacturing and test time.''

Net earnings per common share for 1990 were 43 cents, compared with net earnings per share of 46 cents for 1989. OCLI's exports from the United States and increased sales by its subsidiary in Scotland combined to provide most of the increase in OCLI's sales in 1990.

Net sales for the fourth quarter of 1990 were $25.6 million, up 13 percent over sales of $22.7 million for the fourth quarter of 1989. Net earnings per common share for the fourth quarter of 1990 were 15 cents, up 150 percent over net earnings per common share of 6 cents for the fourth quarter of 1989.

OCLI's financial condition continued to strengthen in 1990. Capital spending increased in 1990 due to expenditures for OCLI's new continuous sputtering machine and its ground water treatment plant.

The company was able to fund these equipment and plant additions from operations. Common stockholders' equity increased from $35.3 million, or $5.10 per share, at Oct. 31, 1989, to $39.7 million, or $5.71 per share, at Oct. 31, 1990.

SUNNYVALE, CA (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The Federal Bureau of Investigation has determined that the Identix TouchPrint system meets the image fidelity requirements of the agency's Identification Division.

The announcement follows FBI testing of the system which showed that the TouchPrint system has a latent identification accuracy of 100 percent -- higher than any other live-scan fingerprint system currently available. The TouchPrint also outperformed the traditional ink card method of capturing fingerprints.

The FBI's acceptance of TouchPrint scans will allow law enforcement authorities using the TouchPrint system to cross-reference fingerprints of suspects with the FBI's central database in Washington.

Earlier this year, Identix announced it had received the live-scan contract from the state of California for up to $40 million in equipment over five years. The contract is the largest in the industry to date. Industry observers believe that other states will follow California's lead in issuing requests for proposals (RFPs) for live-scan fingerprint systems.

Typically, law enforcement authorities will use the TouchPrint system to record individual fingerprints at the point-of-booking. Once scanned, the system will print out hard copies of fingerprints for files and electronically transmit the information to state authorities and the FBI to check against their records. The time saved in matching fingerprints is expected to range from hours to several days.

Jim Magers, director of the California Division of Law Enforcement Data Center said, ''The FBI certification underscores our belief that this system will save time and prove more accurate than the traditional manual method of inking fingerprints.''

Identix, headquartered in Sunnyvale, designs, manufactures and markets a family of identity verification systems that combine high accuracy with ease of use. Identix systems are used in a wide range of security applications in the public and private sectors.

The company's stock is traded over the counter (NASDAQ:IDXX) and is listed on the Pacific Stock Exchange (symbol:IDX).

SCOTTSDALE, AZ (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Go-Video Inc. (AMEX: VCR) of Scottsdale Thursday filed an antitrust case against Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. Ltd. to enjoin the acquisition of MCA Inc.

Go-Video is the manufacturer of the world's first dual-deck VCR called the VCR-2. Matsushita of Japan is the largest manufacturer of consumer electronic products in the world. MCA Inc., is the largest entertainment conglomerate in the world. Go-Video charged Matsushita with violations of the Sherman and Clayton Antitrust Acts in its complaint.

Go-Video alleged inter alia Matsushita conspired with Sony Corporation of Japan and other Japanese consumer electronic manufactuers to monopolize and unlawfully restrain trade in the consumer electronic hardware market (TVs, VCRs, and play-and-record audio equipment).

Go-Video says that in order to entrench their monopoly positions in the hardware industry, Matsushita and its co-conspirators are now attempting to monopolize and to unlawfully restrain trade in the software industry (motion pictures, TV programming, and video and audio recordings). Go-Video contends that Matsushita's most recent antitrust violation is confirmed by its attempt to purchase MCA.

The comsumer electronic hardware market in the United States is almost completely dominated by Matsushita and the other Japanese manufacturers of electronics. American producers of VCRs are non-existent except for Go-Video, who invented, engineered, and marketed the world's first dual-deck VCR.

American producers of TVs are history (i.e. Philco, Sylvania, Curtis-Mathes, Magnavox, RCA, Emerson, GE, and Admiral have either ceased manufacturing or sold out to foreign companies).

Go-Video states in its complaint that Matsushita and its co-conspirators, in order to entrench their control and monopoly of the hardware industry, have begun to institute a plan and program to now monopolize the software industry.

Go-Video also claims that the japanese firms intend to use that position to eliminate any potential American competitor in any future hardware manufacturing, including HDTV products, computer terminals, DAT and satellite communication products.

Go-Video alleged that Matsushita's purchase of MCA is the latest in a series of coordinated purchases and investments in the software industry by the Japanese hardware manufacturers.

Go-Video is the only American company that has introduced a significant consumer electronics product, the dual-deck VCR, into the face of the cartel.

Go-Video has demonstrated its ability to be a significant and major developer of consumer electronics products in the future, including its participation in HDTV systems and other products.

AKRON, OH (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - A. Schulman, Inc., a leading international supplier of high performance plastic compounds and resins, is planning the addition of another production line at its newly-opened Givet, France manufacturing plant. The company also has established a new marketing office in Leipzig, formerly East Germany.

Speaking to shareholders at the company's annual meeting, Terry L. Haines, president and chief operating officer, said that the French plant had recently added a third shift to its operations.

The new production line, which is scheduled for completion in 1992, will further boost production of engineered plastic compounds for customers throughout the European market.

Commenting on the new Leipzig office, Haines said, "With the reunification of Germany, we see very good long-term growth opportunities. Our experience and knowledge of markets in Germany and the Eastern European countries, plus our modern and efficient manufacturing facility in Sindorf, Germany, will enable us to take advantage of these opportunities.

"Since the end of our fiscal year in August," Haines continued, "our business has continued strong throughout the world, with solid demand for our high performance products in a broad range of markets. We are, of course, concerned about the continuing weakness in the North American automotive industry, one of our major markets.

Notwithstanding this problem, our automotive business has been good primarily because we supply the industry with plastic compounds for applications on automobiles which have been in strong demand. In addition, we are a growing supplier of materials to Japanese automotive producers in North America.

"The Gulf crisis and unsettled world conditions are a cause for concern by each and every one of us," Haines said. "We have seen increases in resin prices of 30 to 40 percent since the start of this crisis. At this time, these added costs have required us to pass on the increases in the form of higher selling prices to our customers, however, there has been some erosion on margins due to the delay in passing on the higher costs.

"At this time, we are seeing some leveling off in the escalation of prices. In addition, we believe there could be some weakening of prices early in 1991.

"We have all heard the forecasts of slower economic activity or recession," Haines noted. "Nevertheless, we anticipate that fiscal 1991 should be a good year, although it may be difficult to maintain the exceptionally strong growth rate which A. Schulman achieved last year".

RALEIGH, NC (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Ron E. Doggett, chairman and chief executive officer of GoodMark Foods Inc. (NASDAQ/NMS:GDMK), Thursday announced revenues for the second quarter ended Nov. 25, 1990, of $35,623,000 compared with revenues of $36,512,000 for the second quarter of fiscal 1990.

Net income for the second quarter of fiscal 1991 was $677,000, or 16 cents per share, compared with net income of $676,000, or 15 cents per share, in the year-earlier period which had slightly higher average shares outstanding.

For the first half of fiscal 1991, revenues were $71,973,000 compared with $71,139,000 for the first six months of last year. Net income for the 26 weeks ended Nov. 25, 1990, was $1,143,000, or 27 cents per share, compared with $1,998,000, or 45 cents per share, in the similar period last year.

Doggett said: ''Sales have remained below our expectations and were affected by price increases taken over the past 12 months to offset record high meat costs and various inflationary cost increases, including the effects of higher oil prices. Our margins are good, but in terms of volume, we are experiencing a weak economy and a generally sluggish marketplace.

''Our response to these market conditions has been to broadly cut expenses, freeze hiring, increase cost-saving investments, continue our marketing programs, and maintain a strong balance sheet. Our distribution and market shares are excellent, and we believe the outlook for the second half is more positive than the current figures seem to indicate.

''New product activity has been strong. The Slim Jim Beef 'n Cheese snack has exceeded expectations; our new premium quality Smokey Mountain brand line of beef jerky has been very well received; and our Tabasco-flavored Penrose Hot-Rageous Sausages, Andy Capp's Salt 'n Vinegar Fries, A Whale Of A Snack Whale Graham cookies, and Rachel's Peanut Butter Brownies are experiencing favorable introductions.

''New product introductions, plus the recently acquired Acme Foods Co., should produce improved results during the final half of fiscal 1991.''

NEWARK, NJ (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Callers who use selected New Jersey Bell public phones now have another option when the person they're calling doesn't answer: They can leave a message that will be delivered by New Jersey Bell's network.

About 80 New Jersey Bell public phones in the Plainfield area are being equipped with Send-A-Call, a new messaging system that allows callers to leave a 30-second message after receiving a busy signal or no answer when dialing a local number.

The specially equipped phones have instruction cards and handsets engraved with the words ''Send-A-Call'' that alert customers to the message feature.

The feature costs 50 cents in addition to the 20 cents callers must deposit when making a local call.

A voice prompt announces the availability of the service. A caller who doesn't wish to leave a message is instructed to ignore the prompt and hang up. The initial 20 cents will be returned.

A caller who wants to leave a message is asked to deposit 50 cents and record a brief message. If the line is busy, the phone system will attempt to deliver the message every 15 minutes for up to two hours; if there is no answer, the system tries every 30 minutes for up to four hours.

''During the trial, we expect to test the technology and gauge customer interest,'' said Al Metzler, product manager. ''Based on the results, we will decide whether to expand the service and include toll and calling card calls.''

The Plainfield area was the first to test Answer Call, New Jersey Bell's voice messaging service for residential customers, in 1989. Answer Call now is available to about 60 percent of New Jersey Bell's residential customers.

The 80 Send-A-Call public phones are located in the 322 and 668 exchanges that serve Plainfield, South Plainfield, Scotch Plains, Watchung and Fanwood.

HOUSTON (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - American General Corp. (NYSE:AGC) announced Thursday that its board of directors has reviewed and rejected the two proposals relating to the sale of its home service insurance subsidiaries received on Dec. 3, pursuant to its previously announced invitation for bids.

Further, the board directed management to end the sale process that was launched on May 2, authorized the resumption of its share repurchase program, and decided on a new indicated level of dividends on its common stock for 1991.

In commenting on the proposals, Harold S. Hook, chairman and chief executive officer, said, ''The higher proposal offered a total of $3.65 billion for the home service companies, of which $1.8 billion represented the assumption of corporate debt.

''Under this proposal, American General shareholders would have received about $15 per share in a combination of cash and securities of the acquiring company. The board concluded that this proposal fell short of the value of these operations.

''Our board of directors has given thoughtful consideration to the proposals received, to the advice of its financial advisors, to the experience gained in the sale process, to the company's continuing strong earnings performance and asset quality, and to the company's business prospects and opportunities.

''In the judgment of the board, the prospects for maximizing shareholder value through a sale have been fully explored, and, in the context of the present environment, the continuation of that process is not likely to be productive. Further, it is the board's belief that a continuation of the sale process would be detrimental to the business of the company.

The board of directors also authorized management to resume purchases under the company's stock repurchase program. Since the current program was initiated on April 1, 1987, more than 20 percent of the shares outstanding on that date have been purchased for an aggregate cost of approximately $1 billion.

Purchases under that proram had been suspended since the May 1990 announcement of the sale process.

At the time of the announcement in May 1990 of the decision to offer the company for sale, a dividend rate of 80 cents per quarter was established, to provide shareholders an additional return while they waited for the process to be completed.

Now that the sale process is concluded, the board announced its intention to set a new indicated annual common dividend rate of $2 per share for 1991, representing a 27 percent increase over the $1.58 annual rate in effect prior to the May announcement. The first quarter 1991 dividend is to be declared in February and paid to shareholders on March 1, 1991.

NORWOOD, MA (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix Technologies Ltd. (NASDAQ: PTEC) Thursday announced that it had filed suit in the Middlesex County Superior Court in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts against SystemSoft Corp. of Natick, Mass., and five individual SystemSoft founders, employees and/or shareholders: Robert Angelo, Jeffrey Bobzin, Michael Segroves, Jonathan Joseph, and William O'Connell.

All five individual defendants are former senior level Phoenix employees who held key management, sales, engineering, or marketing positions. In the complaint, Phoenix alleges that SystemSoft and the five individual defendents misappropriated trade secrets belonging to Phoenix and the five individual defendants have breached contractual obligations owed to Phoenix.

According to the complaint, the defendants have intentionally interfered with both existing and prospective contractual and business relations between Phoenix and certain of its customers and prospects. The complaint also alleges unfair or deceptive acts or practices and unfair methods of competition against all of the defendants.

Phoenix has requested that the Court grant both preliminary and permanent injunction against SystemSoft and the individual defendants to stop the misappropriation and use of Phoenix trade secrets. The complaint also seeks damages against SystemSoft and the individual defendants.

According to Ron Fisher, president and chief executive officer, "Phoenix trade secrets and its employees are its most valuable assets. UPPER SADDLE RIVER, NJ (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Western Union Business Services Thursday announced several major enhancements to its EasyLink Fax(SM) service.

The new service options offer graphic files-to-fax capability and signatures and logos. These enhancements are available to all EasyLink(R) subscribers.

''We expect these new features to significantly increase our growth in the fax messaging segment of our business,'' said Sal Noto, Marketing Director for EasyLink Electronic Messaging Services.

The EasyLink Fax Logo and Signature feature allows subscribers to personalize fax messages using company letterhead and signatures. The set-up is simple.

Western Union electronically scans letterheads, logos and signatures and safe-stores them in the EasyLink network. With personalized logos, letterheads and signatures on call, subscribers can be sure that their electronic documents will be polished hardcopy.

The graphic files-to-fax feature is a breakthrough in network fax graphics. Users can now include computer generated illustrations in fax documents such as newsletters or reports, including bar graphs, artwork, pie charts and other binary file- based designs. EasyLink Fax service supports graphics produced via PostScript, Epson FX 80 Print, TIFF and PCX.

EasyLink Fax is deliverable to Group III fax machines globally. Other features announced earlier in the year include cover page, various alternate font sizes and page length options. One of the most popular applications is the broadcast of messages to a virtually unlimited number of destinations simultaneously. The originator using EasyLink Fax also can request notification of delivery of messages. More information may be obtained by calling 1-800-779-1111.

Western Union Corporation provides a broad range of messaging, financial and other services, both domestically and internationally, to meet specific needs of business customers and individual consumers. FRAMINGHAM, MA (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of Perini Corp., a construction and real estate development company headquartered in Framingham, Mass., Thursday declared a regular quarterly dividend of $5.3125 per share on the issued and outstanding convertible exchangeable preferred shares of the corporation (equivalent to $.53125 per depositary share), payable on March 15, 1991, to shareholders of record on Feb. 22, 1991.

The company stated that management recently implemented a major cost reduction program resulting in a significant reduction in administrative personnel cost. Inability to date to conclude any significant real estate transactions, unanticipated problems on a pipeline construction project in Western Canada, and provision for the attendant severance payments resulting from the cost reduction program will in all likelihood contribute to a loss for both the fourth quarter of 1990 and the full fiscal year.

In view of the above and the uncertain outlook for the economy, the board of directors of the company omitted the declaration of the quarterly cash dividend on its common stock which would normally be paid in the first quarter of 1991.

The company's common shares outstanding total approximately 3,916,007.

Perini Corp. has 1,000,000 depositary convertible exchangeable preferred shares outstanding, each representing 1/10th share of $21.25 convertible exchangeable preferred stock.

FERNANDINA BEACH, FL (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - In response to a televised news report last night on the body armour industry, American Body Armor & Equipment (NASDAQ - ''ABAE'') said Thursday that the company is confident that all its products meet federal standards and that while an FBI alert raised the concern that some companies may have shipped altered vests that failed to meet safety tests, ABA has always provided its customers only with products that have met industry standards.

The company said that, in the vests it shipped, it used ballistic panel models that had previously been both tested and certified, but that the federal standards-setting agency, the National Institute of Justice (NIJ), and the company had in the past disagreed on the need for recertification of vests with different cover materials or positioning of vest labels.

However, the company has since accepted NIJ's interpretation of the criteria and recently has style-certified all models of its vests.

The news report also referred to a dispute between the city of Houston and the company regarding vests purchased by the Houston Police Department. The report failed to state that the dispute goes back to 1988 and that, while there has been no resolution as yet, Houston police officers continue to wear ABA vests and two Houston officers have been saved in the line of duty while wearing their ABA vests.

The company added that the lives of close to 200 law enforcement officers across the nation have been saved because the officers were wearing ABA vests.

ABA said that a directive mentioned in the news report by the New York City Police Department to its personnel to cease wearing any body armor manufactured by ABA was based on the mistaken belief that NIJ had concluded that ABA vests did not meet NIJ standards.

The company reaffirmed that NIJ had not concluded that ABA vests failed to meet federal standards. ABA is vigorously seeking to reverse this inaccurate communication, as it is concerned about the impact on ABA and its reputation.

Regarding the news report's statement that an FBI criminal investigation of the body armor industry is pending, ABA said it is aware that an investigation is underway of certain elements of the industry, but it has no information that any such investigation is directed at ABA.

The company also reported that, under new majority ownership and management since the beginning of this year, it is generating record revenues and is projecting the fourth quarter of 1990 to be the biggest revenue quarter in the company's history. ABA stated that the backlog of orders for its products exceeds $3 million and is the largest backlog in the company's 20-year history.

The company also noted that its new auditors, Deloitte & Touche, retained by the new management, had set up a 1989 year-end reserve for the Houston suit in the event that the company does not prevail in this matter, but that the company is confident no judgement will be rendered against it.

INGLEWOOD, CA (DEC. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - To ensure Hollywood Park stockholders the right to vote for directors committed to selling the Hollywood Park companies and seeking the highest price for their shares, Hollywood Park Operating Co. and five independent directors Thursday filed a suit against Hollywood Part Realty Enterprises Inc. demanding the right to nominate an alternative slate of directors for election at the upcoming annual meeting.

By preventing shareholders from nominating and voting for an opposing slate of directors, the Realty Co.'s directors are seeking to ''entrench themselves in office, to usurp and preempt corporate decisions that properly belong to stockholders, and to thwart the wishes of the majority of stockholders,'' according to the suit.

The suit argues that stockholders deserve a clear choice between the commitment by the Operating Co. to maximize shareholder values by seeking a buyer for the companies and R. D. Hubbard's efforts to acquire control of the companies without offering shareholders a price for their shares.

The Operating Co. believes that, despite Hubbard's denials, his true objective is to ''obtain working control of the companies' boards, so that he will be in a position to acquire the companies in a going private transaction from the inside, without paying full value or allowing free competitive bidding.''

The suit notes that Hubbard had previously sought to overturn Realty's requirement that stockholders' candidates for directors be nominated within seven days of the announcement of an annual meeting. On Nov. 19, however, Hubbard was given a seat on Realty's board under an agreement that the board would support a slate of directors aligned with Hubbard. Hubbard now refuses to open up the nominating process.

The suit argues that shareholders must be given a reasonable opportunity to respond to major events in the management of a company, including the ability to nominate competing candidates to the board. The filing cites the Realty Board's sudden change-of-position to supporting Hubbard's takeover efforts and the inclusion of Hubbard on the Board as material events tha must give shareholders the right to nominate new Board candidates.

The suit was filed today in Deleware State Court against the Realty Co., Hubbard, and his associates on the Realty Board.

In a separate court action, the United States District Court in Los Angeles has denied a request by Hubbard for a temporary restraining order to enjoin management from making statements about the possibility that Hubbard would take Hollywood Park private if he wins the current proxzy fight.

By MICHAEL STRAUSS - Comtex Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) COMTEX - The General Accounting Office said today the Resolution Trust Corp. has reached a critical stage in its ability to sell real estate assets from thrifts under its control.

"In the area of real estate, they (RTC) are just getting started," said Charles Bowsher, comptroller general of the GAO. "We think the oversight board has done its job in setting policies, now we have to see does it work?"

The GAO, the investigative branch of Congress, said real estate assets under RTC's control totalled approximately $17 billion as of Sept. 30, 1990.

Although 80 percent of the RTC's assets are not in real estate, Bowsher said this category of assets is the most visible, and will likely be the most difficult to dispose of because many were the product of poor investment decisions and will have to be sold in local markets, many of which are depressed.

"We really won't know how the real estate is moving until management agreements are in place later this month," Bowsher said. "They are getting to the stage now where it should begin to pay off. They've got to have an organization that can deal with the customers. Give them time to see if this can work out."

The GAO has revised its estimate for the total cost of the thrift bailout from $325 billion to $370 billion, not including hundreds of billions of dollars in interest costs.

However, after appearing before the House Banking Committee this morning, Bowsher told reporters he believes the tab will ultimately mushroom to $500 billion.

"When you're in a recession you can't dispose of these assets as when you are in a strong economy," Bowsher said. "If you don't move these assets, they tend to deteriorate on you and you have costs in trying to maintain them. Five hundred billion (dollars) is a more complete picture."

The GAO says it will have a performance assessment of the RTC, the agency responsible for managing the nation's failed thrifts, in February, 1991.

The RTC has been dogged by complaints about its operations, the slow pace of asset sales and the spiraling costs of the bailout. Congress appropriated $50 billion for the total S&L cleanup in 1989 but in October, 1990, the Bush administration, saying the RTC would exhaust its funds by early 1991, requested an additional $57 billion of new funding to carry the program through next September.

Since that time, the RTC has not received further funding from Congress, although it has $18.8 billion of borrowing authority available through a loophole in its draft legislation.

The chairman of the House Banking Committee, Texas Democrat Henry Gonzalez, has said that additional funding will not go forward until Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady appears before his panel to explain the administration's funding requests.

Brady refused to appear before the committee shortly before the 101st Congress adjourned in October and has signalled a willingness to testify only as part of the five-man RTC Oversight Board, which is required by law to appear before both the House and Senate on a semiannual basis.

However, Gonzalez has asserted that Brady must appear alone in order to address and clear up the funding issue.

"I have offered the secretary a range of four or five or six dates in January " Gonzalez said. "It is our hope he will agree."

MOSCOW (DEC. 6) - Newly appointed Soviet Interior Minister Boris Pugo on Thursday called on the population to support the police in its crackdown on crime.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev has called for "decisive measures" against "those who try to take advantage of the complexities and difficulties of present times," he said in a televised address on the main evening news program.

Mr. Pugo, who is also a member of the communist party secretariat, said Mr. Gorbachev had ordered him to ready all forces for a crackdown on "organised crime, banditism, corruption, speculation, hooliganism and other crimes".

"I call on Soviet public opinion, on the country's entire population and on the mass media to give maximum support to the internal ministry in its fight against crime," Mr. Pugo said.

"The militia (police) and internal ministry troops will make every effort to bring order to the country, in line with the constitution and the law so as to defend citizens and ensure the process of perestroika," he said.

He also said that authorities would take all necessary measures to protect policemen in the carrying out of their duties.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) - Iraq has positioned 30,000 more troops and 200 additional tanks in Kuwait and southern Iraq, while 10,000 more U.S. troops reached the Gulf area, the Pentagon announced Thursday.

Defense Department spokesman Bob Hall said a total of 480,000 Iraqi soldiers were now positioned in Kuwait and nearby areas of Iraq. Mr. Hall said the Iraqi reinforcements sent mainly from areas bordering Iran.

The Pentagon spokesman said Iraq now had pushed its line of defensive troops further west of the Kuwaiti border, a move tailored to challenge a possible flanking move by U.S. or allied troops trying to get around the triple layer of Iraqi defenses in Kuwait.

In his statement to the Senate Armed Services Committee Monday, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff General Colin Powell said Iraq had placed 450,000 troops in and around Kuwait equipped with 3,800 tanks. Mr. Hall said Iraq had deployed 200 more tanks, for a total of 4,000.

Mr. Hall said Iraq currently had some 2,500 armored troop carriers and infantry fighting vehicles in the area around and including Kuwait, up 300 from the total Gen. Powell had cited to the Senate committee. Mr. Hall said Iraqi artillery pieces also were increased by 200 to a total 2,700.

The Defense Department spokesman announced as well that there were currently more than 250,000 U.S. troops in the Gulf region, up 10,000 from the last figure released by the department November 29.

BRUSSELS (DEC. 6) - European Community negotiators Thursday rejected a compromise proposal to cut farm support by 30 percent on a commodity by commodity basis over five years with 1990 as a base period.

In nominal terms, the proposed reduction would be twice as deep as the one offered by the EC, but substantially less than cuts advocated by the United States, in both cases for different base periods of 10 years.

EC farm commissioner Ray MacSharry said it was "not a basis for discussion", a view echoed by the British and Irish farm ministers.

A U.S. source said the proposal was on the agenda of a restricted session Thursday night of a ministerial working party on agriculture chaired by Matts Hellstroem of Sweden. It was contained in a chairman's "non-paper" drawn up by the Swedish minister after all-night private consultations.

The paper proposed specific commitments for gradual cuts in internal support and a lowering of import barriers, as well as for "export competition", a term covering export aids or subsidies.

Chief U.S. negotiator Carla Hills welcomed the call for separate commitments for each of the three categories of support. The EC has insisted on a global commitment covering all of them.

But a U.S. source said the American delegation was not happy with all aspects of the "non-paper", entitled "elements for negotiation of a draft agreement" on farm trade reform.

BEIJING (DEC. 6) - China called on Phnom Penh on Thursday to stop creating problems in efforts to settle the 12-year-old Cambodian conflict.

"We hereby urge once again the Phnom Penh side to ... take a practical attitude ... rather than creating difficulties and making it impossible to achieve a comprehensive, just and reasonable settlement of the Cambodian question at an early date," foreign ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing told a weekly press briefing.

Mr. Li was apparently referring to Phnom Penh Prime Minister Hun Sen's remarks that his government would not accept being dismantled as part of a U.N.-sponsored peace plan which calls for a joint authority to be set up pending elections.

Mr. Li said recent talks between the five permanent U.N. Security Council members -- Britain, China, France, the Soviet Union and the United States -- and Indonesia in Paris marked an important step forward in the search for a settlement.

Phnom Penh's position was "in fact an attempt to negate the key elements of the framework document adopted by the five permanent Security Council members," Mr. Li said, adding that Phnom Penh was reneging on its commitment to the U.N. plan made at a September meeting of the four warring Cambodian factions in Jakarta.

The factions agreed in Jakarta to set up a Supreme National Council (SNC) to represent Cambodian sovereignty ahead of U.N.-supervised polls. They have since failed to agree on who should head the 12-member SNC.

(Meanwhile in Hanoi, officials said Vietnam still supported the U.N. peace plan and accepted that the world body had a major role to play in settling the conflict.

(A foreign ministry spokesman said charges that Vietnam had rejected the plan were "baseless" but added that the U.N. should respect Cambodia's sovereignty and its people's right to self-determination.

BRASILIA (DEC. 6) - A congressional panel that recently probed Brazil's nuclear program will propose approval of nuclear materials monitoring by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), officials said Thursday.

But the panel said it could not accept IAEA inspections of the country's nuclear programs.

This proposal will be put as an amendment to a bill the same congressional commission is writing to give effective control of the state's nuclear program to the National Congress.

Brazil and Argentina last week approved a Joint Verification and Control System for mutual monitoring of nuclear program activities, in anticipation of subsequent negotiations with the IAEA for installation of an overall international monitoring plan.

Congressmen did not wish to grant the IAEA access to Brazilian nuclear projects, citing a desire "to safeguard Brazilian technology."

They reserved their approvaql to international auditing of existing nuclear material in the country, including such supplies as enriched uranium and plutonium.

CANBERRA (DEC. 7) - Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke has warned that Asian-Pacific nations would consider forming their own trade bloc with the United States following the expected collapse of world trade talks in Europe.

Mr. Hawke told parliament Thursday that the failure of the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) talks could mean the world would be plunged into trade blocs.

"If as a result of the intransigence particularly of the Europeans the world is plunged into the insanity of blocs and groups the only responsible thing is for Australia to look to its interests."

That would include a trade bloc involving the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC) group, he said.

"We would have to look in this group for the way where we might be able to pool our interests," Mr. Hawke said.

APEC includes the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) (Malaysia, Singapore, Philippines, Indonesia, Brunei and Thailand) along with Japan, South Korea, the United States, Canada, Australia and New Zealand.

(Malaysian Primary Industries Minister Lim Keng Yaik said Thursday in Kuala Lumpur that Malaysia would initiate the setting up of an East Asian trading bloc if the Uruguay Round negotiations fail.)

Mr. Hawke initiated APEC last year to help increase economic cooperation in the region.

When Mr. Hawke proposed its formation in Seoul he said it was designed to strengthen free trade and not become a trade bloc.

But he also said that with a "worst case scenario" outcome of the GATT Uruguay Round, APEC may have to reconsider its role.

ROME (DEC. 6) - Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Tarek Aziz is to meet here with Italian Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti later this month, visiting Iraqi parliamentarians said Thursday.

Italy currently holds the revolving presidency of European Community institutions. Delegation leader Sultan Al Shawi said the talks would probably take place on December 19, after Mr. Aziz visits Washington for talks with U.S. President George Bush on the Gulf crisis.

Mr. Aziz is also due to see Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis, Mr. Shawi said.

(Earlier the official Iraqi News Agency reported that Mr. Aziz had been invited to visit Italy by Mr. de Michelis following a decision on Tuesday by ministers of the EC that the two men should meet.

After talks lasting more than an hour with Mr. Andreotti, centred on a statement by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that all foreign hostages in Iraq should be freed shortly, Mr. Shawi said the meeting had been "extremely positive and constructive."

He added that the Italian prime minister could do much to smooth the route to peace in the Middle East.

Earlier Thursday Mr. Shawi, here at the invitation of opposition left-wing MPs suggested that Europe could take a position over the Gulf crisis that was "independent of American interests" and favoring a peaceful solution to the conflict.

BEIJING (DEC. 6) - China welcomed Thursday the planned opening of direct talks between Iraq and the United States as well as Iraq and the European Community (EC), but called for diplomatic and economic pressures to continue.

"At a critical moment between war and peace, direct dialogue is useful and welcome. We hope that direct dialogue is conducive to a peaceful settlement of the Gulf crisis," foreign ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing told a press conference.

"At the same time, we hold that the international community should keep its political, diplomatic and economic pressures on Iraq and try to seek a peaceful settlement of the Gulf crisis through every opportunity and way."

Baghdad has accepted offers from the United States and Italy -- the current EC president -- for direct high-level talks on the Gulf crisis, triggered by Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) - Two weeks of testimony before Congress on the Gulf crisis have shown that the stiff congressional backing U.S. President George Bush enjoyed at the beginning of the crisis has fallen soggy.

Lawmakers are concerned that the United States has embarked on a path to war and the more troops that are deployed to the Gulf, and the more emphasis that is put on force, the harder it will be to turn back.

Democratic members of Congress have cited the reinforcement last month from 240,000 to almost 400,000 U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, and the U.S.-inspired U.N. resolution authorizing using force against Iraq if it did not withdraw from Kuwait by January 15, as evidence the administration was getting trigger happy before letting economic sanctions against Baghdad take effect.

Giving the sanctions more time to work also is a view echoed by seven former defense secretaries and former top military leaders.

Democratic senators Paul Sarbanes, of Maryland, and Joseph Biden, of Delaware, directed their worry and anger Wednesday at U.S. Secretary of State James Baker when he spoke before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Mr. Sarbanes said almost doubling U.S. forces in the Gulf "almost takes you irresistibly down the path of going to war."

Mr. Biden looked closer to home in his criticism of U.S. policy and Mr. Baker.

"You have a really tough job which is to persuade this Congress and the American people that their sons and daughters, the sons and daughters of this nation, should be sent into battle for that purpose," said Mr. Biden. "Frankly, Mr. Secretary, as you know, I don't think you made the case yet."

Georgia Democrat Sam Nunn, president of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has criticized the administration for being impatient and for passing from a defensive position to a more offensive position in Saudi Arabia.

For two weeks, former high-ranking military and government officials have warned in television interviews that a war with Iraq would be a bloody one and Washington has not fully considered the consequences.

LUXEMBOURG, (DEC 7) - The unemployment rate in the European Community (EC) registered a slight rise in October to 8.4 per cent, up from 8.3 per cent the previous month, the EC's bureau of community statistics Eurostat announced on Thursday.

Since last June, the jobless rate in the EC has remained stable with "very weak" fluctuations from one month to the next, but has shown a slight decline when measured against the previous year, a Eurostat communique said. The rate for October 1989 was 8.7 per cent.

The U.S. unemployment rate was 5.7 per cent in October of this year, up from 5.3 per cent in October 1989. In Japan the October rate remained unchanged at 2.2 per cent from the previous October.

Of the 12 nations in the community, only Britain, Demmark and Portugal have posted an increase in their unemployment figures over the past year.

For the whole of the EC, youth unemployment has dropped from 16.7 per cent in October of last year to 16 per cent in October of this year, Eurostat said.

In the territory of what was formerly West Germany, the tendency towards a drop in unemployment noted over the past few months has continued, according to Eurostat.

Figures from what was East Germany will be integrated into Eurostat tallies beginning next spring, the organization said.

According to statistics given by German authorities, 538,000 people were listed as seeking jobs in October in the five new eastern German states and in eastern Berlin.

WELLINGTON (DEC. 7) - New Zealand will permit up to 49.9 percent foreign ownership of television channels instead of the current 15 percent, Broadcasting Minister Maurice Williamson said.

He told Parliament late Thursday that legislation would be introduced before Christmas to change the rules.

New Zealand's only privately owned television network, TV3, is in receivership. NBC of the United States owns a seven per cent shareholding in the company.

Mr. Williamson said the loosening of foreign investment rules was in line with National Party "philosophy" and would have happened regardless of TV3's woes.

Foreign expertise was essential if the broadcasting industry was to expand into areas such as cable, satellite and high-definition television, he said.

WELLINGTON (DEC. 7) - A new natural discovery of gas and condensate has been made in New Zealand, Energy Minister John Luxton said Friday.

The Stratford-1A well is in Taranaki province, south of here, the site of New Zealand's commercial oil and gas fields.

Mr. Luxton said the well produced 5.5 million cubic feet (165,000 cubic meters) of gas and 360 barrels of condensate a day during the first drill stem test.

The government holds a 51 per cent interest in the well with Petrocorp, a subsidiary of Fletcher Challenge Ltd., holding 49 per cent.

Mr. Luxton said in a statement the results from Stratford-1A were very encouraging.

"During drilling several unexpected intervals that may be hydrocarbon-bearing were encountered. Testing of the other promising intervals is likely to take place over the next one to two weeks," he said.

LONDON (DEC. 7) - Sales of new cars in Britain were down 18 per cent in November compared with the figure a year earlier, and fell 12 per cent over the first 11 months of the year, the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders announced here on Thursday.

Despite this serious setback, however, the SMMT said the British market should absorb over two million vehicles this year, compared with 2.3 million last year.

Penetration of the market by foreign cars eased from 56.5 per cent in November 1989 to 54 per cent last month, while it also dropped slightly over 11 months from 57.1 to 56.9 per cent.

Last month 117,499 private cars were sold compared with 143,323 a year earlier. From January to November the total was 1.95 million against 2.21 million in the same period of 1989.

Figures published on Tuesday showed British automobile production climbing over the past few months in spite of the weakness of the domestic market, with the October figures up 19 per cent over those recorded a year earlier.

TOKYO (DEC. 7) - Japan's giant international telecommunications carrier Kokusai Denshin Denwa Co. (KDD) is to start a direct satellite service between Japan and North Korea on December 11, KDD officials said Friday.

The new service, approved by the Post and Telecommunications Ministry Friday, will include three telephone circuits, ten telex circuits and one telegraph circuit, they said.

KDD signed an agreement in Pyongyang on November 29 with North Korea's International Telecommunications Bureau to open a direct circuit via an Intelsat satellite over the Indian Ocean, replacing the current unstable radio short-wave links between the two countries.

Japan is currently moving towards warmer relations with North Korea.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japan's Toshiba Corp. said Thursday it had started building a new semiconductor plant expected to cost around 100 billion yen (750 million dollars) over the next two to three years.

The plant, located in the central city of Yokkaichio, is to produce next-generation memory chips to meet future demand among manufacturers of computers, office equipment and audio-visual equipment.

The company, Japan's second-biggest manufacturer of electric machinery, said it would start producing four-megabit dynamic random access memories (DRAM's) in March 1992 with capacity eventually reaching 3.5 million chips a month. The plant will also be able to produce 16-megabit DRAM's, it said.

Four-megabit DRAM's can store about 16 pages of newspaper text and are four times as powerful as the chips which now dominate the market.

Toshiba, which has just completed a new "clean room" at its main semiconductor plant at Oita in southern Japan, currently produces two million four-megabit DRAM's a month.

The company says it expects global demand to soar from 20 million chips this year to 120 million next year with worldwide production of four-megabit DRAM's surpassing the output of one-megabit DRAM's in 1993.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japanese sales of imported motor vehicles rose 8.9 per cent from a year earlier to 16,186 units in November, bolstered by sales of Japanese cars assembled in the United States, an industry association said Thursday.

The Japan Automobile Importers Association said that imports of cars alone rose nine per cent to 16,052 units. Sales of cars from the United States soared 150 per cent to 2,363 units, led by those produced by Japanese carmakers which jumped from 59 units in November last year to 1,068 units.

German car sales rose 0.6 per cent to 9,841 units in the same period but sales of British cars dipped 4.4 per cent to 1,400 units while sales of French cars dropped 12.8 per cent to 886 units, the association said.

PRETORIA (DEC. 6) - South Africa's Foreign Minister Pik Botha on Thursday slammed a report by the United Nations Special Committee Against Apartheid as a concoction of outdated prejudices.

The report, central to the U.N. General Assembly's annual debate on apartheid, which began in New York on Wednesday, merely echoed the policies of the black nationalist African National Congress (ANC) and took no account of changes since President Frederik de Klerk assumed office in September 1989.

In a letter to U.N. President Guido de Marco, Mr. Botha called the debate "inappropriate" and "counter-productive."

Decrying the report's promotion of continued "measures aimed at pressurising the South African government into moving in a direction to which it is already committed," Mr. Botha said: "We are aware that this echoes the ANC."

"However, the ANC will one day be required to account to its people for the misery this political strategy has created for them.

"Maintaining sanctions simply causes a delay in restoring our ability to provide jobs and essential services in such fields as education, health and housing to bridge the gap between the haves and have-nots.

"The government requires no inducement to continue the process of constitutional change, as events of the past 12 months have demonstrated," he said. "Our commitment is final."

LONDON (DEC. 6) - British Coal expects to earn 100 million pounds (195 million dollars) this year, its first profit in 13 years, according to its chairman, Lord Haslam.

The positive outlook is expected to improve the chances that British Coal will be privatised.

"Industrial action is rare," said Lord Haslam, who retires soon. "Such disputes as there have been in recent times have been localised and brief. Absenteeism is at record low levels.

Output per manshift had risen from 2.37 tons to more than five tonnes, he said Wedneday adding: "The workforce is younger, fitter and healthier than it's ever been."

JAMBA, Angola (DEC. 6) - The 15-year-long civil war in Angola, which has claimed some 600,000 lives and which has devastated the economy, has effectively ended, rebel leader Jonas Savimbi said Wednesday.

"We consider sincerely that for us, the war is over," he told a press conference at the headquarters of his National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) guerrilla movement in this south-eastern military encampment.

A de facto ceasefire will immediately exist in the war-ravaged country if, as expected, the Marxist ruling party opts for multi-party democracy during its congress curently being held in the capital Luanda, Mr. Savimbi added.

But he warned that UNITA and other political groups would have to be recognised by the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA), which imposed Soviet-style one-party rule at Angola's independence in 1975.

Opening the congress on Tuesday, Angolan President Jose Eduardo dos Santos said the MPLA "will pursue its reforms until we achieve a multi-party system and a market economy".

He added that "some progress" had been made in the latest round of peace negotiations with UNITA in Portugal - a view endorsed by Mr. Savimbi during Wednesday's press conference attended by journalists flown into and out of Jamba under cover of night.

"We have made good progress ... Before, we were talking through a mediator, now we are talking to the government," Mr. Savimbi said.

He revealed that technical aspects of a ceasefire had been discussed at the talks in Portugal on November 18.

"MPLA forces would be confined to bases while we, being a guerrilla army, would be confined to areas," he said.

But differences still exist over the question of international monitoring, with UNITA favouring the Namibian model in which the United Nations oversees a ceasefire and the process leading up to free, fair and verifiable elections.

SYDNEY (DEC. 6) - British Aerospace and Australian domestic carrier Ansett Airlines opened Thursday what will be the world's largest flying school, especially designed to train pilots from the Asian Pacific rim.

The 70 million dollar (54 million U.S.) school, based at Tamworth 400 miles (700 kilometres) northwest of here, is modelled on a college at Prestwick in Scotland.

College Chairman Alan Notley said that all students would be sponsored by an airline. "The emphasis is on producing airline pilots, not just people who want to fly.

The school will accommodate 224 students, the first of whom start in a year's time.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Unitika, one of Japan's top textile groups, said Thursday it was negotiating with the French firm Dolfuss Mieg and Cie (DMC) to set up a joint venture in France to produce synthetic fibers for textiles.

The joint venture, to be owned 49 per cent by Unitika and 51 per cent by DCM, should start production in 1992 near Lyons with an investment of 13 billion yen (30 million dollars), the economic newspaper Nihon Keizai Shimbun reported.

Annual production is expected to be 30 million square meters (36 million sq yards) of textiles produced from polyester fiber imported from Japan and finished and dyed at the factory in southeastern France, it said.

Unitika officials refused to confirm the details reported by the Nihon Keizai Shimbun.

The Japanese company, which also specializing in plastic film, is an affiliate of the Sanwa Bank and was formed in 1969 by a merger between Nichibo and Nippon Rayon.

It had a turnover of 264.4 billion yen (two billion dollars) and profits of 13.6 billion yen (30 million dollars) by the close of the fiscal year on March 31.

BEIJING (DEC. 6) - The Chinese government has approved a new bill maintaining preferential treatment in taxation to foreign-funded firms, the China Daily reported Thursday.

The proposed law, which comes as Chinese leaders say they are determined to pursue economic liberalization, guarantees joint ventures set up with foreign capital that they will not face increased taxation, the daily said.

It also aims to harmonize liberal legislation introduced since the early 1980s the official English-language newspaper reported, but gave no further details.

The bill, which was approved by the government on Wednesday, will now go to the standing committee of the National People's Congress.

Chinese newspapers had reported Monday that the government would announce in early 1991 amendments to existing legislation on the termination of joint-venture contracts and the possibility of foreign investors recovering their capital.

TEL AVIV (DEC. 6) - Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir left Thursday on a 24-hour visit to Britain before flying on to the United States, where the Gulf crisis is expected to figure high on his agenda.

Mr. Shamir is scheduled to meet British Prime Minister John Major and leaders of the Jewish community in Britain.

In the United States, he will meet President George Bush, Secretary of State James Baker and Defence Secretary Dick Cheney, sources close to Mr. Shamir said.

Mr. Baker reaffirmed Wednesday that the United States would support Israel if it were attacked by Iraq.

"If there is an unprovoked attack against Israel, there would be an appropriate response from the United States," Mr. Baker told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Israel is demanding a commitment from the United States to put an end to the "Iraqi military threat," a diplomatic source in Jerusalem said quoting Foreign Minister David Levy.

Mr. Levy has reportedly urged the U.S. ambassador to Israel, William Brown, to relay the message to the Bush Administration.

Israel has kept a low profile in the Gulf crisis, but the foreign minister's message was seen as a veiled warning to Washington against any compromise that would leave Iraq's military potential intact.

Israel has repeatedly threatened to strike Iraq if its interests were undermined and Baghdad has issued similar warnings while insisting that a solution to the Gulf should be linked to the Palestinian question.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japan's biggest aluminium producer Nippon Light Metal Co. Ltd. has set up a Malaysian venture with a unit of Canada's Alcan Aluminium Ltd. to make airconditioner parts, a company spokeswoman said Thursday.

"There has been strong demand for Japanese manufacturers of household electric appliances which have expanded into Southeast Asia to produce pre-coated fins locally and to raise local content," a statement said.

Alcan's holding company in Canada owns 45 per cent of Nippon Light and 64 per cent of the Malaysian partner.

AYODHYA, India (DEC. 6) - Indian police arrested some 350 women here Thursday as they marched on a disputed mosque at the start of a renewed Hindu militant crusade to replace the 16th-century shrine with a temple.

The slogan-chanting women, volunteers of the fundamentalist Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP, World Hindu Council), were peaceful as they gave themselves up for arrest within 400 yards (metres) of the heavily-guarded mosque.

"The (temple) movement will go on, but now is the time to court arrest," their leader Jagadguru Ramanujacharya told the marchers on a loudhailer before they were detained and driven away in three police buses.

Singing devotional songs and chanting slogans in praise of Lord Rama, the women had set off on a two kilometre (1.2 mile) route to the mosque which Hindus believe is the birthplace of Rama, an incarnation of their god Vishnu.

Hundreds of local residents sporting saffron-coloured bandannas came out to shower the marchers with rose petals and gaped at the procession from rooftops and windows, witnesses said.

The women were halted at a spot decided in advance by organisers and the police after inching their way forward for 90 minutes.

"I, the district magistrate, hereby place you under arrest," administrator K. Chandramouli announced on a loudhailer.

Separately, some 18 Hindu youths managed to penetrate police barricades and enter the disputed shrine where they threatened to stage a sit-in, witnesses said. But they left voluntarily on request by the police.

TEL AVIV (DEC. 6) - A court jailed a senior rabbi for six months on Thursday after finding him guilty of "sexually blackmailing" women who sought his counsel and of having sex in a synagogue, court sources said.

Rabbi Haim Pardes, chief of Tel Aviv's rabbinical tribunal, committed "licentious acts" with women who appeared before him and he confessed to having had sex in a synagogue, according to the sources.

He was also given an 18-month suspended prison sentence and fined 25,000 shekels (12,500 dollars) for "shamefully taking advantage of his judicial status and of the distress of the women who appeared before him".

Rabbinical tribunals in Israel are charged with marital affairs and conversions to Judaism.

Mrs. Shulat Aloni, an MP for the civil rights party, argued that the sentence against Rabbi Pardes was too lenient and called for a review by the High Court.

HANOI (DEC. 6) - Total oil production from the Bach Ho oil field off Vietnam's southern coast has reached five million tonnes, the official Quan Doi Nhan Dan newspaper said Thursday.

The White Tiger, or Bach Ho, offshore oil field began production five years ago and is operated by the Soviet-Vietnamese joint venture, Vietsopetro.

Vietnamese officials estimated Vietsopetro's annual output would hit 3.5 million tonnes in 1991, more than one million tonnes up on this year.

They also predicted Vietsopetro would produce 25 million tonnes of oil over the next five years. Vietsopetro is the only oil company currently producing oil in Vietnam.

Two representatives from French oil company Total were in Hanoi to discuss building an oil refinery with an annual capacity of five million tonnes in the country's south, diplomatic sources said here.

Industry sources said Anglo-Dutch giant Shell and Japanese trading house Nissho Iwai were also in the running for the project, which is conceived to meet Vietnam's immediate oil needs of about three million tonnes.

Western sources here said the World Bank has already rejected the project, saying there are enough refineries in Southeast Asia and suggesting that Vietnam have its oil refined in Thailand.

Vietnam lacks heavy refining capacity and exports almost all its crude oil, mainly to Japan, while the Soviet Union has supplied about 80 per cent of its oil needs up until now.

The Soviet Union has said it will halve its oil exports to Vietnam in 1991.

NAIROBI (DEC. 6) - Telephones went dead Thursday in government ministries, authorities, state concerns, hospitals, radio and news agency offices as Kenya's postal authority carried out its threat to cut off bad bill-payers.

Those affected owe a total of well over a quarter of a million dollars in unpaid bills. At least eleven ministries were cut off, as was Nairobi's Kenyatta National Hospital, the country's biggest.

The action was backed by President Daniel arap Moi, who had given people with outstanding bills - some going back for years - until November 15 to get them paid or be cut off.

Post offices quickly began filling with customers suddenly urgently seeking to pay their bills and get reconnected, press reports said.

Authorities in the town of Nyeri to the north of Nairobi got their revenge by turning off water supplies to all postal employees and buildings.

JAKARTA (DEC. 6) - Indonesia announced measures Thursday to privatise the Jakarta Stock Exchange (JSE) in order to boost the country's capital markets.

The government-owned Stock Market Executive Agency (Bapepam) which manages the JSE, would be replaced by a body that would merely supervise and ensure orderly operation of the exchange, the finance ministry said in a statement.

The new sets of rules, which would be effective as of January 2, also made listing procedures easier and opened mutual funds operation to the private sector, according to the statement.

A presidential decree on which the new regulations were based stipulated that "the stock exchange operation can be entrusted to the private sector."

The JSE is the oldest and by far the largest of Indonesia's two markets. The Surabaya Stock Exchange, opened only last year, was set up by private companies in anticipation of the latest rulings.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japan's Matsushita Electric Industrial Co. will develop and sell an engineering workstation based on the SPARC microprocessor of the U.S. company Sun Microsystems, the Japanese company said.

Under a basic agreement reached between the two companies, the Japanese electronics giant will also sell Sun workstations in Japan under its own name, according to a Matsushita announcement.

Sun Microsystems, based in Mountain View, California, is the world's top workstation maker with a market share of 30 per cent.

Matsushita will be licensed to use the design concept of Sun's reduced instruction set computing (RISC) microprocessor, SPARC, and its operating system with Japanese language capability, the announcement said.

It will also put on the Japanese market in April workstations supplied by the Japanese subsidiary of Sun Microsystems with annual sales targeted at 1,000 units in the initial year.

BRUSSELS (DEC. 6) - NATO defense ministers convened here Thursday for two days of talks focussing on the Gulf crisis and a new military strategy taking into account the end of the Cold War.

At the meeting U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney will repeat a request to North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies for logistical help for U.S. troops in the Gulf, according to a senior U.S. NATO official.

The United States reportedly need ships and planes to transport the extra troops being sent to the Gulf to boost the total number of U.S. soldiers there to 400,000 by the beginning of next year. The official said the United States also needed "chemical warfare protection suits".

Since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2 several NATO members, notably Britain, France, Germany and Italy, have already supplied the United States with roll-on-roll-off vessels or planes to transport heavy equipment such as tanks.

But the official said "the airlift and sealift requirements would be there for a long time."

He said the United States had "requirements for transportation assistance through ports in Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands". Between 75,000 and 100,000 U.S. soldiers, almost half the total stationed in Europe, have already been sent to the Gulf through these ports or will be by year's end.

Defense ministers, in a joint meeting of the Defense Planning Committee and the Nuclear Planning Group, will also discuss cuts in short-range nuclear forces (SNF) which have a range of less than 500 kilometers (310 miles) and are mostly deployed in Germany.

The United States and the Soviet Union were to start talks on these cuts after the signing in Paris last month of the treaty on conventional troop reductions in Europe (CFE) under an agreement reached at a NATO summit in London earlier this year.

Senior NATO officials said that a formal decision on a reform of the Alliance's military strategy should not be expected before early next year.

LONDON (DEC. 6) - Britain on Thursday welcomed reports that President Saddam Hussein would release foreign hostages in Iraq but said he must also fulfil the other United Nations resolutions.

"We greatly welcome (the news). We have been pressing throughout for the

A Foreign Office spokesman said that if Mr. Hussein released the hostages "it would mean that he will have fulfilled one of the security council's resolutions".

"There are others for him to fulfil", he said.

The spokesman said the British embassy authorities in Baghdad had been informed of the plan to release foreign hostages by Iraqi officials earlier Thursday.

Britain said there were a total of 443 British nationals still in Kuwait, six of whom were recently detained by Iraqi troops, and 725 in Iraq, 343 of which were being held at strategic sites.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (DEC. 6) - Haitian presidential favourite, Father Jean-Bertrand Aristide has called for the arrest of Neo-Duvalierist leader Doctor Roger Lafontant following an attack Wednesday on a political rally at which five people were killed and 54 injured.

Father Aristide called on Radio Antilles International for Dr. Lafontant's arrest within hours of an attack on a rally he had held at Petionville south of Port-au-Prince.

According to witnesses, unidentified gunmen drove by the rally site, where thousands had turned out in support of the Roman Catholic priest, and fired indiscriminately into the crowd. The shooting was followed by a powerful blast.

The bodies of two young women and three youths were later seen at Port-au-Prince hospital. Several other people had serious burns and Jacques Bernrdin, an official of the National Front for Change and Democracy which supports Fr. Aristide, was shot in the attack, the private Radio-Metropole said.

Fr. Aristide had left the rally just before the attack.

Fr, Aristide, who is tipped to win the December 16 presidential election, accused Mr. Lafontant of sponsoring the attack and called for him to be arrested for issuing "threats to the democratic sector" on a private television channel on Tuesday night.

PARIS (DEC. 6) - Iran and France showed their desire to settle financial differences over the French Eurodif uranium plant on Thursday during a visit by Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati.

"We discussed bilateral relations, including financial differences and difficulties, and the two countries decided to settle these problems and to do away with them," Mr. Velayati said after a meeting lasting 80 minutes with Prime Minister Michel Rocard.

The Iranian minister, who had met French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas late on Wednesday, also met Finance Minister Piere Beregevoy on Thursday.

"When one talks, there are always solutions," Mr. Beregevoy said.

Mr. Rocard raised bilateral economic disputes, human rights, and the Gulf crisis with Mr. Velayati, French officials said.

The financial problem centred on a residual amount and interest arising from a loan of one billion dollars by the Shah of Iran to France in 1974 for construction of the Eurodif uranium enrichment plant at Tricastin in France.

France has repaid 630 million dollars. Eurodif holds that Iran did not meet obligations to buy 10 per cent of enriched uranium produced by the plant and to participate in the cost of operating the plant.

A French consortium of Framatome, Alsthom and Spie-Batignolles, holds that it was prejudiced after the Iranian Islamic revolution in 1979 by the breaking of an agreement for the construction of two nuclear power stations in Iran.

Since 1986 they have claimed 14 billion francs (about 2.8 billion dollars) in damages and interest from Iran, representing five billion francs for the consortium and nine billion francs concerning Eurodif.

On Thursday the two sides confirmed their desire to reach a settlement quickly.

A procedure was agreed and the two sides hope to make rapid progress and to reach agreement at ministerial level.

Informed sources said that the two negotiators, French foreign ministry official Francois Scheer and Iranian Vice Foreign Minister Mahmud Vaezi, were due to meet in Paris soon.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japan's Honshu Paper Co. Ltd. has met with a Singapore investor who has acquired options on a third of its shares but is still unsure of his motives, a spokesman for the leading paper manufacturer said Thursday.

The spokesman said Oei Hong Leong, president of diversified property, shipping and manufacturing concern United Industrial Corp., visited Honshu's headquarters in Tokyo Wednesday but refused to disclose details of the talks.

"At this stage, he is only holding options and is not yet a shareholder," he said. "Our decision depends on whether he exercises them or not."

Mr. Oei, the son of an Indonesian tycoon and now a resident of Singapore, acquired the options through a family-owned company called Dituka (HK) Ltd.

The options carry a strike price of 3,000 yen (22.55 dollars), compared with Thursday's close of 2,130 yen (16 dollars), and expire on February 28. Options carry the right but not the obligation to buy or sell a company's shares.

If exercised, a move which would require more than 340 billion yen (2.6 billion dollars), Dituka would become the biggest shareholder in Japan's fifth-largest paper manufacturer with an estimated stake of 33.4 per cent.

The Singapore businessman told a news conference in Tokyo Wednesday he had no plan to greenmail the company by exercising the options and forcing management to buy back the shares at a higher price, news reports said.

Mr. Oei reportedly said he was interested in Honshu's extensive property interests and was seeking a "friendly tie-up" with the company. He was also quoted as saying he would raise funds from United Industrial as well as non-Japanese banks if he decided to exercise the options.

Japanese news reports meanwhile said Mr. Oei may be interested in forging a link with an Indonesian paper manufacturer owned by his brother while others say he may be acting on behalf of a group of Japanese speculators.

KUALA LUMPUR (DEC. 6) - Malaysia banned imports of livestock from Thailand with immediate effect on Thursday, after eight head of cattle brought in from its northern neighbour were found to have foot-and-mouth disease.

The eight animals were among 29 imported on November 28 and the disease was spotted when they were in quarantine, Bernama news agency said.

The ban will remain in force until the veterinary services department is certain that cows, buffaloes, sheep and goats from Thailand are free of the disease, Bernama quoted the department's director-general Ahmad Mustaffa Babjee as saying.

KUALA LUMPUR (DEC. 6) - Malaysia's economy is expected to slow down in the early 1990s because it is overheating after several years of rapid expansion, the Malaysian Institute of Economic Research (MIER) said Thursday.

The MIER, an independent think-tank, predicted that Malaysia's economic growth rate would fall from 10 per cent this year to 6.3 per cent next year, five per cent in 1992 and hover around 4.8 per cent between 1993 and 1997.

Growth is expected to pick up after that to reach seven per cent by the year 2000, according to papers presented at the MIER's annual national outlook conference.

The MIER said other factors that would cause a slow-down were the high inflation rate, a war in the Gulf, a global slowdown, rising protectionism and formation of trade blocs.

The petrochemicals industry will be one of the fastest-growing industries in Malaysia over a five-year period from 1992 with investments amounting to more than five billion Malaysian dollars (1.85 billion U.S.), the institute said.

Figures released last week by the trade ministry showed investment approvals for the first 10 months of the year amounted to 33.45 billion Malaysian dollars (12.4 billion U.S.), exceeding the year's target by three billion dollars (1.1 billion U.S.).

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party approved a diluted plan Thursday for levying a new tax on land ownership, which analysts said is too conservative to stop land price spirals.

The conservative party's panel on tax reforms said it has set the land holding tax at 0.2 per cent for 1992 and 0.3 per cent for 1993 and after, against an originally proposed rate of 0.5 per cent.

Masajuro Shiokawa, chairman of the panel, modified the rate in face of stiff objections from the ruling party concerned about its performance in local elections in April, press reports said.

According to the plan, the new tax will be levied on properties worth one billion yen (7.7 million dollars) or more, against an original floor of 500 million yen (3.8 million dollars).

The proposed tax will also have several exemptions.

It will not apply to land owned by central or local governments or that being used for public purposes and residential lots of 1,000 square meters or less owned by private citizens will be also exempt.

Thus the nex tax will affect up to 5,000 individual and corporate taxpayers, mostly big businesses, analysts said.

"We protest against the scheme that has diluted the tax plan," the main opposition Japan Socialist Party said in a statement. "At such a low tax rate and with expanded exemptions, we can hardly expect the tax to have impact on land prices."

PARIS (DEC. 6) - Several movements of Chinese dissidents abroad are organizing an international campaign to have human rights respected in China, the Federation for Democracy in China (FDC) announced here Thursday.

An FDC representative said the high point of the campaign would be demonstrations in several countries on Sunday. The French branch of the FDC and another dissident group is meanwhile collecting signatures and sending letters to French politicians to alert them to the state of human rights in China and notably the trials of dissidents there.

Two Chinese intellectuals, Wang Juntao and Chen Ziming, have recently been officially charged in China, with four other dissidents, Wang Dan, Liu Xiaobo, Bao Zunxin and Chen Xiaoping, in connection with their pro-democracy activities.

The FDC, which plans to hold its demonstration on Sunday outside the Chinese Embassy here, is calling for trials in open court, in the presence "of foreign observers and the international press".

Sunday's rally here will be attended by former FDC president, the political analyst Yan Jiaqi, and Chinese expatriates and national and international human rights organizations have been asked to take part.

NEW DELHI (DEC. 6) - A demonstration by about 4,000 Hindus who want to raze a mosque in the northern Indian city of Ayodhya and build a temple in its place was unexpectedly peaceful, the United News of India (Uni) news agency reported Thursday.

Uni said that about 20,000 Hindus who had gathered in the city obeyed police orders to stay away from the proposed construction site.

Of the approximately 4,000 Hindus defying the order, 1,161 who advanced to within 300 metres of the 462-year-old Babri Masjid mosque to protest peacefully against the government's efforts to prevent the construction of the temple were arrested by evening.

On October 30 and then again on November 2, several dozen radical Hindus trying to storm the site and tear down the mosque had been shot to death by police.

Jerusalem (DEC. 6) - Israel bolstered its military forces in the West Bank and Gaza Strip Thursday as senior army officers voiced fears that the three-year-old intifada was about to turn into an armed uprising.

Late Wednesday, armed Palestinans opened fire on a civilian bus riding to a West Bank Jewish settlement, while in Gaza a Jewish border policeman was injured by Palestinian gunfire. The attacks, in which three people were moderately injured, brought to 24 the number of times firearms have been used by Palestinians in the last three months in addition to the planting of 26 bombs.

Speaking on army radio, the military commander of the Rammalla area conceded that ''we have had an escalation''. But both Prime Minister Itzhak Shamir and Police Minister Ronnie Milo warned the Palestinians against increasing the violence any further.

''Violence will achieve nothing,'' Shamir told reporters before leaving for talks with British Prime Minister John Major and U.S. President George Bush. ''Israel will overcome this.''

Palestinian use of weapons, said Milo, ''would cause them to feel a mighty blow from the police and army.''

Security forces were also on the lookout for armed Jewish attacks on Palestinians as Jewish extremists commemorated the 30th mourning day after the murder of Rabbi Me'ir Kahane, leader of the racist Kach movement.

Two Palestinians were reported killed as suspected collaborators, army and Palestinians sources said. The dead were named as Hassan Hashash, 29, from the Balata refugee camp, and Hussein Sayed, a 50-year-old pharmacist from Ramallah.

Shops and businesses in most of the West Bank and Gaza Strip were closed as the extremist Islamic Jihad movement called a general strike to commemorate the third anniversary of the intifada.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) - Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, welcoming reports on Iraq's decision Thursday to release all foreign hostages, said he hoped for a peaceful settlement of the Gulf crisis based on U.N. resolutions.

"The government for its part will make every preparation, including the dispatch of aircraft, to realise an early homecoming of Japanese nationals," Mr. Kaifu said in a statement.

He said he hoped Iraq's decision would serve as a "first step toward a just and peaceful settlement of the present crisis" in accordance with resolutions by the U.N. Security Council.

The resolutions demand among others the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

TEHERAN (DEC. 6) - Several hundred people demonstrated here Thursday against a call for greater sexual freedom issued by President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani.

Islamic militants from districts in southern Teheran chanted slogans demanding "respect for Islamic laws" and a "struggle against corruption."

Several dozen women took part in the gathering in the center of the capital, as security forces deployed on sidestreets.

Tracts distributed at the rally recalled a warning against "a return to the situation of women before the Islamic revolution" of 1979 and appealed to "brave young Moslems to struggle against the spread of corrupt Western culture."

Mr. Rafsanjani at prayers last Friday issued a plea for a liberalization in Iran's attitude toward sex, arguing that "men and women should be able to see each other without having to be legally married."

His remarks came as a bombshell and triggered an outcry among hardline conservatives.

The president's sermon suggested that sexual relations between unmarried couples, currently punishable by flogging, should be permitted.

AMMAN (DEC. 6) - Political choices made by Jordan both in the Gulf crisis and on the Palestinian question have provoked a drastic cut in foreign aid and are directly responsible for the nation's current economic crisis, observers said.

King Hussein of Jordan, a traditional ally of the United States, has chosen to save his kingdom's very existence by sacrificing its prosperity, the observers explained.

Jordan's foreign debt has risen steadily since 1988 and now amounts to 8.3 billion dollars. Jordanian officials forecast that as a result of the Gulf crisis they will lose a billion dollars in 1990 and 2.5 billion in 1991.

King Hussein went against U.S. wishes where the Palestinian question is concerned, when in July 1988 he decided to cut links between Jordan and the West Bank. The U.S. wanted him to dispute the PLO's monopoly on representation for the Palestinians.

As a result, the United States cut financial aid from 9.5 million Jordanian dinars (28.5 million dollars at the then rate of exchange) in 1987 to 5.5 million (now worth 8.25 million dollars) in 1989, according to Jordanian central bank figures.

In August 1988 the Jordanian dinar, which was worth three dollars, began a steady slide until it is now worth only half that.

In Jordanian political circles it is believed the United States then incited rich Arab nations to cut their aid programmes to the kingdom.

Saudi Arabia, which gave 9.4 million dinars (28.2 million dollars at the then rate of exchange) in 1987, gave only three million dinars (now worth 4.5 million dollars) in 1989 and Kuwait, which gave 3.1 million dinars (9.3 million dollars) in 1987 gave just 645,000 dinars (967,500 dollars) last year.

By refusing to join the anti-Iraq coalition centered around the United States and Saudi Arabia, King Hussein took into consideration that Iraq had in the past decade become his nation's chief trading partner. Jordan's only sea port, Aqaba, earned more than two-thirds of its income from Iraqi-generated business before the invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

WARSAW (DEC. 6) - The U.S. automotive giant General Motors finished two days of talks here Thursday on the possibility of setting up a car assembly plant in Poland.

The Polish press agency Pap reported that the talks concerned the possibility that Opel cars, those made by Gm's subsidiary in Germany, could be manufactured at the plant to be located in Warsaw.

The Gm delegation met top-level Polish government officials as well as with presidential candidate Lech Walesa, Pap said.

Poland currently produces Fiat cars under license. The Italian company is also interested in reaching a new license production agreement with Warsaw for medium-sized cars.

Disclosure of the Gm-Poland negotiations came a day after the Opel company, in Ruesselsheim, Germany, said it had been given the green light by Gm to build a car factory in the former East Germany in what would be a 660 million dollar investment.

LUSAKA (DEC. 6) - Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines (ZCCM) made a pre-tax profit of 164.5 million U.S. dollars for the quarter ended September 30, against one of 68.3 million dollars in the corresponding quarter of 1989, the company's spokesman announced on Thursday.

The spokesman said after taking into account exchange losses, interest, taxation and other items, the company made a net profit of 31.2 million dollars. In the same quarter last year, ZCCM made a net profit of 19.8 million dollars.

The spokeman also said total revenue for the quarter in question was 409.2 million dollars, an increase of about 117 per cent over the 188 million dollars achieved in the September quarter of 1989.

"The higher sales revenue was mainly due to depreciation of the kwacha (the Zambian currency) against major currencies," said the spokesman.

He also said copper production for the quarter under review, at 111,942 tonnes was 1,366 tonnes lower than the 113,308 tonnes achieved in the previous corresponding quarter.

Ninety per cent of Zambia's foreign exchange earnings comes from copper exports.

LONDON (DEC. 6) - British customs officers have seized a record 203 kilos (447 pounds) of heroin, worth some 20 million pounds (35 million dollars), hidden aboard two Turkish lorries in Dover, they announced Thursday.

A customs spokesman said the lorry drivers were arrested and charged in the south-eastern English Channel port last Friday, but the operation had been kept secret until the arrest overnight Wednesday of a third man, a Turk, in London.

The haul, the biggest ever by British customs, brings to more than 500 kilos (1,000 pounds) the amount of heroin seized this year, another record. In October, Dover customs officers impounded 60 kilos of heroin brought in by another Turkish lorry.

All three vehicles, officially carrying textiles, had driven across Europe before arriving in England on ferries from Ostend in Belgium.

"This confirms our concern with the Balkan route, with lorries from Turkey coming overland to supply heroin in the United Kingdom and to other countries in western Europe," Customs Chief Investigation Officer Douglas Tweddle said.

PARIS (DEC. 6) - The Paris Bourse put on a strong performance on Thursday following Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's decision to free hostages held in Iraq, bringing stock prices back up to the level they had left behind on August 17, operators said.

The market had been fairly firm for a few days, but Thursday brought a "party atmosphere" to the Bourse palace, they said.

The CAC-40 stock price index jumped by 1.99 per cent on the day, after having been as much as 2.80 per cent ahead during the session.

Even before the announcement about the hostages, the session had started out on a firm note thanks to lower oil prices, which dropped further when the announcement was made in Baghdad, as did long-term interest rates. The latter decline also encouraged Bourse investors.

As a logical consequence, oil stocks fell on the Bourse, Total losing 6.7 per cent, Elf Aquitaine 5.5, and Esso 4.2 per cent.

Other leading issues were sought after, and Saint Gobain rose by six per cent on the day, LVMH 4.8, Lafarge four, and Societe Generale bank 3.7 per cent.

Concept rocketed by a spectacular 43 per cent on volume of 26,000 shares. Quotation resumed Thursday morning after a suspension in connection with a takeover bid for the firm floated by Altus Finance. Conept subsidiary CCMC rose 10 per cent.

SANTIAGO (DEC. 6) - U.S. President George Bush travelled to Chile Thursday for an official visit marking the normalization of relations with Chile's new democracy after 17 years of tensions under the former military regime of General Augusto Pinochet.

Mr. Bush was greeted on his arrival by President Patricio Aylwin and by Gen. Pinochet, now Commander in Chief of the Army.

"Chile's return to the ranks of the world's democracies is cause for pride and celebration," Mr. Bush said in his arrival statement as Mr. Aylwin, elected a year ago and inaugurated in March, looked on.

"We welcome you with joy," Mr. Aylwin told Mr. Bush, the first U.S. president to visit his country since Dwight Eisenhower in 1960.

In a later press conference, Mr. Bush welcomed welcomed Iraq's decision to free all its foreign hostages, but reiterated his determination to force Baghdad's complete withdrawal from Kuwait.

"This would be welcome if true, but it will not change my thinking on his need to comply, 100 per cent, without conditions, to the U.N. resolutions" demanding Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait, he said.

Chilean Foreign Minister Enrique Silva Cimma said in a television interview that Mr. Bush was showing "extraordinary interest and caring" for Latin America by visiting the region in the midst of the turmoil caused by the Gulf crisis. Before coming to Chile, Mr. Bush visited Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina and will finish his six-day tour of South America in Venezuela.

Shortly before Mr. Bush's arrival, a small bomb exploded inside a recently opened McDonald's restaurant here, the latest of a series of anti-U.S. sabotage over the past 24 hours. Bombs were also set off at five Mormon temples and in front of the U.S. consulate here.

TUNIS (DEC. 6) - PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's decision Thursday to release all foreign hostages would promote a peaceful solution to the Gulf crisis.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) - The United State believes that its tactics during the Gulf crisis have paid off.

The decision by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein on Thursday to release all Western hostages showed that Washington's carrot and stick policy against Saddam had now produced its first major result, observers said.

U.S. President George Bush and leading members of his administration have repeatedly stressed that only the ''credible'' threat of military action against Iraq would force Saddam to withdraw his troops from Kuwait and free the hostages.

They have maintained that the United Nations-imposed economic sanctions against Iraq are not enough.

However, an element of caution was mixed today with the hope that a breakthrough may have taken place and might lead to a diplomatic solution of the Gulf crisis.

Observers pointed out that the Iraqi president has too often tried to split the multinational alliance against him since his army occupied the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait on August 2.

BOGOTA (DEC. 6) EFE - A Colombian hitman has claimed he was hired by the notorious Medellin drug smuggling cartel to kill President Cesar Gaviria as he was campaigning for the elections late last year, but had finally decided against carrying out the attack.

The man, who was not identified, appeared on television late Wednesday admitting he had been asked to blow up a bus packed with dynamite in the area where then Liberal Party candidate Gaviria was campaigning in the central department of Risaralda.

But the hitman told the TV-HOY programme that he had repented at the last moment, deciding it was +not logical to spill anymore blood in Colombia+.

Two other hitmen were also to have taken part in the December 1989 attack, although he did not say what happened to them.

The unidentified man said he had received his instructions from Medellin cartel leaders including John Jairo Arias Tascon, who was killed during a shootout with security forces in July.

After confessing the assassination plan to authorities he said he had been offered protection. But this was later turned down and the man said he now feared for his life.

Gaviria was sworn-in as president in early August. The previous Liberal Party presidential candidate, Luis Carlos Galan, was killed by gunmen allegedly in the pay of the Medellin drug barons in August 1989.

Hundreds of people have been killed in the war between the drug cartels and the security forces since then.

N'Djamena (DEC. 6) EFE - Gen. Idriss Deby, whose rebel army seized control of Chad last weekend, will stay in power for at least a year at the head of a newly appointed Council of State, a Council spokesman said Thursday.

The 32-member Council will run the government until democratic elections are held and replaces the government of ousted president Hissen Habre, the spokesman said.

In the meantime, Deby has invited Chadian political exiles to return home without fear of reprisals. Ex-president Goukouni Oueddei, deposed in 1982 by Habre and exiled in Libya, was considering coming back, the spokesman said.

After fleeing before Deby's rebel Patriotic Salvation Movement (MPS) troops marched into N'Djamena on Sunday, Habre found refuge in the town of Maroua in neighboring Cameroun. On Wednesday he moved to the capital, Yaounde.

He was deposed after a three-week offensive launched from Sudan by the MPS which obtained 40 per cent of its arms from Libya, according to diplomats.

ATHENS (DEC. 6) EFE - Greece's 48-hour general strike lost momentum on its second day Thursday with government officials saying that only 17 per cent of the labor force failed to show up for work.

Even trade union officials, who reported that more than a million workers stayed at home Wednesday, said the stoppage was less effective Thursday.

They blamed dwindling support on strike weariness and said workers wanted more talks with the government and showed a willingness to back down on some of their demands.

The strike, the seventh since the conservative government of Prime Minister Constantine Mitsotakis took over in April, was called by the main trade union organization, the Greek General Confederation of Labor (GSEE), to protest a government bill aimed at limiting labor stoppages.

The Association of Public Employees, representing 1.5 million civil servants, teachers, transport, hosptial and post office workers, had said its members would join the strike for 24 hours Thursday.

But, if government figures were correct, their support appeared to be minimal.

All but 18 per cent of train services were running normally and flights of the state-owned airline, Olympic Airways, were operating on schedule, according to company officials. Public offices and the electricity and water services were also reported to be functioning.

But Athens was hit by traffic chaos as a restriction on the number of private vehicles allowed to circulate in the city center was lifted to compensate for the lack of buses. Only 250 of the capital's 1,650 buses were in service Thursday.

Official estimates reckon the first day's strike cost the economy dlrs seven million.

Further protests were expected Saturday when airport workers have said they would stage a four-hour stoppage.

The draft anti-strike law, which would allow employers to sack workers participating in strikes declared illegal by labor courts, is being debated in parliament and is due to be voted Saturday.

Its introduction follows a highly unpopular austerity program designed to cut a dlrs six billion deficit in social security services and an annual inflation rate of 22 per cent.

The bill also provides for the recruiting of emergency personnel to keep essential services in operation during strikes and calls for a halt to state support for unions.

Opposition socialist parties and the communists have labelled the project +anti-democratic and anti-constitutional+ and said it would abolish the right to strike.

PORT-AU-PRINCE (DEC 6) EFE - A Roman Catholic priest standing for election in Haiti's presidential elections accused a former minister of the Duvalier dictatorship Thursday of ordering a bomb attack at a political rally in which seven people were killed.

Father Jean-Bertrand Aristide said Roger Lafontant, a Duvalier minister who led the feared Tontons Macoutes political police, had ordered the Wednesday night attack on the rally in the Port-au-Prince suburb of Petionville.

Aristide, who is a main contender in the December 16 presidential elections, called for Lafontant's arrest and said he would continue his campaign.

Unidentified assailants riding in a car lobbed the bomb at people who were walking along an avenue after leaving the rally organised by Aristide's National Front for Change and Democracy.

Aristide was not near the site of the explosion which also wounded 53 people.

Lafontant, an interior and defense minister in the 1957-1986 dictatorship, returned from exile earlier this year and unsuccessfully tried to be admitted as a candidate in the presidential vote.

The Electoral Council rejected Lafontant's candidacy because he failed to produce a birth certificate and other necessary documents.

Also Wednesday, the headquarters of the Proletarian Party was attacked. The party was led by the late Daniel Fignole, who supported Aristide's candidacy.

Haiti has been ravaged by coups and political violence since the fall in 1986 of the Duvalier family, who ruled the country by terror for nearly three decades.

Francois Duvalier and his son, Jean-Claude Duvalier, used the Tontons Macoutes to spy on the population and to torture and kill government opponents.

The 1987 presidential ballot was suspended after 34 people were gunned down in an election day massacre in the capital by Duvalier supporters.

Eearlier this year, Ertha Trouillot was appointed provisional president and charged with preparing free elections.

NEW DELHI (DEC 6) EFE - Security forces Thursday arrested 1140 Hindu militants, including 340 women, who were trying to replace a northern Indian mosque with a temple of their own, the official news agency PTI reported.

The women were later released while the men were taken to prisons near Ayodhya where 20,000 Hindu fundamentalists had gathered earlier Thursday.

Some 100 companies of police and paramilitaries were called in to Ayodhya and the neighboring city of Faizabad to prevent a repetition of last month's riots between Moslems and Hindus during which several hundred people died.

More than 270 people died last month, at least 15 of them when they stormed Ayodhya's mosque, as sectarian violence broke out across the country over the fundamentalists' plans.

The riots helped lead to the downfall of former premier Vishwanath Pratap Singh's government which had tried in vain to resolve the crisis.

His successor, Chandra Shekhar, has also so far failed in his attempts to get the fundamentalist movemement, the Vishwa Hindu Parishad (VHP) and the Hindu nationalist Bhartiya Janata Party to renounce their backing for the temple to be built.

But his government decided to allow the fundamentalists to pray at the mosque site, while threatening to arrest those who caused trouble.

Volunteer Kar Savaks, or Hindu holy men, have travelled from all over India to Ayodhya, regarded by the country's majority Hindu population as one of their most sacred sites.

At the request of the VHP and the Bhartiya Janata Party, the militants have said they will not offer any resistance if arrested, but will continue with peaceful protest until they are allowed to complete their temple.

The first stone was placed alongside the mosque last year, but they want to raze the building to construct an inner sanctum on the spot where they claim the Hindu god Rama was born.

Although talks between the mosque's defense organization and the VHP have so far failed, the two groups are due to present their respective cases to the government on December 22.

TOKYO (DEC. 6) KYODO - JAPAN'S BUSINESS COMMUNITY ON THURSDAY LASHED OUT AT A PACKAGE PLAN OF LAND TAX REFORMS ENDORSED BY THE RULING LIBERAL DEMOCRATIC PARTY, SAYING THAT IT WOULD ONLY INCREASE TAX BURDENS ON CORPORATIONS WITHOUT HOLDING DOWN SKY-HIGH LAND PRICES.

"AT BEST, IT'S TAXING MORE BIG CORPORATIONS WITH HUGE LAND ASSETS," SAID TAKASHI ISHIHARA, PRESIDENT OF THE JAPAN ASSOCIATION OF CORPORATE EXECUTIVES (KEIZAI DOYUKAI).

THE PACKAGE, DRAWN UP BY THE LDP'S TAX WRITING PANEL, FEATURES A NEW TAX ON LAND OWNERSHIP, THE MAIN PILLAR OF THE LAND TAX REFORMS AIMED AT CURBING ASTRONOMICAL LAND PRICES.

THE NEW TAX, DUBBED THE LAND HOLDING TAX, WOULD BE IMPOSED ON LAND PROPERTIES VALUED AT 1 BILLION YEN OR MORE, BUT WITH A NUMBER OF EXEMPTIONS.

BUSINESS LEADERS UNITED IN POINTING OUT THAT THE CHRONIC LAND INFLATION WILL NOT BE RESOLVED MERELY BY TAXATION AND THAT OTHER MEASURES ARE NEEDED.

"THE MAIN CAUSE OF LAND PRICE INFLATION IS THE EXTREME IMBALANCE BETWEEN SUPPLY AND DEMAND," SAID HAJIME TSUBORI, CHAIRMAN OF THE REAL ESTATE COMPANY ASSOCIATION OF JAPAN.

"WITHOUT MEASURES TO SUPPLY MORE LAND, THE NEW TAX CANNOT SERVE AS A MEANS OF HOLDING DOWN LAND PRICES," SAID TSUBORI, ALSO CHAIRMAN OF MITSUI REAL ESTATE DEVELOPMENT CO.

THE TAX PROPOSAL DREW A TORRENT OF STRONGER CRITICISM FROM STEELMAKERS AND AUTOMAKERS, TWO PROPERTY-RICH CONCERNS, ALTHOUGH THEY WELCOMED A CUT IN THE TAX RATE TO 0.3 PERCENT FROM THE ORIGINALLY PROPOSED 0.5 PERCENT.

"THE TARGET OF THE NEW TAX IS BIASED AGAINST BIG COMPANIES," SAID HIROSHI SAITO, PRESIDENT OF THE JAPAN IRON AND STEEL FEDERATION. "IT WOULD OVERLAP WITH THE EXISTING TAX ON FIXED ASSETS," HE ADDED.

AT PRESENT, THERE ARE STILL VARIOUS TAXES ON LAND ASSETS, INCLUDING THE TAX ON FIXED ASSETS, WITH DIFFERENT MEASURES OF EVALUATING SUCH ASSETS FOR TAXATION.

YUTAKA KUME, PRESIDENT OF THE JAPAN AUTOMOBILE MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION, BLASTED THE NEW TAX FOR LACKING A CLEAR PURPOSE FOR ITS INTRODUCTION.

"THE PURPOSE OF THE NEW TAX IS UNCLEAR, AND THE PROCESS OF DEBATE (ON THE TAX) SUGGESTS THAT A NEW TAX IS PRIMARILY SOMETHING AMONG GOVERNMENT AND LDP OFFICIALS," HE SAID.

THE NEW LAND HOLDING TAX WAS ORIGINALLY PROPOSED BY A GOVERNMENT PANEL LAST MONTH, INVOLVING GOVERNMENT AND LDP OFFICIALS.

ACCORDING TO THE LATEST SURVEY BY THE NATIONAL LAND AGENCY, THE NATION'S RESIDENTIAL LAND PRICES CLIMBED MORE THAN 13 PERCENT IN THE YEAR ENDED ON JULY 1, AFTER NEARLY DOUBLING OVER THE PAST FIVE YEARS.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (DEC. 6) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The Iraqi news agency reports this morning that SADDAM HUSSEIN will release all remaining hostages. The news sent oil futures plummeting and world stock markets spiraling upward. The dollar is weaker on the news. ... The NIKKEI rose 359.38 on good Mideast news of negotiations. ... In London, the FTSE rose 28.5 in heavy midday trading following the hostage release report. ... The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT says factory orders rose an unexpectedly strong 2.8% in October. ... AT&T is going over NCR directors with a direct tender offer to shareholders. ... SMITH BARNEY halts trading in takeover stocks, one day after PRUDENTIAL-BACHE SECURITIES INC. did the same thing.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

IBM is moving its communications division from New York to London. frozen next year at present levels. ... CHARLES SCHWAB projects a plunge in its fourth-quarter profit amid weak trading volume. ... BEAR STEARNS is said to be evaluating its involvement in the trading of takeover stocks.

FROM THE BULLS:

"The market has been rallying since early October because it got oversold in August and September ... that's what this is all about," says CHRISTINE CALLIES of COWEN & CO. She says some of her technical indicators have begun to "drift sideways," which she takes as bullish. "What this means is that the rally is fully developed and the medium-term would suggest that we're still headed up," according to Callies. ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The stock market is nearing the end of its wave 2 rally," says ROBERT PRECHTER of the "Elliott Wave Theorist." "The next decline [in stock prices] should be more substantial than August and September." He says that the "behavior of prices and volume has been entirely consistent with an ongoing bear market." He sees substantial resistance in the 2600s. (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/6)

"You can see sporadic rallies ... [but] we don't see a sustained rally of any sort," says BOB JONES, portfolio strategist at GOLDMAN SACHS. "There's too much uncertainty on the landscape: the Iraqi situation, the whole situation in the Middle East, the economy. ... We think the market is still about 5% to 10% overvalued. When we start to see it fairly valued we would start to buy a bit more aggressively even though often times a market will go below fair value before it really bottoms." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 12/5)

A "go slow policy is still warranted," writes ARNOLD KAUFFMAN, editor of "S&P Outlook." "Despite recent buoyancy, this is no time for investor complacency." He says that there "appears to be no more than an additional 5% left to the rally" and urges investors "don't buy into seasonal strength ... maintain a defensive stance." (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/6)

"Despite the 20% to 25% correction, this is not likely the bottom of the bear market," says ROBERT FARRELL, chief market analyst for MERRILL LYNCH. He says the market will be reacting to economic stimuli, and "it is unlikely that we'll get away with a mild recession." ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

STOCK MARKET:

"It would be nice to be able to say that this looks like [the market] has established a bottom, and the market would be able to move up on a sustained basis," says MONTE GORDON of DREYFUS CORP. "I'm still sticking to the idea that you're within a range between 2300 on the low and 2700 on the high. And you're going to stay in that range until you get clear, definitive evidence that a negotiating process has begun" in the Middle East crisis. Mr. Gordon would stay with blue chips for the time being, but says that there is some validity to a turnaround in secondary stocks. He says they should be carefully watched for more evidence of this turnaround. (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/5)

"A good many stocks look like they've already seen their bear market lows and December usually has a strong upward seasonal bias, anyway," says GAIL DUDACK at S.G. WARBURG. "Trading buys will be found in the sold-out high technology and financial groups, but in general it will be more a rally for individual stocks throughout the list rather than for specific industry groups or for the market as a whole." ("The Washington Post", 12/6)

"People figure the banks are back from the brink and there won't be a war in the Middle East, so we're going through a period of euphoria," says GARY SHILLING, an economist and money manager at A. GARY SHILLING & CO. But he doesn't expect the euphoria to last much longer. "The consumer is being squeezed and layoffs are going to count for a lot more than events happening 10,000 miles away." (WSJ, 12/6)

"The plain fact is that the shorts are in trouble, as are underinvested institutions," says RALPH BLOCH, chief market analysts at RAYMOND JAMES ASSOCIATES. JAMES C. ANDREWS, first vice president in charge of institutional trading at JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT, says, "We're beginning to see some legitimate institutional buyers here." (WSJ, 12/6)

"November was a very good month for the stock market in general," says JOHN LAPORTE, president of NEW HORIZONS FUND. "But in particular for small company stocks." (CNN "Moneyline", 12/5)

"The market and the economy were not in good shape before the Kuwait invasion " says HOWARD BERL at MONTGOMERY SECURITIES. "That hasn't changed." ("USA Today", 12/6)

STOCK TIPS:

"If you can see light at the end of the tunnel, even if it's a long tunnel, then you have a compelling case for buying small stocks," says STEPHEN LEEB, editor of "Personal Finance" newsletter. "The next bull market will be a bull market of small and secondary stocks," says RICKY HARRINGTON at MARION BASS SECURITIES. "But it's probably several more quarters before that will happen." GRETA MARSHALL, chief investment officer of the MARSHALL PLAN money management firm, says investors "might pay a small price by getting in [small stocks] too early. But it's better to be early than to be late. By the time it becomes obvious, a lot will already have happened." ("USA Today", 12/6)

"The airlines are under tremendous pressure right now to boost their traffic," says STEVEN BALLINGER of OFFICIAL AIRLINE GUIDES. "They're taking on a lot of new capacity, more airplanes, at a time when the economy is going downhill and fuel prices are skyrocketing." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/5)

"Communications and computing are converging," says MICHEL GUITE, a senior telecommunications analyst at SALOMON BROTHERS. "Over the next ten years that convergence probably becomes much more dramatic, much more apparent." He says AT&T is reacting to this trend in its bid for NCR, and also points out that NCR can help profitability. ("Nightly Business Report", 12/6)

NCR may have vowed to fight the AT&T buyout bid at $90, but many analysts say the threat is hollow. "The only thing they can do besides cry about it is buy back stock, and they don't have the cash," says JOSEPH PAYNE of ALEX. BROWN & SONS. "They made a declaration of war, but they don't have an army." ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

NCR's demand for $125 per share is "simply a bargaining point," according to PAINEWEBBER analyst JACK GRUBMAN. "The notion of remaining independent has gone by the wayside." He believes the company will eventually accept some offer, but says "it is like buying a car." (NYT, 12/6)

"General merchandise companies, which traditionally have a low margin in this category, have elected, this year, to use it as a traffic building, loss leader in many instances," says DONALD TROTT of DEAN WITTER. Companies such as TOYS 'R' US, CHILD WORLD and LIONEL have all been hurt already. This weakness "may force Toys 'R' Us, in some instances to compete more aggressively on a price basis than they normally would," says ROBERT SCHWEICH of WERTHEIM SCHRODER. (CNN "Moneyline", 12/6)

"My guess is that technology and biotech will do well in any rallies over the next couple of months," says ROBERT FARRELL, chief market analyst for MERRILL LYNCH. "This will be the growth decade, where growth managers and growth stocks do well." ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

"It's very positive that the Fed is recognizing that at least the banking sector ... could use some help," says TIM SCALA of SEQUOR GROUP. He says only the highly capitalized banks will really benefit, however. (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/5)

MICHAEL PLODWICK says he and fellow C.J. LAWRENCE bank analyst CAROLE BERGER changed their ratings on nine banks from sell to hold because it appears the Fed will soon ease monetary policy significantly. "Typically, bank stocks bottom when the Fed easing begins," says Plodwick. However, he says the firm hasn't changed its negative view of bank fundamentals. (WSJ, 12/6)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (DEC. 6) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"There are many who think fundamentals will eventually weigh on the dollar, but chartwise, it's hard to argue with a higher dollar at this point," says JOHN LYMAN, senior customer dealer at BANK OF TOKYO in New York. (WSJ, 12/6)

TIM SCALA of SEQUOR GROUP says he is "quite comfortable with the dollar" at the current levels. "We're coming into year-end where there's traditionally a demand for dollars," so he says it "isn't the time to be short." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/5)

Currency markets "are still very nervous about peace, war, peace, war," says ROBERT RYAN of BANK OF NEW YORK. These worries have added to the fluctuations in the greenback, says Ryan. ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

"It just feel different. It feels comfortable for the dollar to rally now," says IAN FOAKES, foreign exchange manager at PAINEWEBBER INTERNATIONAL in New York. (WSJ, 12/6)

STEVEN SLIFER at LEHMAN BROTHERS says a number of economic reports due out next week should be very weak and "I think that sets up the expectation that the Fed will probably cut rates again between now and their FMOC meeting on Dec. 18." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 12/5)

"Fundamentals in the economy will ultimately determine the direction of interest rates," says WALTER FRANK of DONOGHUE'S. He adds, "the fundamental trend in rates is down." (NYT, 12/6)

The "near-term outlook for the economy has clearly worsened," says ARNOLD KAUFFMAN, editor of "S & P Outlook." "We aren't counting on much of a further dip in long term rates" at least until the first quarter of next year. (CNBC "The Money Wheel", 12/6)

The bond market action yesterday was "generally disappointing," says CAROLINE BAUM of TELERATE. She believes the bond market will be on hold until Friday's unemployment report which, she says will tell the market whether or not the Fed will ease again before the first of the year. She says the market saw the reduction of reserve requirements as a symbolic action. (FNN "Business A.M.", 12/6)

THE ECONOMY:

Despite "elements of strength in the economy, on balance the slide in economic activity is continuing," says WILLIAM MacREYNOLDS of the U.S. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE. "On the manufacturing side, productivity is making a comeback, and that's good for the economy." But MacReynolds points out that service sector productivity is declining, which may lead to lower employment. ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

Even though factory orders were up a surprising 2.8% analysts are not overly encouraged. "I would in no way conclude that this is the sign of a bottom in manufacturing," says ROSEANNE CACH of FIRST BOSTON. She says the weak economy may not prompt another Fed ease immediately. "I think it takes policy makers awhile to admit that there is a recession." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/5)

"After the close of trading yesterday, there was an unsubstantiated report that basically, terms for a withdrawal from Kuwait were on the table," says HILLTOP TRADING oil trader DANIEL USLANDER. "This morning we came in lower ... we've rallied on a number of fairly bullish statements." He says the oil market is trading "news item to news item." ("Nightly Business Report", 12/5)

"The major underpinning of this [oil] market was the Persian Gulf crisis," says ANDREW LEBOW of E.D.&F. MAN INTERNATIONAL. "Any movement toward peace really exacerbates the sell-off because the fundamentals were so bad." ("Investor's Daily", 12/6)

Analysts seem to be sounding the death knell of the Gulf crisis. "The war premium is out" of the oil market, says JOHN KINGSTON of "Platt's Oilgram Price Report." NAUMAN BARAKAT of MERRILL LYNCH says, "There is the perception that this crisis will be solved by means other than military." (NYT, 12/6)

IN WASHINGTON:

"This recent budget deal was an absolute abomination," says former White House Budget Director JIM MILLER, who now serves as co-chairman of the TAX FOUNDATION. "The budget deficit is going to be higher next year ... total spending is going to be $100 billion greater next year than it was this year." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/5)

(NASDAQ-NMS: RADS), today announced that it has been awarded a $34.4 million contract from Unisys Corporation (NYSE: UIS) for the manufacture and testing of 37 AN/FPS-124 Unattended Radar (UAR) Array Antenna/Transmitters for the nation's North Warning System (NWS).

Radiation Systems, Inc. (RSI) manufactured and tested three Engineering Development Models (EDM) between 1986 and 1988 which have demonstrated superior operational performance during the extensive development, test, evaluation and initial operation phases leading to the production contract

CINCINNATI (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The Kroger Co. (NYSE: KR) said today it has extended by 10 business days its offer to bondholders to exchange their 15-1/2 percent junior subordinated discount debentures for a new, cash interest-paying bond.

The initial offer was announced on Nov. 5 and expired yesterday (Dec. 5). With the extension, the offer will now expire at 5 p.m. on Dec. 20. Kroger said holders tendered less than the required $150 million principal amount of the discount debentures by yesterday's 5 p.m. deadline.

Under terms of the offer, which do not change with the extension, Kroger would give bondholders between $575 and $660 principal amount of a new 13-1/2 percent junior subordinated debenture, due 2003, for each $1,000 face value of the 15-1/2 percent junior subordinated discount debentures they received as part of the company's 1988 restructuring.

Kroger also said it would extend to Dec. 20 the time for holders of "oddlot" 15-1/2 percent junior subordinated discount debentures; i.e., those with a face value of less than $1,000, to tender their debentures for cash.

CHICAGO (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Navistar International Corporation (NYSE: NAV) today reported a net loss of $11 million, or $.16 per common share, for its fiscal year ended Oct. 31, 1990. This compares with net income of $87 million or $.23 per common share, for 1989.

Navistar said consolidated sales and revenues of manufacturing and finance operations for 1990 totalled $3,854 million, approximately nine percent below the $4,241 million reported for the prior year.

For the fourth quarter of 1990, the Chicago-based truck manufacturer reported a loss of $7 million, or $.06 per common share, on consolidated sales and revenues of $971 million. For the same period last year, Navistar recorded a loss of $13 million, or $.08 per common share, on consolidated sales and revenues of $1,011 million. The lower year-to- year loss is attributable to improved manufacturing efficiencies which more than offset the effects of lower sales volume.

James C. Cotting, chairman and chief executive officer, said Navistar's sales and income for the fourth quarter of 1990 and the fiscal year reflect the impact of the continued industry-wide softness in retail demand for medium and heavy trucks. He said the principal factor in the lower demand for trucks was the slowing of economic growth in the United States.

In Navistar's fourth fiscal quarter, North American truck industry retail sales of medium and heavy trucks totalled 70,100 units, a decline of 15 percent from 82,000 units for the comparable quarter last year. Navistar's retail sales of medium and heavy trucks for the same three months totalled 21,300 units, a 12 percent decline from 24,300 units last year.

Navistar's parts sales in the fourth quarter of 1990 were approximately two percent above the comparable quarter last year. Shipments of mid-range diesel engines to original equipment manufacturers declined about nine percent from the year-ago quarter.

Navistar is the leading manufacturer of medium and heavy trucks in North America and the worldwide leader in the production of mid-range diesel engines.

TROY, MICH. (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Arbor Drugs, Inc. (NASDAQ: ARBR), which currently operates 107 drugstores in Michigan, today announced an 11.0-percent increase in net income and a 17.3-percent increase in sales for its first quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990.

Eugene Applebaum, chairman, president and chief executive officer, attributed the strong performance to outstanding sales, close attention to controlling expenses and successful new store expansion.

Arbor's fiscal 1991 first-quarter net income was $2,663,000, or $.28 per share up from $2,399,000, or $.25 per share, in fiscal 1990.

Net sales were $92,878,000 this quarter vs. $79,177,000 for the quarter ended Oct. 31, 1989. Comparable store sales increased by 10.4 percent for the three-month period.

The board of directors of the Troy-based retailer today also announced a 25-percent increase in the regular quarterly cash dividend by declaring a dividend of $.05 per share, payable Jan. 2, 1991, to holders of record as of Dec. 19, 1990.

Applebaum noted, "By raising the cash dividend for the second time in the last 18 months, we are rewarding our shareholders for their investment in our company. This dividend increase demonstrates our confidence in the future of Arbor Drugs and our optimism for continued profitable growth."

Commenting on the results, Applebaum said, "We are very pleased with our successful first quarter, particularly in view of the current economic environment. Our excellent sales reflect both double-digit increases in sales by comparable stores (stores in operation for at least 12 months) and a strong performance by our new stores. Arbor's profits continue to reach new records, despite the higher expense ratio related to the 15 new drugstores opened over the last seven months."

Applebaum added, "Our aggressive expansion plans for fiscal 1991 are on target. The initial performance of the nine new drugstores that we have added since the fiscal year began on Aug. 1, 1990, has exceeded our expectations. Importantly, Arbor continues to increase its market share in our primary trading area of southeastern Michigan."

Arbor Drugs, the nation's 22nd largest drugstore chain, completed the first quarter with 102 stores and has opened five new stores thus far in the second quarter of fiscal 1991. Plans for the remainder of the current fiscal year include opening at least six more new stores.

Forbes recently ranked Arbor Drugs among the "200 Best Small Companies in America" for the third consecutive year.

MILWAUKEE (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Harley-Davidson, Inc. (NYSE: HDI) announced today that it was surprised and disappointed by a verdict reached by a jury in State Superior Court in Orange County, Calif. yesterday which found the company liable for damages in a lawsuit brought by a former supplier of aftermarket motorcycle exhaust pipes. Harley-Davidson called the jury's findings unjustified and not supported by the evidence.

The company will immediately seek all available legal remedies to set aside or reverse the findings, and it is confident that it will ultimately prevail. The company indicated that the verdict will have no effect on its continued operations.

A jury awarded the plaintiff, Christy Dello, proprietor of his former company, FUBAR, compensatory damages, including damages for emotional distress, in various amounts which, if taken separately and aggregated, would exceed $1.25 million, and punitive damages of $5.5 million for losses arising out of an alleged oral agreement made with former employees of Harley-Davidson in 1980. At the time of the alleged agreement, Harley-Davidson was a subsidiary of AMF Inc.

Dello's suit claimed that Harley-Davidson entered into an oral contract with his company to supply motorcycle exhaust pipes indefinitely. More than two years after going out of business, he sued Harley-Davidson claiming, among other things, fraud, breach of confidence and misappropriation of trade secrets.

Timothy K. Hoelter, Harley-Davidson vice president, general counsel, maintained that Harley-Davidson did nothing wrong, saying, "I feel the weight of the evidence does not support the jury's findings and will not withstand a judicial appeal if that should become necessary. I think the jury's findings were the result of them not understanding the evidence. We will aggressively seek to overturn this verdict."

Harley-Davidson, Inc., the only American-based motorcycle manufacturer, produces heavyweight motorcycles and a complete line of motorcycle parts and accessories. Its Holiday Rambler subsidiary is a leading manufacturer of premium recreational vehicles, specialized commercial vehicles and a diverse range of related products. SAN DIEGO (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Calvary Holdings, Inc., announced today that it had commenced its tender offer announced last Friday for all of the outstanding shares of the common stock, $1.00 par value, of Diceon Electronics Inc. (NASDAQ: DICN), at $5.25 per share. The offer and withdrawal rights will expire at 12:00 midnight, New York City time, on Monday, Jan. 7, 1991, unless the offer is extended. As previously announced, the offer is conditioned upon, among other matters, obtaining the required financing to consummate the transaction and the purchaser's satisfaction that the terms of the Delaware Business Combination Statute will not be applicable to the transaction which, in turn, is likely to require approval of the tender offer by the company's board of directors. Calvary indicated that it has been informed that Diceon's annual meeting is scheduled to be held on Jan. 16, 1991 at which shareholders of record on Nov. 27, 1990, will be entitled to vote. Accordingly, shares purchased after Nov. 19, 1990, and settled in the ordinary five-business-day settlement period without receipt of a proxy from the record owner will not be able to vote at the meeting.

In connection with the annual meeting, Calvary notified Diceon on Nov. 27, 1990, that it intended to nominate a state of directors and propose certain amendments to Diceon's by-laws which, if approved by a majority of the shares present and voting at the meeting, could result in the disqualification of the existing members of the board and Calvary obtaining control of Diceon's board of directors. If the amendments to the by-laws are not authorized at the meeting, only a single seat on the four-member board will be up for election at the annual meeting. If Calvary's nominees are successful in obtaining control of Diceon's board, they have announced that they intend to consider options to maximize shareholder value, including the possible approval of the tender offer made by Calvary or any other offer at a price which represents a substantial premium over market.

Calvary Holdings, Inc., was formed by Calvary Partners, LP, a San Diego based LBO research and deal origination firm. Diceon, headquartered in Irvine, Calif., manufactures sophisticated multi-layer printed circuit boards for the computer industry.

MINNEAPOLIS (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Dayton Hudson Corporation (NYSE: DH) today reported that its net retail sales for the four weeks ended Dec. 1, 1990, increased 37.4 percent to $1.55 billion from $1.13 billion a year ago. (Total sales for the month on an adjusted exact week comparison were up 15.1 percent.)

Comparable-store sales were up 21.4 percent reflecting the favorable impact from a 7-day Christmas season shift between the 1990 and 1989 accounting calendar. Comparable-store sales on an adjusted exact week comparison (the best measure of true performance this year) were up 3.4 percent.

Kenneth A. Macke, chairman and chief executive officer, said the corporation is satisfied with the month. "Mervyn's had another strong month with a 10 percent ad-for-ad comparable sales increase and Target's ad-for-ad comparable sales increases are solid.

"It is clearly a more competitive and more promotional holiday season. The consumer is focusing on traditional and functional items. I believe we will see very ordinary sales numbers through the middle of December; we expect stronger selling the last 7 to 10 days of the season. Our inventories are in good shape and our in-stock position is excellent."

Macke said it will be most meaningful to look at November-December sales combined.

November sales by business segment for the four weeks were as follows: -- Target's total sales rose 26 percent while comparable-store sales were up 20 percent. On an exact week comparison, Target's total sales were up 7 percent and comparable-store sales were up 2 percent.

-- Mervyn's total sales increased 43 percent and comparable-store sales increased 39 percent. On an exact week comparison, Mervyn's total sales were up 12 percent and comparable-store sales were up 10 percent.

-- The Department Store Division's comparable-store sales were up 3 percent. On an exact week comparison, the Division's comparable store sales were down 2 percent. (The comparable-store sales number includes Marshall Field's, this year and last.)

The corporation's sales for the 43 weeks ended Dec. 1 were $11.25 billion, up 16.5 percent from $9.65 billion in the same period a year ago. Comparable-store sales for the 43-week period were up 6.8 percent compared to the same period last year.

As of Dec. 1, 1990, Dayton Hudson operated 708 stores in 33 states.

Domestic sales for the four-week period increased 4.9 percent to $476 million from $454 million, and foreign sales, expressed in U.S. dollars, rose 11.3 percent. If foreign exchange rates had remained constant, foreign sales would have increased 3.1 percent and total sales would have increased 4.1 percent. Domestic comparable store sales for the four-week period rose 1.3 percent.

For the cumulative forty-three weeks ended December 1, total sales rose 11.9 percent to $7,711 million from $6,893 million in the corresponding year-earlier period.

Domestic sales for the forty-three-week period increased 7.4 percent to $4,332 million from $4,033 million, and foreign sales, expressed in U.S. dollars, rose 18.1 percent. If foreign exchange rates had remained constant, foreign sales would have increased 10.1 percent and total sales would have increased 8.5 percent. Domestic comparable store sales for the 43-week period rose 3.9 percent.

Commenting on November sales, Harold E. He observed that these results reflect weak economic conditions and lackluster consumer spending in much of the U.S. and Canada.

As of Nov. 24, 1990, Woolworth Corporation operated a total of 8,712 stores, compared to a total of 8,160 stores on the comparable date the year before. JERICHO, NY (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Getty Petroleum Corp. (NYSE: GTY) today reported results for the third quarter and nine months ended Oct. 31, 1990.

According to Leo Liebowitz, Getty's president and chief executive officer, "On the second day of our third quarter, the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait resulted in gasoline prices rising at an unprecedented rate. At the same time, President Bush urged all oil companies to use restraint in increasing their retail prices. We, along with many oil companies, complied with the President's request. During the first two months of our third quarter, we sold gasoline at less than our cost, resulting in a negative profit margin. In October, the last month of our quarter, margins did improve but not enough to cover our expenses and allow us to return to profitability. Our profit margins for November, the first month of our fourth quarter, however, have improved to more normal profitable levels."

For the third quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, the company experienced a net loss of $17.2 million, or $1.35 per share, on revenues of $319.4 million. This compares with net income of $7.2 million, or $.55 per share, on revenues of $290.5 million for the comparable period last year.

For the nine months ended Oct. 31, 1990, the company experienced a net loss of $18.9 million, or $1.46 per share, on revenues of $891 million. This compared with net income of $16.8 million, or $1.28 per share, on revenues of $861 million for the nine month period ended Oct. 31, 1989.

Liebowitz also stated that the third quarter results of operations included a pre-tax LIFO inventory charge of $16.9 million. As of Oct. 31, 1990, the carrying value of the company's LIFO inventory was $20.1 million below replacement cost.

On Nov. 16, 1990, William Rea, who was manager of supply and distribution in 1985, and Getty Terminals Corp., a subsidiary of Getty Petroleum Corp., were found guilty of conspiring with two other companies in 1985 to evade federal gasoline excise taxes. The company intends to vigorously appeal the verdict and has fully provided for the potential costs associated with this matter in the third quarter, except for a possible fine of up to $2 million.

Getty Petroleum Corp., one of the nation's largest independent marketers of gasoline and petroleum products, markets in a 13-state area in the Middle Atlantic and Northeastern regions of the United States. The company is also a major marketer of heating oil and is a wholesale distributor of a variety of petroleum products through its East Coast petroleum storage and distribution network.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Woolworth Corporation (NYSE: Z) opened its first store this morning in what was East Germany, returning to the very same property in the city of Halle where its German subsidiary operated a store before World War II. The New York-based company became the first U.S. retailer to open for business in the former East German territory.

Halle, on the Saale River, is an industrial and mining center of some 330,000 people about 100 miles southwest of Berlin. The store has 7,000 square feet of selling space and will feature selections of merchandise usually found in comparably sized Woolworth stores in the rest of Germany - categories including candies, cosmetics, household goods, stationery, electrical appliances, clothing, baby articles, and toys.

The Halle store, originally opened by Woolworth in 1933, was operated after the war by an agency of the East German government. The property has now been returned to Woolworth's ownership.

The Halle store is the first of two stores Woolworth plans to open in the former East Germany before the end of 1990. The second opening is planned for Dec. 7 in Sommerda, in Thuringia State, about 145 miles southwest of Berlin.

Woolworth, in addition, is considering opening six to eight other stores in what was East Germany in 1991. Before the Second World War, the German company which was established in 1926, operated 19 stores in what became East Germany and what is now the western portion of Poland.

Harold E. Sells, chairman and chief executive officer of the parent company in New York, assisted in the grand-opening ribbon-cutting, attended by national and local business and political dignitaries and many early-morning shoppers. Peter Ellegast, managing director of F.W. Woolworth Co. GmbH, Woolworth's wholly owned German subsidiary, hosted the festivities.

"The Woolworth store we opened today in Halle - the first retail store to be opened by us or any other U.S. retail company in the former East German territory - indicates our faith in the long-term economic strength of the region," Sells said.

"We see a potential of 30-to-40 Woolworth stores to open in what was East Germany during the next several years." Sells stated that the German subsidiary's stores in West Berlin and in other cities bordering the former East Germany have been thronged with eager shoppers from East Germany since the collapse of the Berlin Wall in November 1989.

In Germany, Woolworth currently operates 296 full-scale and "mini" Woolworth general merchandise stores, as well as 170 specialty shops under such names as: Rubin, offering costume jewelry and accessories; Moderna/Der Schuh family shoe stores; Lady Plus apparel shops; New Yorker apparel shops; and Foot

Locker, brand-name athletic footwear and apparel stores. The German company employs over 16,000 in its stores, distribution centers and other facilities throughout Germany.

ELKIN, NC (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Brendle's Incorporated (NASDAQ-NMS: BRDL) today reported results for the third quarter of fiscal 1991. For the three months ending November 3, 1990, sales and other income increased 18.0 percent to $59,870,000, compared with $50,720,000 in the third quarter of fiscal 1990. The Company incurred a net loss of $3,669,000, or $.46 per share, compared wtih a net loss of $2,452,000, or $.31 per share, in the same quarter last year.

For the nine months ending November 3, 1990, sales and other income were $169,623,000, up 16.6 percent from $145,457,000 recorded in the first three quarters of fiscal 1990. The Company reported a net loss of $7,241,000, or $.90 per share, compared with a net loss of $5,350,000, or $.67 per share, in the comparable period a year ago.

Douglas D. Brendle, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, indicated that comparable store sales decreased 5.7 percent in the third quarter, and year-to-date comparable store sales decreased by .8 percent. Comparable store sales were reflective of the overall downturn in the economy, as well as the impact of troop deployments away from communities in which Brendle's has stores.

Commenting on the results, Brendle remarked, "We are please that we have been able to achieve our plan of opening thirteen new locations, relocating two of our existing stores, and expanding our distribution center on a timely and cost-efficient basis; however, we are disappointed that the benefits from these new stores have not been fully realized because of the softness of the economy that began in September of 1990. Even though the economy has weakened considerably when compared to the same period a year ago, we believe that our everyday low prices, coupled with an enhanced presence in our markets, will enable us to weather this current economic slow down and permit us to take advantage of opportunities as they arise."

Brendle's Incorporated operates 59 discount retail stores in North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, and Georgia which offer nationally advertised, brand-name merchandise at everyday low prices. The Company's shares are traded in the NASDAQ National Market under the symbol BRDL.

CLARKSBURG, WV (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Alamco Inc. (AMEX: AXO) today announced significant upward revisions in the company's estimate of its oil and gas reserves.

Based on a recent report by an independent petroleum engineer, Alamco's estimate of total proved reserves was 32.9 equivalent billion cubic feet ("bcf") as of July 1, 1990, representing a net increase of over 11 percent from proved reserves reported at the end of 1989.

After taking into account production for the first six months of 1990. Proved developed reserves increased by 3.1 bcf or 11.7 percent to 30.0 bcf. Proved undeveloped reserves now stand at 2.9 bcf or 5.1 percent higher than year-end 1989.

John Schwager, the company's president and chief executive officer, said that the revisions were made because of Alamco's successful reserve development efforts which have proven the existence of commercially producible quantities of natural gas in formations (of existing wells) which have not yet been opened to production. Gas reserves were also added because Alamco's new Tennessee gas gathering system permits gas sales from a field which previously had produced only oil.

Alamco, headquartered in Clarksburg, W.Va., is an independent producer of gas and oil in the Appalachian Basin with a major operating concentration in West Virginia gas fields.

BRIDGEPORT, WV (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Drilling is under way on Petroleum Development Corp.'s (NASDAQ: PETD) (PDC) last 17 wells of 1990, according to James N. Ryan, chairman.

The program is expected to include at least 17 wells, bringing the company total to 56 wells for 1990. The wells will be drilled in several north central West Virginia counties for natural gas at depths of 4,500 to 5,000 feet.

The 56-well total will more than double the 27 wells which PDC drilled in 1989 and will be PDC's largest drilling program since 1980, when the company drilled 60 wells. Primary funding for the wells has been provided by PDC's publicly registered drilling partnerships.

PDC will retain 20 percent of the partnership interest for its own account. PDC recently announced that it anticipates record earnings in 1990 as a result of the success of its drilling programs and a debt refinancing.

So far in 1990, PDC has closed three partnerships in its 1990 Drilling Program with total subscriptions of $7.1 million. A fourth partnership is scheduled to close on Dec. 31, 1990, to fund drilling activities in the first quarter of 1991.

According to Dale G. Rettinger of PDC, the recent Budget Act significantly enhanced the attractiveness of the year-end program to investors due to the two-year extension of a natural gas tax credit.

The company plans to continue to develop its West Virginia properties in 1991, and has filed a 1991 drilling program with the Securities and Exchange Commission for registration.

Petroleum Development Corp., a leading Appalachian independent oil and gas company, is headquartered in Bridgeport, W.Va., and is engaged in the business of exploring for, developing and producing oil and natural gas. MOUNT AIRY, N.C. (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Insteel Industries, Inc. (AMEX: III), one of the nation's largest wire products manufacturers, today announce that it has entered into an agreement with Community Builders International, based in Florida and in Israel, under which Community Builders International will become the master distributor in Israel for Insteel's new 3-D(TM) panel building system.

Community Builders International is undertaking a housing development in Israel utilizing the 3-D construction system and will also stock and distribute 3-D panels for other builders in Israel. The first container shipment bound for Israel departed the Insteel facility in Brunswick, Ga., this week.

The Insteel 3-D panel building system, which was invented in Austria by EVG Company and is new to North America, is produced by Insteel Construction Systems, Inc., a division of Insteel Industries, at its plant in Brunswick. The 3-D element is a three-dimensional welded wire space frame integrated with an expanded polystyrene insulating core. The lightweight 3-D element is shipped and erected without concrete. After erection on the job site, concrete is applied to each side of the element producing a steel-reinforced concrete sandwich wall.

The 3-D panel system offers design flexibility for architects and engineers by permitting various combinations of steel mesh diameters, strengths and concrete thickness. It has a variety of applications, including residential, commercial, industrial and institutional structures. End-uses include single- or multi-story construction for regular or low-cost housing: curtain, privacy sound barrier and retaining walls; and precast panel sections for low- or high-rise construction. The system has many advantages over conventional construction materials, including built-in thermal insulation, excellent sound characteristics, improved security, low maintenance costs and ease of installation.

Insteel Industries, Inc. produces welded wire reinforcement, high and low carbon industrial wire, galvanized fencing products, specialty wire fabrics and nails. Community Builders International, with an experienced professional management and sales team in place, will not only undertake the housing development but will also license government- qualified construction companies in Israel to build and sell finished houses.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - ICM Property Investors Incorporated (NYSE: ICM), a real estate investment trust, reported today the completion of a previously announced transaction in which it purchased five industrial properties from Peter B. Bedford, a Lafayette, Calif.- based real estate developer. Three of the properties are located in the East Bay community of Concord in the San Francisco metropolitan area and two are in Kansas suburbs of Kansas City.

The company paid $9,050,000 for the properties, of which $3,937,500 was in the form of 500,000 newly issued shares of the company's common stock, and $5,112,500 was in the form of first mortgage notes which are held by a major insurance and financial services company. The stock was valued at $7.875 per share for purposes of the transaction. As a part of the transaction, Bedford was granted a six-month option to purchase 500,000 new shares of the company's stock at a price of $7.875 per share.

The complexity of the transaction and the desire of the parties to complete it in a reasonable time resulted, the company said, in a smaller transaction than originally contemplated.

ICM Property Investors announced that the properties are: -- Buildings 3 and 8 Concord Diablo Industrial Park, Concord, Calif. -- Building 18, Mason Industrial Park, Concord, Calif. -- Cody Street Building 6, Congleton Industrial Park,
Overland Park, Kan. -- Building 3, Ninety-ninth Street Business Park, Lenexa, Kan. Each of the investments was acquired by a separate wholly owned subsidiary of ICM Property Investors Incorporated. The acquisition prices in no case exceeded valuations by appraisers engaged by the independent directors of ICM Property Investors. In addition, Merrill Lynch & Co. rendered its opinion that the consideration paid by the company pursuant to the transaction taken as a whole, was fair to the company from a financial point of view.

KING OF PRUSSIA, PA (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The Nuclear Regulatory Commission Staff has cited Baltimore Gas & Electric (BG&E) for an alleged violation involving the security program at the Calvert Cliffs nuclear plant near Lusby, Maryland.

The NRC staff proposes to fine BG&E $12,500. An anonymous telephone call received by the NRC in September alleged that a shift-security supervisor had allowed dozens of employees access to the protected area without a proper search, and that the supervisor ordered the alarm volume turned down on the metal detectors, because they had been malfunctioning. A subsequent investigation by BG&E confirmed the allegation.

The NRC-approved security plan calls for a hands-on search of all persons whenever the metal or explosives detection equipment is out of service, or not operating properly. The NRC alleges 100 people, who are normally authorized to have access to the facility, gained access to the plant without being searched during the 15 minutes the alarms were turned-down. In addition, at least four other security officers allowed this to happen, without questioning it and without reporting it.

In a letter to BG&E, Thomas T. Martin, Regional Administrator of NRC Region I, said, "Given the number of individuals involved, as well as the poor judgment exercised by the responsible security shift supervisor and the lack of response by other security officers present, the NRC considers this violation significant."

The base fine for such a violation is $50,000. After taking into consideration the company's prior good performance in the security area, the fine was reduced by 75 per cent to $12,500. The fine was not reduced in its entirety because the licensee's corrective actions did not include applying the lessons learned in the initial and requalification training programs for security officers.

Baltimore Gas & Electric has been given 30 days to either pay the proposed fine or to request in writing that all or part of it be withdrawn, giving the reasons for such a request. The company also has been given 30 days to admit or deny the alleged violation, to give reasons for it if admitted, then to describe the actions taken to prevent a recurrence in the future, and to give the date by which it expects to be in full compliance with NRC regulations.

The State of Maryland has been informed of this proposed enforcement action.

CHICAGO (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Duff & Phelps today placed the long-term debt securities of American Telephone and Telegraph Company (AT&T), currently rated 'AA+' (Double-A-Plus), on the Watch List -- Trend Unfavorable. Approximately $4.4 billion of currently outstanding debentures and a shelf registration for $976 million of notes are affected by this action. The long-term debt securities of AT&T Capital Corporation, currently rated 'AA+' (Double-A-Plus), have also been placed on the Watch List -- Trend Unfavorable because of the support provided by the parent under an operating agreement. The action affects approximately $1.5 billion of medium- and long-term notes at AT&T Capital Corporation.

"These Watch List additions reflect the imponderables regarding the financing of AT&T's bid for NCR Corporation (NCR) as well as the challenge of integrating AT&T's computer business with NCR's operations should the acquisition be successful. AT&T has proposed a stock-for- stock merger valued at $90 per NCR share which expires at the close of business on Wednesday, Dec. 5, 1990, but NCR has rejected the offer. Whether AT&T makes a new offer remains to be seen, but there is a possibility that cash could be utilized; this would necessitate borrowing by AT&T, thereby pressuring debt protection measures," explained a spokesman from Duff & Phelps.

AT&T is the largest provider of long distance telecommunications service in the U.S. This business continues to be AT&T's principal source of financial strength. AT&T's products businesses continue to face strong competition, and in some segments margins have been disappointing. In a move away from its traditional businesses, AT&T has targeted the financial services business as an area for growth.

LANDOVER, MD (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Safeway Inc. (NYSE: SWY) announced that on Dec. 12 at 9 a.m., it will open a new 56,000 square foot Safeway Marketplace store at The Market at Opitz Crossing in Woodbridge, Va. This is the first Virginia Safeway constructed since the company introduced its ultra-modern Marketplace design on the West Coast in 1989.

The roomy store sports a layout, decor and lighting much different from Safeways built just two years ago. The service departments (deli, bakery, seafood, floral and pharmacy) are found on the perimeter of the store and each has a distinctive shop-front decor.

Hot foods, fountain sodas and self-serve frozen yogurt will complement the offerings available from the juice bar and the soup and salad bars.

This new store makes a technological breakthrough by incorporating the state-of-the-art Margaux refrigeration system, which allows the store's air conditioning and refrigeration needs to be met by using an ozone-friendly refrigerant gas known as R-22. While R-22 has existed for a long time, it is only recently that new technology has been perfected that allows for use of it for supermarket cooling needs without mixing it with other gases.

Except for closing from 11 p.m. Saturday until 8 a.m. Sunday and from 9 p.m. Sunday through 7 a.m. Monday, the store will operate around the clock.

The new store has a street address of 2042 Daniel Stewart Square and is located on the southwest corner of the intersection of Opitz Boulevard and Route 1. In conjunction with the opening of the new store, Safeway has scheduled the closing on Dec. 8 of its Featherstone Plaza store at 14641 Jeff Davis Highway. LOS ANGELES (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - "We forecast a 4-6 percent average annual growth in the U.S. market for flat rolled stainless steel during the 1990s," Jay G. Schwarm, general sales manager-Western Region for Allegheny Ludlum Corp. (NYSE: ALS), said today.

In speaking before more than 100 West Coast executives at a forum sponsored by the American Metal Market, a daily metals publication, he said that "greater recognition of life cycle/quality costing" should mean continued growth in demand for stainless steel.

Among reasons cited by Schwarm is that "for the competitive shopper, stainless steel is a good buy." Over the past ten years the cost of stainless steel has risen at a slower rate than the CPI, other indices and materials, including aluminum and carbon steel.

Schwarm estimated the West Coast market for flat rolled specialty steel (stainless, high temperature and other corrosion resistant alloys) at over $300 million annually. "We view the West as an integral and fast-growing segment of the overall market," he said. He noted that the area is a very important market for specialty steel strip products for the aerospace and other regional industries.

Alstrip Inc., Allegheny Ludlum's subsidiary, maintains a service center operation in Brea, Calif., specializing in stainless strip steel for regional markets. Schwarm has held responsibilities in sales and marketing at Allegheny Ludlum for 23 years.

Headquartered in Pittsburgh, Allegheny Ludlum is a leading producer of a wide range of specialty materials, including stainless steels, electrical steels and high technology alloys. The company, which is listed on the New York Stock Exchange, reported 1989 sales revenues of $1.2 billion, with net income of $133.8 million.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - C.W. Coker, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Sonoco Products (NASDAQ-NMS: SONO), and R.C. King, president and chief operating officer, discussed 1990 performance and the company's positioning for 1991 and beyond with financial analysts today, (December 6) at a meeting in New York.

"We continue to expect that when final numbers are in from continuing operations, 1990 will be another record year for us," Mr. Coker told analysts.

The two officers outlined five primary challenges facing the company. These challenges include growing the company's traditional businesses in the range of 8 percent to 10 percent per year; growing consumer packaging businesses in the range of 12 percent to 15 percent per year; putting the high density film products operation back on its growth track; making significant acquisitions of companies within the packaging industry; and continuing its environmental responsibility.

They told the analysts that Sonoco has embarked on a company-wide program designed to instill a total quality management program throughout the organization. "Total Customer satisfaction will become our primary objective and obsession," said Mr. King.

Coker told the analysts that while results from continuing operations will be up slightly over 1989, the figures will be short of stated objectives. Sonoco's goals remain to grow annual earnings per share 10 percent to 15 percent, achieve a return on equity of 20 percent; with consistent dividend

"We will enter the new year with our businesses well positioned and well managed. Without acquisitions and given a reasonable economy, we would expect 1991 earnings to be within our stated growth objectives," concluded Coker.

ARUBA, DUTCH CARIBBEAN, (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Divi Hotels N.V. (AMEX: DVH) today announced a loss for the first quarter ended July 31, 1990, of $10,228,000 or $1.79 per share, compared with a loss for the same period in the prior year of $7,223,000 or $1.31 per share.

For the quarter ended July 31, Divi reported revenues of $16,622,000, a decrease of 27 percent from the $22,675,000 reported in the comparable period last year. Hotel room, food and beverage revenues were adversely affected by the company's sale of its two Aruban hotels in September 1989, the damage caused by Hurricane Hugo in St. Croix and a general industry slowdown throughout the Caribbean. Timesharing revenues decreased $374,000 or 12 percent compared with the quarter ended July 31, 1989 due primarily to delays in construction of planned projects, increased competition in Aruba and decreased hotel occupancy.

SAN ANTONIO (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. Long Distance Corp. (NASDAQ: USLD) today reported sharply higher revenues and a narrowing loss for the year ended Sept. 30, 1990. For the year, revenues more than doubled to $19,345,000 from $8,662,000 in the prior year. The loss from continuing operations was $543,000, or 3 cents per share, a significant improvement from last year's loss of $1,485,000, or 12 cents per share. After a provision of $77,000 for preferred stock requirements, the net loss applicable to common stock for the recent year was $620,000 or 3 cents per share. The previous year's net loss of $744,000, or 6 cents per share, had benefited from the sale of a discontinued operation amounting to $741,000.

For the fourth quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990, revenues rose 125 percent to $6,600,000 from $2,900,000 in the same quarter a year ago. Net income for the quarter grew to $377,000, or 2 cents per share, versus the net loss of $388,000, or 3 cents per share, in the same quarter of 1989. This represents a positive swing of $765,000.

In August, the company estimated revenues for the fourth quarter would be $6.2 million and would approach $19 million for the year. Management anticipated the net loss for the year would be $700,000. Actual results were better than these estimates.

"It is believed the company has solidly turned the corner on profitability with its past two quarters reporting strong gains. The year-end loss reflects the investment into capital expenditures incurred in the first half of fiscal 1990 needed to support future growth," reported Parris H. Holmes Jr., chairman and chief executive officer.

"The surge in corporate revenues came as a result of a doubling of revenues from the operator services segment and a revenue increase of 170 percent in billing services," he said.

U.S. Long Distance Corp.'s primary business is providing long distance telephone service to the hospitality and pay telephone industries. The company also provides billing and collection services to interexchange carriers.

PRINCETON, N.J. (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - In a presentation before the New York Society of Security Analysts (NYSSA) today, Cytogen Corp. (NASDAQ: CYTO) announced it had observed measurable anti-tumor effects in the majority of patients who received the highest administered dose of OncoRad(R), the company's tumor targeted radioisotopic cancer therapy agent.

Phase I clinical trials of the monoclonal antibody-based product were designed to determine the maximum tolerated dose of the targeted cytotoxic radioisotope yttrium-90, that could be safely administered to cancer patients. The studies demonstrated the agent was well tolerated over a range of doses from 1 millicurie (mCi) to 15 mCi of yttrium. The dose limiting toxicity was a decrease in the blood platelet count. At the 15 mCi dose, over 50 percent of patients showed an anti-tumor response as evidenced by a significant decline in the levels of CEA -- a serum tumor marker which serves as one objective measure of a patient's tumor burden.

Cytogen announced that in 1991 it would be pursuing Phase II clinical trials in ovarian and colorectal cancer in patients with minimal residual disease, as well as initiating clinical trials with a therapeutic agent for prostate cancer.

Thomas J. McKearn, M.D., Ph.D., executive vice president, said that while Phase I studies generally evaluate the safety of a product, "the company was very encouraged by the tumor responses noted during these studies, which were performed in patients who had failed all prior therapies."

"The goal of our Phase II studies," he continued, "is to demonstrate a consistent therapeutic effect in patients who are less advanced in the course of their disease."

Cytogen updated the NYSSA on its progress in cancer imaging. The company currently has six imaging products in clinical development. Two of these, OncoScint(R) colorectal and OncoScint ovarian, are currently under final marketing review at the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). OncoScint prostate has successfully completed Phase I human clinical trials and is currently in Phase II studies. Three other products for lung, breast and colorectal cancers have recently been authorized by the FDA to begin human clinical evaluation.

Most impressive were results presented on the company's repeat administration trials with OncoScint CR103. In these studies, patients were imaged at approximately six month intervals following initial surgery. The OncoScint product detected early recurrent colorectal cancer in about one-third of these patients -- often at a time when other diagnostic imaging modalities were still negative.

In addition to its monoclonal antibody-based cancer imaging and therapy programs, Cytogen described new programs in the areas of cardiovascular and autoimmune diseases. Based upon progress in its molecular recognition unit (MRU) program, the company said it would be filing an Investigational New Drug (IND) application in December for ThromboScan(R), an MRU-based blood clot (thrombus) imaging agent. The company also said it would be initiating a new development program for the treatment of rheumatoid arthritis. These new entities addressed by MRU technology represent a total potential market of over $3 billion.

George Ebright, chairman and chief executive officer, reviewed the company's financial expectations for 1990 and objectives for 1991. The company said it expects to lose approximately $17.3 million in 1990 ($1.36 per share), and will end the year with approximately $39 million in cash. Objectives for 1991 include European product approval for OncoScint colorectal, multicenter Phase II clinical evaluation of the OncoRad cancer therapy products and initiation of clinical cardiovascular imaging trials of ThromboScan.

"It's going to be another year of milestones," concluded Ebright. "We are moving from the research product development stage into product commercialization and within a very short period of time, we will be selling our products in Europe and the U.S. Our long-term goal is to become financially self-sufficient and provide long-term, meaningful return to our stockholders."

Cytogen Corp. is a biopharmaceutical company which has developed proprietary systems for linking drugs and diagnostic agents to monoclonal antibodies in order to optimize the function of the antibody as a delivery vehicle. With major emphasis on human cancer, current product development efforts at Cytogen are focused on improved cancer diagnostic imaging agents and the targeted delivery of cancer therapeutic agents directly to tumor sites.

EDISON, N.J. (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Midlantic Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MIDL), which has a well-established record within the banking industry for expense and staffing control, has announced a series of actions to intensify its program to reduce operating costs. Annual expense savings from this program are anticipated to be in excess of $25 million.

In a memorandum to all staff members, Midlantic Corporation Chairman Robert Van Buren stated, "Midlantic is committed to maintaining its position as a premier company in the banking industry and to providing the highest level of customer service. We have strengthened our balance sheet and the following actions are being taken to control expenses in order to ensure that Midlantic Corporation is an efficient, effective and profitable provider of financial services."

First, the corporation has initiated a hiring freeze on all new positions. In addition, any vacancies that do not directly affect customer service will require special approval before the position can be filled.

Second, several actions regarding compensation have been implemented. There will be no cash bonus payments for calendar year 1990; an exception to this policy will be special sales incentive programs. As was previously announced, there will be no profit sharing distribution under the Midlantic profit sharing plan.

Finally, managers will be required to reduce expenses while ensuring that the corporation continues to provide quality customer service.

In announcing these measures, Van Buren stated, "The banking industry is confronting one of the most difficult operating environments in decades. Furthermore, our regional economy has experienced a downturn in activity and real estate values have declined significantly. Midlantic Corporation is taking these prudent actions to better position the company during this extraordinarily challenging period."

Midlantic Corporation is an interstate bank holding company headquartered in Edison. The corporation, with assets of approximately $24 billion, operates 512 offices primarily in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and New York.

MARKHAM, ONTARIO (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Magna International Inc. (TSE: MG.A MG.B; NASDAQ: MAGAF) today announced results for the first quarter of fiscal 1991. Consolidated sales for the first quarter were $444.5 million, a 3.3 percent decrease as compared to the sales achieved in the first quarter of fiscal 1990. North American vehicle production volume was comparable at 3.2 million units for the two quarters. Pretax income from operations for the quarter was $10.5 million as compared to a loss of $15.9 million for the comparable period last year. Earnings per share was $0.10 per share as compared to a loss per share of $0.36 for the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

MAGNA INTERNATIONAL INC.
(Unaudited,000's except per share figures)

Three months ended Oct. 31:	1990	1989
Sales	$444,539	$459,733
Operating income	$10,529	$(15,947)
Net income (loss)	$2,785	$(9,906)
Earnings (loss) per share	$0.10	$(0.36)
Average shares outstanding (thousands)	27,819	27,819

The results of the first quarter of fiscal 1991 were positively effected by the rationalization and restructuring programs previously announced by the company.

First quarter sales of fiscal 1990 include sales of approximately $68 million relating to divisions that were sold, joint ventured or closed as part of the program. Sales from remaining divisions increased $53 million in the first quarter of fiscal 1991 as compared to fiscal 1990 reflecting the positive effect of several new production programs relating to a number of the company's newer divisions.

Increased capacity utilization, combined with the benefits achieved through the company's cost reduction program and the elimination of a number of losing divisions is reflected in the gross margin percentage increase of 3.9 percent to 21.3 percent. Further gross margin improvement should be achieved as the company continues its rationalization program. Depreciation expense decreased approximately $4.7 million reflecting the affects of the asset sales achieved as a part of the company debt reduction program.

Selling, general and administrative expense decreased $9.2 million or 1.7 percent as a percentage of sales during the first quarter of fiscal 1991 over the comparable period of fiscal 1990 reflecting the elimination in these expenses related to the divisions sold, joint ventured or closed and the positive effect of the rationalization program.

Total capital spending for the quarter was $8.3 million. The company has put in place tight spending controls and is optimistic that total 1991 capital spending will come under the budgeted amount of $47 million.

During the quarter the company generated $77 million of cash through asset sales. Transactions closed during the quarter included the sale of the company's electrical motor sub group. Subsequent to the quarter end to Dec. 5 1990, additional asset sale transactions in total generated an additional $80 million of cash. The company is pleased to announce the completion on Dec. 5, 1990 of the strategic investment by Ford Motor Company in the company's plastics operation in Guelph, Ontario and its tool and die operation in Concord, Ontario. The company looks forward to its ongoing participation with Ford in these operations. To date, the company has generated approximately $213 million of cash through asset sales as part of the restructuring plan. This represents approximately 50 percent of the company's target.

The company also announced that the March 1, 1991 dividend on its Class A and Class B shares has been suspended.

Debt Restructuring Highlights The following table presents the debt reduction achieved by the company from its peak in January 1990 to Dec. 5, 1990:

Debt outstanding Jan. 31, 1990	$1,119
Asset sales and net cash from operations	193
Debt (net of cash) outstanding Oct. 31, 1990	926
Asset sales and net cash from operations from Nov. 1, 1990 to Dec. 5, 1990	80
Debt (net of cash) outstanding Dec. 5, 1990	$846

Management is committed to further debt reduction. Negotiations for further asset sales and joint ventures are presently under way and management is very optimistic that through asset sales, joint venturing activities and cash generated from operations, the company can generate a further $250 million by July 31, 1991 which will reduce the company's debt to approximately $600 million.

Management will curtail expansion to a minimum until a long term debt to equity ratio of 0.5:1 is achieved. Management believes this ratio can be achieved by July, 1992.

Stringent disciplines are in place to reduce overhead and curtail capital spending and management is committed to further asset sales. Management hopes these efforts and commitments are recognized by all interested parties, including lenders, employees, customers, suppliers and shareholders. Management is hopeful that within the next few months a formal debt restructuring plan will be finalized which will ensure that the interests of all affected parties are protected and dealt with fairly. This approach will ensure that Magna remains a viable company and that all outstanding obligations can be paid in full.

Outlook While the automotive market is presently down and though we feel it will decrease further, management still feels that reasonable profits can be generated during the upcoming year based on a solid backlog of orders, car lines which are selling well, improved efficiencies, streamlined operations and a total focus on Magna's core business, the production of automotive components.

HOUSTON (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Seagull Energy Corp. (NYSE: SGO) announced today that it has executed a definitive agreement implementing its previously announced plans to acquire a portfolio of natural gas and oil producing properties, reserves and leasehold acreage from Mesa Limited Partnership (NYSE: MLP).

In negotiating the definitive agreement, the two companies revised somewhat the properties involved and certain terms stipulated in a letter of intent finalized on Oct. 9, 1990. Completion of the transaction remains subject to customary regulatory clearances and to Seagull arranging acceptable financing by Dec. 14, 1990.

Under the definitive agreement, Seagull will acquire proved reserves of 315.7 billion cubic feet (bcf) of natural gas and 8.1 million barrels of crude oil, condensate and natural gas liquids, as measured by independent engineers as of January 1, 1990, plus 253,450 net producing and 133,190 net undeveloped leasehold acres.

The definitive agreement calls for Seagull to pay a cash price of $351.25 million, and assume approximately $9 million in liabilities, primarily associated with gas contract imbalances.

The economic effective date has been moved from Dec. 1, 1990, to Nov. 1, 1990. The two companies now expect the transaction to be completed in early 1991.

The letter of intent had called for Seagull to pay $376 million in cash, plus assume approximately $50 million in similar liabilities, for reserves estimated to total 384 bcf of gas and 10.5 million barrels of crude oil, condensate and natural gas liquids as of Jan. 1, 1990. The earlier portfolio included 338,070 net producing and 140,000 net undeveloped acres.

A contingent payment clause, also revised from its original terms, provides for Mesa to receive an additional payment of no more than $37.5 million on April 1, 1994, determined generally by the extent to which the weighted average wellhead price of gas sold from the acquired properties in 1991 through 1993 exceeds $1.975 per thousand cubic feet.

"We are pleased with the progress we're making toward finalizing the acquisition, and anxious to assume management of the properties," said Seagull Chairman Barry J. Galt. "We also are making good progress in negotiating financing arrangements, which we expect to have completed in a matter of days.

"We are encouraged by the degree to which it has been recognized that these properties will greatly diversify our total reserve portfolio, give us significant reserve positions and exploratory prospects in geographic areas other than our historic Gulf Coast area of emphasis, and extend the average reserve life of our company's reserves," Galt noted.

HOUSTON (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - American General Corp. (NYSE: AGC) announced today that its board of directors has reviewed and rejected the two proposals relating to the sale of its home service insurance subsidiaries received on Dec. 3, 1990, pursuant to its previously announced invitation for bids. Further, the board directed mangaement to end the sale process that was launched on May 2, 1990, authorized the resumption of its share repurchase program, and decided on a new indicated level of dividends on its common stock for 1991.

In commenting on the proposals, Harold S. Hook, chairman and chief executive officer, said, "The higher proposal offered a total of $3.65 billion for the home service companies, of which $1.8 billion represented the assumption of corporate debt. Under this proposal, American General shareholders would have received about $15 per share in a combination of cash and securities of the acquiring company. The board concluded that this proposal fell short of the value of these operations.

The board of directors also authorized management to resume purchases under the company's stock repurchase program. Since the current program was initiated on April 1, 1987, more than 20 percent of the shares outstanding on that date have been purchased for an aggregate cost of approximately $1 billion. Purchases under that proram had been suspended since the May 1990 announcement of the sale process.

At the time of the announcement in May 1990 of the decision to offer the company for sale, a dividend rate of 80 cents per quarter was established, to provide shareholders an additional return while they waited for the process to be completed. Now that the sale process is concluded, the board announced its intention to set a new indicated annual common dividend rate of $2.00 per share for 1991, representing a 27 percent increase over the $1.58 annual rate in effect prior to the May announcement. The first quarter 1991 dividend is to be declared in February and paid to shareholders on March 1, 1991.

TROY, MI (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Kmart Corporation (NYSE: KM) announced today that it has agreed to support a stockholder proposal from the State of Wisconsin Investment Board (SWIB) concerning the company's shareholder rights plan and that it has adopted a policy on confidential proxy voting.

The proposal concerning the rights plan, if approved by stockholders at the May 1991 annual meeting, would amend the plan to shorten its term from 1998 to 1995 unless continuation of the plan is approved by stockholders at the 1995 annual meeting, would approve the plan as so amended, and would establish a process for stockholders to approve any further extensions of the plan at three-year intervals. The initial period for stockholder approval for continuation of the plan coincides with the scheduled 1995 completion of Kmart's major store renewal program.

At the company's 1990 annual meeting, stockholders approved a SWIB proposal requesting that the rights plan be submitted to a stockholder vote. After careful consideration of such request, and after discussing with SWIB its desire to establish a process for periodic stockholder approval of the continuation of the rights plan (a so-called "sunset" provision) and the company's previously announced strategic business plan to relocate, expand and/or refurbish all domestic Kmart stores, the company has agreed to support SWIB's current proposal.

The company's policy on confidential proxy voting provides in general that stockholder proxies will be tabulated by an independent party and that how a stockholder voted will not be disclosed to the company prior to final tabulation of the vote at the stockholder meeting. Confidential voting has been the subject of stockholder proposals at the company's last two annual meetings.

Kmart Corporation serves America with more than 4,000 retail outlets in all 50 states in the United States and in Puerto Rico and Canada. Kmart, currently operating 2,363 Kmart stores, is also the parent company for Pay Less Drug Stores, Builders Square, Waldenbooks, PACE Membership Warehouse and The Sports Authority.

DENVER (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Cyprus Minerals Co. (NYSE: CYM) board of directors announced today that Cyprus plans to adopt the tax accounting provisions of FASB 96 retroactive to Jan. 1, 1989. This will result in an increase of approximately $85 million to the previously reported 1989 tax provision and a restatement of 1989 earnings from $250 million to approximately $165 million. The charge principally results from the recognition of the tax effect of differences between the financial reporting and income tax basis of certain mining properties. While this accounting change has an impact for financial reporting purposes, it has no effect on Cyprus' cash flow or actual tax payments.

In addition, the board of directors approved the write-down of certain assets which will reduce fourth quarter 1990 after-tax earnings by about $40 million. These charges include the write-down of Cyprus' Tonopah, Nevada, molybdenum mine and certain miscellaneous assets.

Management has decided to place the Tonopah mine on care and maintenance status in the first quarter of 1991 because of higher than anticipated costs due to ore grade problems, current low prices, and lower demand for molybdenum.

Cyprus Minerals, headquartered in Englewood, Colo., is a major producer of copper, coal, molybdenum, lithium, and talc. It also produces gold, iron ore, and zinc.

BOCA RATON, FL (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Here are 15 easy fuel-saving tips from Toyota.

"The way you use your car and take care of it will have a tremendous impact on fuel economy," said David Majcher, vice president, service for Southeast Toyota Distributors. "It will also increase your enjoyment of the car and reduce your cost of operation."

To save fuel and help make your vehicle last longer: -- Keep your tires inflated at the correct pressure. Underinflation causes tire wear and wastes fuel. -- Do not carry unneeded weight in your vehicle. Excess weight puts a heavier load on the engine, causing greater fuel consumption. -- Avoid lengthy warm-up idling. Once the engine is running smoothly, begin driving -- but gently. Remember, however, that on cold days this may take a little longer. -- Accelerate slowly and smoothly. Avoid jackrabbit starts.
Get into high gear as quickly as possible. -- Avoid long engine idling. If the driver has long wait and is not in traffic, it is better to turn off the engine and start again later. -- Avoid engine lug or overreving. Use a gear range suitable for the road traveled. -- Use the air conditioner only when absolutely necessary.
The air conditioner puts an extra load on the engine, increasing fuel consumption. -- Avoid continuous speeding up and slowing down. Stop-and-go driving wastes fuel. -- Avoid unnecessary stopping and braking. Maintain a steady pace. Try to time the traffic signals, so you only need to stop as little as possible or take advantage of through streets to avoid traffic lights. Keep a proper distance from other vehicles to avoid sudden braking. This will also reduce wear on your brakes. -- Avoid heavy traffic or traffic jams whenever possible. -- Do not rest your foot on the clutch or brake pedal.
This causes needless wear, overheating and poor fuel economy. -- Maintain a moderate speed on highways. The faster you drive, the greater the fuel consumption. By reducing your speed you will cut down on fuel consumption. -- Keep the front wheels in proper alignment. Avoid hitting the curb and slow down on rough roads. Improper alignment not only causes faster tire wear but also puts an extra load on the engine, which, in turn, wastes fuel. -- Keep the bottom of your vehicle free from mud, etc. This not only lessens weight, but also helps prevent corrosion. -- Keep your vehicle tuned-up and in top shape. A dirty air cleaner, improper valve clearance, dirty plugs, dirty oil and grease, brakes not adjusted, etc., all lower engine performance and contribute to poor fuel economy. For longer life of all parts and lower operating costs, keep all maintenance work on schedule, anad if you often drive under severe conditions, see that your vehicle receives more frequent maintenance.

NASSAU, BAHAMAS (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - British-American Insurance Company, Ltd. NASSAU, BAHAMAS, today announced that the Directors have declared a regular quarterly interim dividend of $.12 per share payable on December 18, 1990 to shareholders of record on December 17, 1990.

On December 3, 1990, the Wilmington Trust Company (NASDAQ-NMS: WILM), Trustee of the McMillen Trust, 65 percent majority shareholder of British-American, opposed the declaration and payment of the dividend and requested the Supreme Court of the Bahamas to deny British-American's application to allow the payment. The Court granted permission to the British-American Directors to declare the dividend if they decided to do so.

The Directors beleive that the Trustee may attempt to appeal the Order allowing the dividend and that the Trustee may further seek to obtain a stay of the Order which, if successful, could prevent payment until the issue is resolved. The Directors are unable to predict the eventual outcome of the matter.

On October 1, 1990, the Directors declared a dividend of $3.00 per share which was similarly opposed by the Trustee. Payment of that dividend is currently the subject of litigation in the Supreme Court of the Bahamas and the Directors are likewise unable to predict whether its payment will ultimately be permitted by the court.

Continental Airlines has filed for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the Federal Bankruptcy Code. The airline has announced that there will be no disruption of either its service or its frequent flier program and that the judge presiding over the filing is permitting Continental Airlines to pay customers seeking ticket refunds.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Donald R. Beall, chairman and chief executive officer of Rockwell International Corp. (NYSE: ROK) told California's top business leaders today that the global competitive environment demands that Americans "clear away the obstacles to educational excellence at all levels" in order to achieve a world-class workforce and success in the marketplace.

"The good news is that every student now in school will have the opportunity for employment, but the bad news is that the majority of them will not be qualified," Beall said, quoting from a position paper by the California Manufacturers Association (CMA).

Beall made his remarks after receiving the 1990 Manufacturer of the Year Award from the CMA in Los Angeles. The award is presented annually to an outstanding leader of industry who also has shown a commitment to improvement of the lives of employees and community members.

Beall has led Rockwell in its active involvement in improving education. The corporation has provided $50 million in the last 10 years to support more than 200 educational programs.

"According to a recent survey by the Department of Education, the typical eight-grader spends 21 hours a week watching TV, but only five hours doing homework and two hours reading. To me, that doesn't say much for parental involvement," Beall said.

"I think it's about time we stopped blaming our schools and started helping them. In my view, responsibility for helping our young people lies with all of us."

Earlier in the award ceremonies, CMA Chairman Ralph Baxter praised Beall. "When we speak of industrial and civic leadership, Don Beall provides an outstanding example.

Beall was elected to his current position at Rockwell in 1988. He served as president and chief operating officer of the corporation from 1979 - 1988.

MIAMI (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastern Airlines today said business travelers who fly with its "Corporate Rates" during December and January will receive an Eastern weekender certificate good for roundtrip weekend flights on Eastern during 1991 for just $91.

"More than 700,000 customers have already discovered the advantages of flying first class on Eastern at a coach fare," said George Brennan, senior v.p.-marketing. "This is one more advantage to flying with an Eastern Corporate Rate, and also a way to encourage those who haven't tried the product to fly it."

The $91 weekend fare is valid for travel Jan. 3 through June 18, 1991, in coach class to any domestic destination, excluding Eastern Express flights. Bookings are subject to capacity controls and passengers must begin travel Thursday through Saturday and return Sunday through Tuesday of the same weekend.

Customers qualify for the $91 weekender fare by flying Eastern's Corporate Rates anytime before Jan. 31, 1991. Eligible customers obtain their $91 weekender travel certificate by mailing a copy of their Corporate Rate ticket, original boarding passes and the name and address of the certificate recipient to: Eastern Airlines-MIAKG, P.O. Box 526225, Miami, Fla. 33152-6225.

EASTERN CUSTOMERS NOTE STRONG IMPROVEMENT Eastern has scored dramatic gains in customer satisfaction ratings over the past six months, and first class bookings at Eastern's new "Corporate Rates" are growing, according to recent in-flight surveys.

On-board customer surveys in the past three months give Eastern high marks in several broad categories of service, including courtesy, on-time departure, cleanliness of the aircraft and overall attitude of personnel.

Customers now rate the overall attitude of Eastern personnel at a strong 4.2 on a scale of 1-5, up from 2.0 in March 1990. Satisfaction with courtesy and treatment received at the ticket counter has jumped from 2.1 to 4.0, and customers now rate Eastern at 4.3 for courtesy and treatment received on board the aircraft, compared with 1.9 in March 1990.

Passenger satisfaction with on-time departure performance reflects Eastern's outstanding record in this key area. According to Department of Transportation figures, in the seven months between March and November of 1990 Eastern had the second best on-time record of 12 major carriers, performing markedly better than Delta, United, or American. America West was first.

A separate survey of travel agents conducted last month reveals that Eastern's new first class "Corporate Rates" have won widespread approval from this critical sector of the travel industry. Among travel agents surveyed, more than 70 percent have booked passengers in the new first class section on Eastern's Corporate Rate. In Atlanta, the figures were even higher: 98 percent of those surveyed have booked customers on Eastern's Corporate Rates.

HOUSTON (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Zapata Corp.'s (NYSE: ZOS) stockholders today approved a financial restructuring plan that is to go into effect if tender offers for the company's subordinated debentures are successful. If the tender offers fail, however, the company believes it will likely have to file for protection under the bankruptcy laws.

On Wednesday (Dec. 5), the Zapata Board of Directors voted to increase its offers for the company's 10-1/4 percent subordinated debentures due 1997 and 10-7/8 percent debentures due 2001 to $520 per $1,000 principal amount. On November 5, Zapata had offered debenture holders $480 per $1,000 principal amount. Zapata's outstanding subordinated debentures total $77.6 million.

The Board also agreed to extend the deadline for tendering the debentures from December 5 to December 20 and to require the tender of 66-2/3 percent of total outstanding debentures, rather than the 80 percent previously specified.

Debenture holders who have already tendered their debentures do not need to take any further action to receive the increased price if the tender is successful. Debenture holders who wish to withdraw debentures they have already tendered have until the Dec. 20 deadline to do so.

"The Board has extended the tender offers and raised the amount being offered in hopes that we can retire a sufficient amount of subordinated debt to enable the company to complete its comprehensive debt restructuring," Lassiter said. "If the tender offers are not successful, the restructuring will fail and we will likely have to file for protection under the bankruptcy laws.

"We cannot predict how much debenture holders would receive through bankruptcy proceedings, but we believe that it would be significantly less than the amount being offered," he said.

The restructuring plan approved by Zapata stockholders at a special meeting here today was announced at the company's June 26 annual stockholders meeting. The restructuring is contingent upon the successful completion of the tender offers.

Zapata has not had an operating profit since the first quarter of 1985. The company had a loss of $42.2 million for the nine months ended June 30, 1990.

Zapata Corp. is a Houston-based company that produces oil and natural gas, conducts commercial menhaden fishing operations that produce fish meal and edible oil, and manages a fleet of offshore drilling rigs. Zapata is also the largest shareholder in Zapata Gulf Marine Corporation, the world's leading operator of marine service vessels.

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, CA (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Volkswagen of America Inc., today delivered three alternative fuel cars to agencies of California governments.

VW's multi-fuel Jettas are capable of operating on any combination of gasoline and clean-burning methanol fuel. The cars feature a unique alcohol sensor and a three-way catalytic converter that simultaneously reduces hydrocarbons, carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxides, unburnt methanol and aldehydes.

"These Jettas are the first of an initial fleet of 310 alternative fuel vehicles that Volkswagen plans to build for government agenicies in California " said Dr. Winfried Bernhardt, director of Engine and Transmission Research for Volkswagen AG, Wolfsburg, Germany.

Charles R. Imbrecht, chairman of the California Energy Commission, noted: "Volkswagen of America was one of the first car manufacturers om the Energy Commission's program in 1981. I am pleased that through this company's commitment and foresight, we have vehicles on the road now that will measurably improve the state's air quality and enhance the state's energy security."

Bernhardt presented the cars to officials representing the California Energy Commission, the South Coast Air Quality Management District and Sacramento County.

The presentation also marked the official opening of VW's new emission test laboratory at the company's regional offices in Westlake Village.

The multi-fuel Jetta is powered by a modified four cylinder, 1.8-liter engine. It is identical in appearance to gasoline-powered Jetta models with the single exception of a fiber optic fuel mixture display on the dashboard.

VW has been conducting alternative fuel research since 1971 and has produced in Brazil more than 2.2 million vehicles powered by ethanol.

The multi-fuel Jettas exceed the driving performance of conventionally powered gasoline engine Jettas while reducing the emission of chemical compounds that adversely affect the environment.

VW is the world's fourth-largest car maker and is composed of the VW, Audi and SEAT brands. It has been the sales leader in Europe for the last five consecutive years, and is the 1990 sales leader with a 15 percent share of the market.

GREENSBURG, Pa. (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Sony Engineering and Manufacturing of America (SEMA) and the Sony Medical Electronics Division of Sony of America (SME) today donated $4,000 of My First Sony(R) and other consumer electronics products to the pediatrics and children's services at Westmoreland Hospital, it was announced.

The gift is part of Sony's "For The Kids" program through which more than $100,000 in audio and video equipment will be presented to 25 hospitals around the country.

"One of Sony's main operating objectives is to be a good corporate citizen and a good neighbor, and we can think of no better way to do that than by making this investment in the children of Westmoreland County," explained Clint Michaelis, executive vice president, SEMA. Michaelis, representing SEMA and the local Sony facility which is scheduled to open in late 1992, announced the donation at the light-up of Harry Overly's annual Christmas light display in Westmoreland County.

Michael Baron, general manager of Sony Medical Electronics Division, stressed the important role the equipment can play in the recovery of children. "We're happy to join with Mr. Overly and the Westmoreland Hospital Foundation in making this donation. Hospitalization can be hard on a child. Our hope is that through this "gift of music" Sony can help make the children's hospital stay a little easier and happier."

In accepting the For The Kids donation, John McGeary, president of the Westmoreland Hospital Foundation, echoed Baron's sentiments. "The healing process involves the mind and spirit as well as the body, especially for hospitalized children who must cope with separation from family and friends and a new and foreign environment. Children are not little adults, they need special people, equipment and facilities. The Sony donation won't break a fever, but it eases the pain, making for a good medicine and a healthier child."

Westmoreland Hospital will use the donation equipment in its pediatric ward in order to help the children better cope with their hospital stays. "The music and movies donated by Sony will enable children to take their minds off being ill and concentrate on being a child," McGeary added. "A positive frame of mind is an important element of the healing process and this should help in that regard."

The donation was announced at the lighting of the 31st annual country Christmas display at the Armbrust, Westmoreland County home of Overly. The display, which spans seven acres and includes more than 11,430 strands of lights and over 450,000 bulbs, is expected to draw over 300,000 cars this year. For the 13th year, Overly has teamed with the Westmoreland Hospital Foundation to collect donations for the hospital's pediatrics and children's services. Overly's past efforts have raised over $450,000 for the hospital, and have helped to establish the Overly Health and Humor Organization, a visiting group of clowns that frequents the hospital.

"I wanted to see the money from the light-up to go a program which would help the hospitalized child and which would distinguish Westmoreland Hospital as providing something out of the ordinary," Overly said. "I'm thrilled that Sony is contributing to our efforts this year. The equipment will be welcomed by the kids."

In each of the For The Kids donations, the participating hospital can choose the audio and video equipment they deem the most appropriate. Past donations have included Trinitron(R) televisions, VHS video recorders, 8mm camcorders, BabyCall monitors, My First Sony stereo cassette recorders and radio cassettes.

DALLAS (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - El Chico Corp.(NASDAQ: TXMX) today announced financial results for the quarter ended Nov. 12, 1990, and a change in the name of the corporation effective today to Southwest Cafes Inc. System-wide sales, including sales from franchised restaurants, were $26,046,000 down 1.0 percent from $26,275,000 recorded in the prior year. Net sales from company operations were $18,686,000, a decrease of 1.0 percent from the $18,871,000 recorded a year ago. Both declines were due to a decrease in sales of Pronto design, a subsidiary specializing in kitchen design and equipment sales, from $827,000 to $477,000. Comparable store sales increased 1.2 percent for company-owned stores, and increased 5.1 percent for franchised stores. Franchise related income included in net sales decreased from $370,000 to $349,000 due to a reduction in the number of franchised stores.

The net income for the quarter was $57,000, or 1 cent per share, down from $121,000 or 2 cents per share, for the same 12 week period a year ago. Lower Pronto sales and franchise royalties coupled with slightly lower margins and a higher effective tax rate accounted for the decline in net income.

Separately, the company's shareholders approved changing the name of the company from "El Chico Corporation" to "Southwest Cafes Inc." effective Dec. 6, 1990. The company's NASDAQ trading symbol will change from "ELCH" to "TXMX" effective the same date. According to Gilbert Cuellar Jr., chairman and CEO, "The new corporate name reflects more accurately the company's emerging base of restaurant businesses. The company's strategy calls for expansion of three restaurant concepts, including El Chico," Cuellar continued. "Each concept will be tailored to meet the demands of specific market segments," he concluded.

In 1990 the company secured its second location for the successful Cantina Laredo restaurant concept. Southwest Cafes Inc., plans to open additional Cantina Laredo restaurants and a new concept restaurant in Nashville, as well as new El Chico franchised restaurants.

The 50-year-old, Dallas-based company owns and franchises full-service, "Tex-Mex" style Mexican restaurants in 12 states throughout the Southern and Southwestern regions of the United States. As of Nov. 12, 1990, the company had 60 company-owned restaurants and supported a network of 29 franchised restaurants.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The Indonesian government announced today a series of regulations intended to modernize its growing capital market by increasing market efficiency, toughening disclosure rules and prepare the way for privatization of the Jakarta Stock Exchange.

Ministry of Finance officials revealed in Jakarta the contents of a promised financial reform package "The Capital Market Presidential and Ministerial Decrees," that places a greater emphasis and responsibility on the private sector for development of Indonesia's financial market.

The package mandates full disclosure of material information, including immediate disclosure of changes in a company's financial condition or operation that can affect investors. BAPEPAM, the capital market executive agency, will continue to review prospectuses and registration documents with the intent of determining whether they contain an adequate level of information, but the principle responsibility and liability will rest with issuers, underwriters and their advisors. Advertisements are also subject to BAPEPAM regulations regarding truthful and misleading content.

The ministry said that if a prospectus contains false or misleading information or omits important and relevant facts, the issuing company, the underwriter and any professional or expert involved may be required to reimburse investors for losses caused by inadequate disclosure.

In addition, the decrees outlaw deceptive or fraudulent acts in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, including:

-- creating a false or misleading representation of price or trading activity; -- attempting through purchases, sales or misleading information to raise, lower or stabilize the price of securities with the intention of influencing the investment decisions of others; and -- trading by insiders on material information not made available to the public.

EDEN PRAIRIE, MN (DEC. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - CPT Corporation announced today that it has reorganized into a holding company with four separate operating companies. This is a continuation of previously announced restructuring and is part of the rebuilding plan initiated in June, 1990.

CPT President, CEO, and Chairman Arun Dube said the company is progressing with its plans for corporate reorganization in connection with its Chapter XI filing on Oct. 11 to protect the company from adverse claims. "With this organizational structure, each company is focused in both product development and sales. These separate corporations are seeking strategic alliances, joint ventures and/or direct investments to insure their success," he said.

The four organizations are as follows: -- CPT OFIS Dialog System, Inc., which will sell and market CPT products in the U.S. and additionally focus on new market opportunities in the rapidly growing area of high-performance network server and telecommunications, and exploit the market in imaging products.

-- CPT International, Inc., which shall distribute and market CPT products outside the U.S. and includes CPT's international subsidiaries.

-- CPT Direct, Inc., which sells CPT computers and related equipment through a direct sales operation.

-- SMR Office Services, Inc., which provides a variety of office management services to the medical community.

CPT Corporation, a public company, continues to hold all the stock in all of its subsidiary operations.

CPT also announced today the sale of an additional 100 computers and 100 printers to the U.S. Army for use in connection with Operation Desert Shield in Saudi Arabia. This order is worth over $300,000, and is the fourth order for CPT equipment to Saudi Arabia since Operation Desert Shield began.

The company expects to continue to be a supplier to Operation Desert Shield.

"As with the original order, CPT continues to be well served by our excellent local reputation in Saudi Arabia, our ability to deliver equipment quickly, and our competitive pricing. Throughout CPT's longstanding relationship with the Saudis, we've proven our ability to deliver quality computers along with superior service and support. Our Saudi Arabian distributor, AJECT, has done an outstanding job, competing with 80 companies for this particular bid," said Tom Flavin of CPT's International Sales department.

Flavin adds that CPT computers are listed on the government's GSA schedule of approved vendors, which made the transaction possible and guaranteed the Army highly competitive pricing on the CPT systems and workstations.

"We are delighted that CPT continues to assist in the military's efforts in Operation Desert Shield," said CPT President, CEO and Chairman Arun Dube. "Follow-on orders such as this one are excellent indicators of our ability to satisfy CPT customers both before and after the sale."

KISHINEV (DEC. 6) TASS - THE MOLDAVIAN PARLIAMENT TODAY LIFTED THE STATE OF EMERGENCY AND THE SPECIAL FORM OF ADMINISTRATION IN SEVERAL AREAS IN THE SOUTH OF THE REPUBLIC, WHERE THE GAGAUZ, CHRISTIAN TURKS, LIVE. THE EMERGENCY REGULATIONS WERE ENFORCED BY THE MOLDAVIAN PARLIAMENT ON OCTOBER 26, 1990 AFTER THE GAGAUZ PROCLAIMED THE SO-CALLED GAGAUZ SOVIET SOCIALIST REPUBLIC WITHIN THE RENEWED SOVIET UNION.

THE DOCUMENT, ADOPTED BY PARLIAMENT, DEMANDS THAT USSR INTERIOR MINISTRY TROOPS BE WITHDRAWN FROM THE AFOREMENTIONED AREAS WITHIN THREE DAYS AND RETURN TO PLACES OF THEIR PERMANENT DEPLOYMENT.

HAVING DECIDED TO DECLARE THE TWO-MONTH STATE OF EMERGENCY, THE MOLDAVIAN PARLIAMENT SET UP A PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE HEADED BY THE REPUBLICAN FIRST DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER ANDREI SANGELI. THE PARLIAMENT AUTHORISED THIS COMMITTEE TO NORMALISE THE SITUATION IN THE SOUTHERN AREAS OF THE REPUBLIC.

HOWEVER, THE COMMITTEE COULD NOT GET DOWN TO FULFILLING ITS FUNCTIONS BECAUSE ROADS WERE BLOCKED BY GAGAUZ VOLUNTEERS. TO AVOID CLASHES, THE REPUBLICAN PARLIAMENT APPROACHED THE SOVIET PARLIAMENT WITH THE REQUEST TO INTRODUCE SOVIET INTERIOR MINISTRY TROOPS IN SOUTHERN AREAS.

DETACHMENTS OF VOLUNTEERS, WHO ARRIVED IN KOMRAT AND CHADYR-LUNGA FROM TIRASPOL, RYBNITSY, BENDER AND KAMENKA TO GIVE BACKING TO THE GAGAUZ, HAMPERED THE NORMALISATION OF THE SITUATION IN SOUTHERN MOLDAVIA FOR A LONG TIME.

ON THE OTHER HAND, DETACHMENTS OF VOLUNTEERS FROM AREAS ON THE RIGHT BANK OF THE DNIESTER RIVER ASSEMBLED NEAR THE APPROACHES TO SOUTHERN AREAS. THEY WERE CONCERNED ABOUT THE TERRITORIAL DIVISION OF MOLDAVIA. SOVIET INTERIOR MINISTRY TROOPS ACTED AS A DETERRENCE FORCE BETWEEN THEM.

(DEC. 6) UPI - The Bush administration says Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's decision to release all foreign hostages indicates that ''diplomatic and military pressure'' against Iraq is working.

It's still NOT clear exactly when the remaining six-thousand Western and Japanese hostages will be allowed to leave. But Iraq's ambassador to the United States says the captives, including about 900 Americans, could be home by Christmas.

PANAMA CITY (DEC. 6) UPI - Panamanian President Guillermo Endara said a failed uprising by police officers was a triumph of democracy over militarism, but the incident left one dead and showed the vulnerability of his government.

Endara said one Panamanian was killed and one injured when hundreds of U.S. troops chased down and arrested policemen who had taken control of police headquarters early Wednesday morning.

''One more time, democracy triumphs,'' Endara said at a news conference after rebel leader Eduardo Herrera Hassan had been detained.

Endara had no details of the killing. One Panamanian television station said two people had been killed but the report could not be independently confirmed.

The Southern Command had no comment on deaths or injuries. Two Panamanian news photographers were also injured, according to Panamanian TV.

Herrera, a former police chief, was fired and jailed in October for allegedly plotting against the government. He escaped Tuesday in a daring helicopter rescue and took control of police headquarters with about 100 rebel police.

About 500 U.S. troops based in Panama responded to Endara's call for help and surrounded police headquarters, the U.S. Southern Command said.

It was the largest movement of U.S. troops outside their bases since the Dec. 20, 1989, invasion that ousted dictator Manuel Noriega.

Last week, U.S. officials announced the withdrawal of the last 150 U. S. troops who had been assisting Panamanian police throughout the country.

Endara, who was installed during the invasion, has been plagued by deep economic troubles as well as discontent within the police force.

Many Panamanians distrust the force because it was built from Noriega's army. Members of the force have been accused of plotting against the government on several occasions.

Herrera - a former aid to Noriega who later turned against the strongman - was named police chief just after the invasion, but was known to oppose government plans to convert the military into a police force carrying pistols and nightsticks instead of machineguns.

Herrera denied that he was leading a coup. He called on the government to adopt reforms that would improve the moral of the 12,000- member force and called himself a ''spokesman'' for discontented elements within the police.

Herrera, with the support of policemen armed with pistols and machineguns and wearing black face masks, held police headquarters until mid-morning.

''What we want is respect,'' Herrera said, while he still held the headquarters. ''I don't think that this could become a coup because police units want reconciliation.''

After talks with Panamanian and U.S. military officals, Herrera decided to lead a group of rebel police to the National Assembly to present their demands.

Surrounded by journalists, they passed two U.S. troop checkpoints. But the soldiers later chased after the rebel police, ordered them to lie on their bellies, disarmed and arrested them.

They were put on a U.S. military truck and turned over to Panamanian authorities.

Herrera is being held at Renacer Prison, 10 miles north of Panama City, and 36 policemen are also in custody, Vice President Ricardo Arias Calderon said.

A 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. curfew has been issued for the Curundu neiohborhood, where roving gangs threatened pedestrians and motorists Wednesday. Police also arrested several people for looting.

Endara said those policemen involved in the uprising would be fired and prosecuted. He said the vast majority of the police had remained loyal to his government.

Conditions were calm throughout most of Panama Wednesday night, according to radio reports.

(DEC. 6) UPI - C-I-A Director William Webster is echoing administration contentions that economic sanctions may NOT work against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. Webster told the House Armed Services Committee Wednesday that Iraqi forces can nearly maintain their current levels of readiness for as long as nine months.

President Bush travels to Chile on Thursday on the fourth leg of his five-nation South American tour. Bush told a news conference in Argentina Wednesday that he's ''more convinced'' than ever that Iraq must comply with U-N resolutions demanding a complete withdrawl from Kuwait. And he said he won't cut a deal with Iraq in upcoming talks.

A Northwest Airlines jetliner was diverted to Newark International Airport Wednesday night after it ran short on fuel... and the pilot said the Boeing 757 couldn't make it to New York. NO one was injured in the emergency landing that comes just two days after two Northwest jets collided on the runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, killing eight passengers.

Economists say there's little in recent government statistics to indicate economic recovery... despite rising factory orders and continued, but slowing, gains in productivity. The Commerce Department Wednesday reported a two-point-eight percent rise in factory orders in October... the largest boost since March.

In other economic news, the Federal Reserve Wednesday reported that business conditions display an overall ''weaker pattern'' with declines in consumer confidence, retail sales and business loan demands. The Fed survey found economic activity declining in many of the 12 Federal Reserve regions after being sluggish in recent months.

Near freezing weather swept across the South Wednesday as strong winds buffeted Southern California and snow dusted the northeast and upper Midwest. Freeze warnings were in effect for northern Florida and southwest Georgia where the mercury dipped into the lower 30's and upper 20's.

A K-Mart store manager in Stone Mountain, Georgia, says the chilly temperatures are really causing business to pick up... as many southerners rush to stores to buy warm jackets, long coats, electric blankets, gloves and caps. The wintry blast also sent the homeless into shelters.

(DEC. 6) UPI - As Larry Bird showed the run-and-gun Denver Nuggets, winning basketball games has nothing to do with youth or speed.

On Wednesday night, Denver tried to outrun the Celtics at Boston Garden. Instead, Bird, who turns 34 on Friday, scored 43 points, handed out 13 assists and grabbed eight rebounds as Boston rallied for a 148- 140 victory.

''It's really a lot of fun, especially when you win,'' said Bird, who felt it was his team's fault for letting the Nuggets set the game's pace. ''We stood around a lot tonight on the defensive end and didn't box out. We let them play the type of game they wanted.''

The veteran forward hit 14 of 26 from the floor, including three of six from 3-point territory. His 43 points were the most-ever by a Celtic player against Denver.

''Larry Bird was vintage tonight,'' said Nuggets Coach Paul Westhead.

''On nights like this, you're happy to get a win,'' said Boston Coach Chris Ford, whose team is now 14-3. ''If you're going to be a good team, you can't let other teams dictate the pace and take control. They had us playing their kind of ball and they almost beat us.''

Almost is right. For the second consecutive night, Denver frittered away a fourth-quarter lead. On Tuesday night in Cleveland, Denver held a 20-point lead in the fourth quarter then lost the game 121-117. Denver is winless in eight road games.

Robert Parish and Reggie Lewis added 25 points each for the Celtics, who have won 10 of their last 11. Kevin McHale had 19 and Brian Shaw 18 for Boston. Parish grabbed 14 rebounds.

Michael Adams scored 31 points and Orlando Woolridge had 29 points, including his 10,000th career point. Denver is 0-8 away from home this season and 3-14 overall. Adams, who was one for nine on 3-pointers, had 17 assists.

''The last couple of nights we have been playing well for three quarters,'' said Adams, who did not score in the final 10 minutes. ''We were right there for three and a half quarters, but when we wanted the shots at the end they weren't there.''

In other NBA games, Milwaukee out-lasted Cleveland 113-109 in overtime; Indiana downed Phoenix 126-121; Portland defeated Orlando 119- 110; Atlanta surprised San Antonio 110-108; Utah blasted Detroit 106-85; the Los Angeles Clippers out-played Dallas 93-89 and Washington triumphed over Golden State 104-98.

Bucks 113, Cavaliers 109 OT

At Milwaukee, Alvin Robertson scored 8 of his season-high 31 points in overtime and added 11 rebounds as the Bucks remained undefeated in nine home games. Jack Sikma contributed 18 points as Milwaukee improved its home mark to 9-0. For Cleveland, Darnell Valentine, playing in his second NBA game since May 1989, scored 24 points.

Pacers 126, Suns 121

At Indianapolis, Reggie Miller scored 27 points, Detlef Schrempf added a season-high 23 and each contributed 11 points in the fourth quarter to spark the Pacers. Kevin Johnson scored 39 to pace Phoenix, which led by 16 points late in the first half.

Trail Blazers 119, Magic 110

At Orlando, Fla., Clyde Drexler pumped in 27 points and Portland improved its league-leading record to 16-1. The Trail Blazers are undefeated in six road games. Kevin Duckworth added 18 points and Portland had six players with at least 14 points. For the Magic, now 4- 14, guard Scott Skiles scored a team-high 27.

Hawks 110, Spurs 108

At San Antonio, Glenn ''Doc'' Rivers scored 25 points, including a 20-foot jumper with three seconds left, as the Hawks won for the second time in two nights after a nine-game losing streak. The Spurs, who suffered their first loss in seven homes games this season, were paced by Terry Cummings' 30 points and Sean Elliot's 20.

Jazz 106, Pistons 85

At Salt Lake City, Jeff Malone scored 11 of his 27 points in the final period and Detroit lost its third straight game. For the Jazz, Karl Malone added 23 points and John Stockton had 18 assists. The NBA defending champion Pistons trailed 73-70 after three quarters then scored just 6 points in the first 10 minutes of the final period. Detroit was paced by Isiah Thomas's 21 points.

Clippers 93, Mavericks 89

At Los Angeles, Charles Smith scored 8 of his 24 points in the final three minutes to help the Los Angeles Clippers win their third in a row and eighth in their last 11. The Mavericks lost their third straight and have 8 losses in their last 10 games since knee injuries took Roy Tarpley and Fat Lever out of the lineup. For the Clippers, Benoit Benjamin registered 16 points and a game-high 17 rebounds. Alex English led Dallas with 18 points.

Bullets 104, Warriors 98

At Oakland, Bernard King scored 25 of his 31 points in the second half and the Bullets won for the second time in 10 road games this season. Washington's Harvey Grant added a career-high 27 points. (DEC. 6) UPI - Iraq has formally accepted a proposal by President Bush to hold top- level talks on the Persian Gulf crisis. The State Department says the move is an opportunity to end the standoff without armed conflict. Officials say discussions between the two countries are continuing on the dates and arrangements for the meetings, which will take place in Washington and Baghdad before January 15th.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Wednesday, Secretary of STate Baker refused to disclose what he will say to Saddam Hussein when he meets him face-to-face in the Iraqi capital. But Baker made it clear that negotiations won't be on his mind. Baker saus he'll insist that Iraq observe the U-N resolutions which demand the complete and unconditional withdrawl of Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

Authorities say NO one was hurt Wednesday night when a Northwest Airlines jet made an emergency landing at Newark International Airport because of an apparent fuel shortage. Officials say the pilot of the Northwest Boeing 757 did NOT believe the plane had enough fuel to make it to New York's LaGuardia Airport. The incident comes just two days after the fiery collision of two Northwest jetliners on a fog-shrouded runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport. Eight passengers died.

Panama's leader says a failed uprising by police officers was a triumph of democracy over militarism. But President Guillermo Endara says the incident left one dead and one injured and showed the vulnerability of his government. Endara says the casualties occurred when hundreds of U-S troops chased down and arrested policemen who had taken control of police headquarters Wednesday morning.

Thursday marks the one year anniversary of a massacre at an engineering school in Ottawa, Canada. A gunman who blamed women for his failures shot and killed 14 women. The tragedy at Ecole Polytechnique touched off months of bitter debate over the motives of 25-year-old Marc Lepine who killed himself after the rampage. The school will be closed Thursday, prefering to honor its dead with a morning mass at the huge Notre Dame Cathedral. Church bells in Montreal will begin ringing at 5:30 p-m, the hour the massacre began.

(DEC. 6) UPI - Iraq and three Arab allies have agreed that the Palestinian cause should be on the bargaining table in talks with the United States but denied reports it was willing to withdraw from Kuwait in exchange for a captured oil field.

Meanwhile, the first of some 3,300 Soviet nationals held in Iraq began leaving the country, and 43 more hostages from Australia and Japan were to be released Thursday, according to officials and news reports in those countries.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein met in Baghdad Wednesday with Jordan's King Hussein, Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat and the vice president of Yemen.

Jordan's Amman Radio reported all four Arab leaders concluded that Saddam should press to make the Palestinian-Israeli conflict a negotiating point in the high-level Iraqi-U.S. talks planned for later this month.

However, Secretary of State James Baker rejected the notion of a negotiated settlement to the Persian Gulf crisis altogether, and specifically reiterated U.S. opposition to linking the Palestinian issue with Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

President Bush, in Argentina during a six-day swing through Latin America, ruled out making any concessions aimed at allowing Saddam to make a gracious exit from Kuwait.

''When naked aggression takes place, it is not a question of saving face for the aggressor,'' Bush told reporters at a news conference.

Saddam has agreed to meet with Baker in Baghdad later this month and will send Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to Washington for talks with Bush in an effort to avoid a military confrontation after the U.N. dealine of Jan. 15 for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

Cable News Network, quoting a high Iraqi official who requested anonymity, reported Wednesday that Saddam was feeling the pressure of the forces arrayed against him and the Jan. 15 deadline, and that during his meeting with Baker,

''all issues are on the table - everything.''

However, Iraq rejected Wednesday as ''absolute nonsense'' a British independent television report saying Saddam was willing to withdraw from Kuwait in exchange for keeping the Rumaila oil field.

The Sky Television News satellite network, quoting an anonymous source, reported Tuesday that Saddam offered to witdraw his troops from Kuwait to avoid war provided he is allowed to keep the oil field, which straddles the Iraq-Kuwait border and was captured during the invasion.

Baker, appearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said his mission to Baghdad ''will be an attempt to explain to Saddam the choice he faces: Comply with the objectives of the (U.N.) Security Council or risk disaster for Iraq.''

He insisted the United States would settle for nothing less than fulfillment of U.N. resolutions calling for the unconditional withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait, the release of all hostages and restoration of Kuwait's legitimate government.

''Nor is this the beginning of negotiations on subjects which are unrelated to Iraq's brutal occupation of Kuwait,'' Baker said. ''I will not be negotiating the Palestinian question or the civil war in Lebanon. Saddam Hussein did not invade Kuwait to help the Palestinians; he did it for his own self-aggrandizement.''

Amman Radio also reported Wednesday King Hussein would try to meet Saudi King Fahd and the exiled emir of Kuwait in an effort to arrange a meeting between Saddam and Fahd in Algeria. Saudi officials said any such meeting would give Saddam even more time to consolidate his position in Kuwait.

In other developments, the Kyodo News Agency in Tokyo reported that 36 of the 141 Japanese nationals held in Iraq would be permitted to leave Thursday with family members visiting Baghdad.

In addition, seven Australian hostages were to fly to Amman Thursday, leaving 22 still held in Iraq, the Australian Foreign Ministry announced.

The first of an estimated 3,000 Soviet hostages held by Iraq began to return home Wednesday, the official Iraqi news agency INA said. Moscow, which was once among the largest weapons suppliers to Iraq, has said the release would not lessen its opposition to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait.

An undisclosed number of Soviet military advisers and consultants began leaving Iraq on flights to Amman, Jordan, after Saddam said he would allow them to go home even though they had not fulfilled their work contracts.

The Soviet Union supported the U.N. resolution authorizing the use of force to drive Iraq from Kuwait, but has not sent troops to join the U. S.-led multinational force in the region.

BOSTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Guards Jim Paxson and Charles Smith were waived Wednesday by the Boston Celtics.

Paxson, 33, has been on the team's suspended list for two months, since the Celtics decided the 6-foot-6 former All-Star would not be on their roster this year.

The 6-foot-1, 190-pound Smith was in his second NBA season, after signing with Boston as a free agent out of Georgetown University. He played in 60 games last season but has been on the injured list due to a shoulder problem since the start of the current season.

Paxson suffered a series of back and wrist injuries during his 2 1/2 seasons with the Celtics. His value to Boston declined with the return of 24-year-old guard Brian Shaw from Italy and the acquisition of first- round draft pick Dee Brown, a 22-year-old guard.

First-year coach Chris Ford intended to change the Celtics' style of play, emphasizing the speed and defense which the younger guards could provide, unlike the slower Paxson.

The Celtics announced on Oct. 6 that Paxson would not return for the 1990-91 season, but did not release him at the time. The team said it wanted to give him the chance to explore other professional opportunities. Paxson, an All-Star in 1983 and 1984, hoped to be picked up by another team, but it became apparent his playing days were over, despite playing in 72 games last season.

''Playing for the Boston Celtics was and is the ultimate dream of any basketball player,'' Paxson said. ''I not only played alongside players with unique talent, but made a lot of friends along the way. I am now looking forward to new career challenges.''

He did not say what career options he is considering.

The Celtics acquired Paxson from the Portland Trailblazers on Feb. 23, 1988, in a trade for Jerry Sichting.

Portland's first-round draft choice in 1979, Paxson is a former captain of the Trailblazers. He was a member of the All-NBA team in 1984.

Paxson played in 784 career games and averaged 14.3 points. He played in 53 playoff games, including 20 with the Celtics.

Now a resident of the San Diego area, Paxson is one of three family members who not only played in the NBA, but were chosen in the first round of the draft. His brother John is currently a member of the Chicago Bulls, and his father, Jim, played with the Minneapolis Lakers and the Cincinnati Royals.

(DEC. 6) UPI - One of the Washington Capitals' favorite songs probably is ''Why Don't We Do It in the Road?'' by the Beatles.

The Capitals aren't doing it in the road, but lately they have been doing it on the road.

In Pittsburgh, Michal Pivonka scored one goal and assisted on another Wednesday night to lead the Capitals to a 3-1 victory over the Penguins. The victory was Washington's third straight on the road and gave the Capitals a 6-2-0 record in their last eight games.

''Sometimes at home you try to do way too much,'' said Capitals Coach Terry Murray. ''You know you have to play solid on the road - all 20 guys. You play a little more smart and a little more cautious.''

Washington took a 1-0 lead at 4:36 of the first period on Pivonka's goal. He tuck the puck over the blue line and beat screened goaltender Wendell Young with a slap shot along the ice.

The Captials increased their lead to 2-0 on a power-play goal by Kevin Hatcher at 7:16 of the first period. Pivonka carried the puck down the right-wing boards and passed into the slot to Hatcher, who scored on a wrist shot.

''Everybody's playing a little bit simpler on the road,'' said Pivonka. ''It's always easier on the road. We're playing pretty well. Everybody's getting into a good habit.''

Pittsburgh cut the lead to 2-1 at 11:13 of the first period on Randy Gilhen's rebound of his own shot past goaltender Don Beaupre, who had 23 saves.

''We seem to play well on the road,'' said Beaupre. ''In this division (Patrick) you can move up in the standings quickly, especially when you win on the road.''

The Capitals raised their lead to 3-1 with a short-handed goal by Kelly Miller at 6:21 of the third period. Miller's shot from about 40 feet in the slot was headed wide of the net until it was tipped in by Penguin John Cullen.

The Penguins, who are 0-5-1 in their last six home games, were coming off a 9-4 road victory over the New York Rangers Monday night.

''Maybe we should go back on the road,'' said Johnson. ''We seem to have better concentration on the road.''

In other NHL games, New Jersey thumped Vancouver 9-4, Montreal nipped Hartford 4-3, Minnesota edged Toronto 3-2, Edmonton gassed Quebec 3-2, Calgary burned the NY Rangers 4-1 and the Winnipeg Jets tied Los Angeles 3-3.

Devils 9, Canucks 4

At East Rutherford, N.J., Claude Lemieux scored three goals and added an assist and Patrik Sundstrom had two goals and two assists to lead the New Jersey Devils to a 9-4 rout of the Vancouver Canucks. The win extended New Jersey's unbeaten streak to six games (3-0-3).

Canadiens 4, Whalers 3

At Hartford, Conn., Stephane Richer scored with 4:23 remaining and rookie goaltender Jean-Claude Bergeron stopped 22 shots, leading the Montreal Canadiens to a 4-3 victory over the Whalers. Richer snapped a 3-3 deadlock when he drove to the slot and converted Brian Skrudland's centering pass. The win increased Montreal's lead over third-place Hartford to five points.

North Stars 3, Maple Leafs 2

At Toronto, Mark Tinordi scored unassisted with 4:23 remaining in the third period to snap a tie game and lift the Minnesota North Stars to a 3-2 victory over the Maple Leafs. Toronto, mired in last place in the Norris Division, is seven points behind Minnesota.

Oilers 3, Nordiques 2

At Edmonton, Alberta, Esa Tikkanen scored the winning goal in the first period and goalie Kari Takko blocked 23 shots for the Oilers. Tikkanen drilled a low shot in the short side to give Edmonton a 3-0 lead. Quebec fought back to make the game close on Joe Sakic's 16th and 17th goals of the season.

Flames 4, Rangers 1

At Calgary, Alberta, Theoren Fleury scored his first NHL hat trick to lead the Flames. Bernie Nicholls scored the lone New York goal as the Rangers suffered their fourth loss in their last five games. Mike Vernon stopped 30 shots, including all 12 in the final period to win his 12th game of the season.

Jets 3, Kings 3

At Inglewood, Calif., rookie Danton Cole poked in a rebound of his own shot with 3:06 remaining in the third period to give the Jets a 3-3 tie with the Kings. Both teams remained winless in their last five games with identical 0-2-3 records.

Iraq yesterday formally accepted a U-S proposal to hold top- level talks as a chance to end the Persian Gulf crisis peacefully.

A Northwest Airlines jet made an emergency landing at Newark International Airport last night because of an apparent fuel shortage. World trade talks are teetering near collapse. A deep dispute on farm subsidies between the United States and the 12-nation European Community has brought General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, or GATT talks to an impasse. The chairman of the talks has given the E-C until noon today to come up with a new proposal on agriculture supports.

The E-C is offering to reduce farm subsidies by 30 percent. But the United States and other farm exporting countries want a 75 percent cut in agriculture supports. A grim-faced U-S Trade Representative Carla Hills said- ''We're very near the end of the road, I'm afraid.'' Hills blames the E-C for the stalemate.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - A nursery school workers found a loaded pistol in a 3-year-old boy's coat pocket and police said he was the youngest child they have encountered carrying a gun.

Police arrested Lloyd Flowers, 27, the superintendent of the apartment building where the child lives, saying the child apparently found the gun on the seat of the man's car as he drove the boy to school.

Isolyn Hong, a child-care worker at College Community Childcare Center, said he noticed what appeared to be the butt of a gun sticking of the boy's coat

Wednesday.

She found it was a .25-caliber automatic with a bullet in the chamber and five other rounds in a six-bullet clip.

Flowers was charged with endangering the welfare of a child and possession of a dangerous weapon.

''He apparently drove the kid to school and the kid said he picked the gun up off the front seat of the car,'' police officer Scott Bloch said.

Although there have been reports of children under 10 bringing guns to school, police said they knew of no case in which a 3-year-old was carrying a pistol.

ROMULUS, MI (DEC. 6) UPI - The pilot of a DC-9 that strayed onto the wrong runway in dense fog at Detroit Metropolitan Airport has told government investigators he was unaware of the fatal error.

Capt. William Lovelace said he never heard an exchange between the control tower and James Schifferns, his first officer on Northwest Flight 1482, in which Schifferns said the jet may have taken a wrong turn onto the runway.

Had he known, Lovelace told investigators, he would have ''gone for the weeds '' maneuvering his DC-9 off the runway.

Eight people were killed and 24 injured Monday afternoon when the DC- 9 bound for Pittsburgh was clipped by Northwest Flight 299, a Memphis- bound Boeing 727-200 that was already lifting into takeoff on Runway 3 Center.

The latest information about the disaster came during a news briefing Wednesday night by John Lauber, head of the National Transportation Safety Board team investigating the collision.

Lauber said the 70-member NTSB team spent Wednesday conducting closed-door interviews, reviewing records and studying the wrecked airliners.

A supervisor in the control tower, who was unable to see the runways because of the fog, yelled ''Stop all aircraft! Stop all aircraft!'' but it was too late to avoid the collision, Lauber said.

Lauber said it is not clear why Lovelace, 52, was not talking to the tower himself and why he did not hear Schifferns's exchange, and whether Schifferns had time to tell him to steer off the runway.

It also is not certain that Lovelace, making his first unsupervised flight since returning from a five-year medical leave, could have steered out of harm's way had he realized where Schifferns, 43, said the plane was.

Lauber said controllers did not order the 727-200 to abort its takeoff once they learned the DC-9 had strayed onto the active runway because they thought the larger jet already was in the air.

He also said investigators were getting ''conflicting reports on the lighting'' in use on the runways at the time of the collision.

Capt. Robert Oulelette, 42, pilot of the 727, said the center lights on Runway 3C were not on as Flight 299 took off, Lauber said. But the tower supervisor said her instruments showed lights on for all runways in use.

''We are looking into the whole issue of runway and taxiway signs and markings and lighting very extensively,'' Lauber said.

Lauber said alcohol tests on both crews were negative and that drug tests are pending.

In other developments:

-The first lawsuit as a result of the collision was filed Wednesday by Milio Rinna, a United Steelworkers District 29 health and safety official from Allen Park, Mich., who was one of the last to leave the burning DC-9. His attorney, William L. Martens, described Rinno as ''one of the heroes of this tragedy.'' Rinno, who was bound for a union meeting in Pittsburgh, suffered burns as well as injuries to his hands, head and knee.

-Officials at the Wayne County Morgue in Detroit identified the final two victims of the disaster as John David Burke, 30, of Houston, and Mauro Bottiglione, 23, of Pittsburgh. Burke was an electrical engineer for Panhandle Eastern Corp. on a business trip. Bottiglione, a native of Caracas, Venezuela, was a computer software designer for Transarc Corp. in Pittsburgh. The other six victims were identified Tuesday. They included three International Paper Co. executives returning to Memphis from a business trip and a veteran Northwest Airlines flight attendant.

Iraq says it wants to talk about the Persian Gulf crisis.

Joseph Wilson, U-S acting ambassador in Baghdad, was told that Iraq had accepted the proposal for meetings between President Bush and Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Washington and Secretary of States Baker and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in Baghdad.

Under the proposal, Aziz and Bush would meet sometime after December 15th, and Baker and Saddam would talk sometime before January 15th, the U-N-imposed deadline for Iraqi troops to withdraw from Kuwait.

The State Department said that discussions between the two countries are continuing on the dates and arrangements for the meetings, which will not involve representatives from any other nations.

In testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday, Baker refused to disclose what he will say to Saddam. But he made it clear that he will not negotiate or ''walk back from the U-N Security Council resolutions.''

Baker said he will insist that Iraq observe the U-N resolutions, which demand the complete and unconditional withdrawl of Iraqi troops, the release of all foreign hostages and the restoration of the exiled Kuwaiti government.

In Buenos Aires, President Bush said he was ''not optimistic'' about chances for a withdrawal of occupation forces from the oil kingdom.

C-I-A Director William Webster told the House Armed Services Committee yesterday that there is no guarantee that economic sanctions will force Saddam Hussein to get out of Kuwait or cause enough domestic unrest to topple his dictatorship.

Webster said without any conflict, Iraqi ground troops can nearly maintain their current levels of readiness for as long as nine months, and the air forces can keep up current levels of readiness for three to six months.

The crew of the space shuttle Columbia sailed toward the halfway point of an astronomy mission today, bothered by a troublesome telescope mount in their quest to probe the secrets of a violent universe.

The astronauts continue to lose time as they wrestle with a balky automatic telescope pointing device.

The seven-man crew has been manually operating the shuttle observatory while trying to fix the problem once and for all. But getting the pointing system to work has sharply cut down the number of celestial targets being observed.

Despite the problems, mission scientist Ted Gull says he's optimistic the glitches ultimately would be resolved. The goal of the long-delayed 10-day flight is to study a variety of violent stars, explosive galaxies, mysterious quasars and other high-energy targets in hopes of revolutionizing humanity's knowledge of the universe.

Otherwise, the busy flight has proceeded smoothly. Next Monday, Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze are expected to chat with commander Vance Brand from mission control in Houston. Brand first flew in space in 1975 as a member of the joint U-S-Soviet Apollo-Soyuz mission.

(DEC. 6) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev has signed a decree against pornography, erotic videos and smut to ''safeguard public morals.''

Gorbachev's anti-smut decree attacked the rise in erotica now increasingly available on late-night Soviet television and in publications NO longer subject to censorship.

The decree issued yesterday said- ''Taking into consideration the anxiety of the Soviet people about the spread of different kinds of pornography, pseudo-medical literature, erotic videos and the like ... urgent measures should be worked out to safeguard public morals.''

Two days ago, the Kremlin leader had expressed horror at the Supreme Soviet on what was now on television.

In what appears a headlong rush to catch up with the rest of the world after decades of official prudery, the Soviet Union is undergoing a belated sexual revolution.

Under the more permissive atmosphere of Gorbachev's perestroika, video parlors have mushroomed. Sex newspapers can be openly purchased near Moscow's Pushkin Square and girlie calendars are peddled at subway station entrances.

The decree set up a commission headed by the Culture Ministry to study the experience of other nations in battling the porno-business.

Panamanian President Guillermo Endara says a failed uprising by police officers was a triumph of democracy over militarism.

But Endara says the incident showed the vulnerability of his government.

He says one Panamanian was killed and one injured when hundreds of U- S troops chased down and arrested policemen who had taken control of police headquarters early yesterday morning.

One Panamanian television station said two people had been killed but the report could not be independently confirmed.

Endara told a news conference after rebel leader Eduardo Herrera Hassan was detained, ''One more time, democracy triumphs.''

Herrera, a former police chief, was fired and jailed in October for allegedly plotting against the government. He escaped Tuesday in a daring helicopter rescue and took control of police headquarters with about 100 rebel police.

The U-S Southern Command says about 500 U-S troops based in Panama responded to Endara's call for help and surrounded police headquarters.

It was the largest movement of U-S troops outside their bases since the December 20th, 1989, invasion that ousted dictator Manuel Noriega .

(DEC. 6) UPI - NATO defense ministers opened a two-day meeting in Brussels today. Defense Secretary Cheney is expected to ask for additional naval and airlift support for U-S forces in the Persian Gulf. The Persian Gulf crisis is NOT on the official agenda, but is expected to be the focus of attention.

World trade talks in Brussels were near collapse last night because of a deep farm subsidies dispute between the United States and the 12- nation European Community. The chairman of the talks told the E-C to come up with a new proposal on agriculture supports by noon today.

A survivor of the fiery crash between two Northwest Airlines planes on a foggy runway at Detroit Metropolitan Airport Monday filed the first lawsuit yesterday in the accident that killed eight passengers and injured dozens.

Authorities in Bolivia say rebels fatally shot kidnapped businessman Jorge Lonsdale, president of a Coca Cola bottling company, when police forces broke into the hidout. Police killed three of the kidnappers in a 40-minute shootout.

Officials in Alaska say that because of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Alaska may reap a one-BILLION dollar windfall in surplus revenues, and even more if war breaks out. 85 percent of all Alaska's revenues come from oil.

#90340u0595 12/06/1990 ~United Press International
(DEC. 6) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange rallied Thursday, spurred by Iraq's accepting a U.S. offer for high-level talks on the Persian Gulf crisis.

The key Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which gained 331.11 points Wednesday, added another 359.38 points to 22,553.10.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major shares, which addded 16.48 points Wednesday, climbed 28.67 points to 1, 667.80.

Advances outnumbered declines 730 to 236, while 128 issues remained unchanged.

An estimated 330 million share changed hands, compared with 367 million shares Wednesday.

Analysts said the market was upbeat after an announcement from the U. S. State Department that Iraq has formally accepted a proposal by President Bush to hold top-level talks as an opportunity to end the Persian Gulf crisis without armed conflict.

The news spread optimism over the market, lifting the Nikkei Average over 300 points in early trading.

After a temporary downturn, the indicator climbed again to reach the day's high of 22,609.13 shortly before the close of trading.

''The market was mostly supported by program buying,'' mainly arbitrage-related buying, said Shigeru Akiba, chief trader at UBS Phillips and Drew International.

Akiba added, ''the supply and demand situation is still rather bad.''

The liquidation of margin contracts also weighed on the market, but investors were already returning to the domestic demand-backed stocks.

''We are seeing some foreign pension fund and trust fund investors that have been away lately,'' a trader at Daiwa Securities Co. said.

Domestic demand-related stocks in the steel, shipbuilding and railway sectors were selected for buying.

Electricals such as TDK and Pioneer Electronic also gained along with nonferrous metals, constructions, nonlife insurances and paper-pulps.

Speculative stocks such as Honshu Paper and Kyosan Electric Manufacturing eased slightly.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks prices jumped for the second consecutive day in heavy trading on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange amid year-end buying and solid gains in New York and Tokyo.

The benchmark Hang Seng Index, which climbed 45.39 points Wednesday, surged 60.56, or 1.98 percent, to 3126.79.

Among the narrower indexes, financials gained 46.00 points, utilities added 92.89, properties jumped 89.23 and industrials rose 45.51 points.

Volume was the heaviest in recent weeks at an estimated 1.17 billion shares, up from Wednesday's strong turnover of 943 million.

Analysts said action was dominated by overseas buyers, who snapped up blue chips to bolster their portfolios as the end of the year approached.

''Many fund managers are too cash-tight right now and if the market keeps rising they will be in trouble if they don't increase their holdings,'' said Lino Delgado of ChinTung Investments.

In Singapore, stocks climbed across-the-board in active trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange amid optimism the Gulf crisis would be solved peacefully.

The closely watched Straits Times Industrial Index, which added 2.88 points Wednesday, jumped 28.74 points to 1,152.96.

The broader-based All Singapore Index, which added 0.90 points Wednesday, climbed 7.38 points to 319.92.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 62.9 million shares, compared with 45 million shares Wednesday.

The rallies on Wall Street and Tokyo also bolstered investor's confidence, analysts said.

On the trading floor, Singapore Airlines foreign shares paced the advancing issues followed by SPK Sentosa and Singapore Airlines domestic shares.

Great Eastern Life Insurance led the declining stocks followed by Perlis Plant and Berjuntai Tin.

Elsewhere around the region, in Bangkok, stock prices surged 4.3 percent in moderate trading on the Thailand Stock Exchange, reflecting perceptions of easing tensions in the Gulf and in domestic politics.

The Securities Exchange of Thailand Index, which slipped 1.97 points Tuesday, rose 25.17 points to 607.15.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 80 million Thai shares, compared with 62 million shares Tuesday.

Markets in Thailand were closed Wednesday for the king's birthday holiday.

Advances topped declines 159 to 16 with the best-performing sectors in finance commerce and construction issues.

''The market was busy with purchasers and sellers from the opening bell,'' said a broker from Phatra Thanakit Co., Ltd.

In Australia, stock prices closed slightly higher in nervous trading on the Sydney Sharemarket.

The All Ordinaries Index, which gained 5.0 points Wednesday, added another 1.3 point to 1,323.3.

Volume amounted to around an estimated 132 million shares, compared with 70 million shares Wednesday.

Analysts noted the volume was boosted by a 75-million share block of Westpac.

The biggest development was the arrest businessman of Alan Bond on charges of violating securities regulations. The entrepreneur allegedly concealed facts during his failed 1987 attempt to rescue the Rothwell's Merchant Bank.

Bond was released on $100,000 bail and is due to appear in Perth's Central Law Courts Friday.

The sale of Adsteam's 6.5 percent stake in Westpac dominated an otherwise lackluster day, analysts said.

The block changed hands at $3.80 a share, 12 cents below the price Adsteam had wanted for the parcel.

Westpac closed 14 cents lower at $3.87, while Adsteam fell 1 cent to 50 cents a share.

BEIJING (DEC. 6) UPI - China is seeking to deflect mounting overseas allegations that it has shrewdly capitalized on the Persian Gulf crisis to begin prosecuting key Tiananmen Spring activists for political crimes.

A government spokesman Thursday attacked as ''mudslinging and rumormongering'' overseas accusations that Chinese hard-liners have taken political strength from China's improving relations with the West to intensify an internal political crackdown.

China's support of international efforts to isolate Iraq has been rewarded by a symbolic restoration of most Sino-Western ties severed following Beijing's brutal 1989 crackdown on pro-democracy dissent.

''I have come across some reports charging that China is taking advantage of the relaxation of relations with Western countries to penalize the so-called dissidents,'' Foreign Ministry spokesman Li Zhaoxing said at a weekly news briefing.

''This does not square with the facts at all, and indeed is an act of rumormongering and mudslinging with ulterior motives,'' Li said.

''Their intent is to unleash a new anti-Chinese upsurge and undermine China's improving relations with other countries.''

Li, in a rare comment on China's internal political affairs, denounced apparently unfounded foreign press reports that one or more veteran democracy advocates had been sentenced to death for sedition.

''I have learned from the relevant Beijing authorities that the prosecutorial departments have not yet tried these people,'' Li said. ''Trials have not begun, to say nothing of the passing of sentences.''

Since mid-November and without public notice, China has been lodging charges of counterrevolution against a small group of jailed activists alleged to have been core agitators of the massive 1989 protests that were crushed by the Chinese army on June 4.

Two alleged strategists - Economics Weekly editor Wang Juntao, 32, and economist Chen Ziming, 38 - also face the graver charge of intent to overthrow the communist government, which in extreme cases is punishable by death.

China, politically isolated since the army-led massacre that crushed the nationwide pro-democracy movement, recently has earned high marks in the West for its support for U.S.-led moves in the United Nations to force Iraqi troops from Kuwait.

The European Community has lifted most of the economic sanctions it imposed after the crackdown and President Bush last month rewarded China's cooperation by meeting with its foreign minister, a clear breach of curbs on high-level exchanges.

But China's quiet prosecution of Tiananmen Spring activists has prompted broad concerns that it is capitalizing on its diplomatic victories to pursue a harsh crackdown on domestic dissent.

''Maybe China feels it went as far as it could with the outside world and now it's time to do some internal housekeeping,'' said a Western diplomat in Beijing. ''China seems to think the world and the U.S. are so focused on Iraq that it can push the limits on human rights now.

''They think people are quickly distracted, but I think they're very mistaken. Congress cares very much about human rights and the MFN issue is not dead,'' he added. China has been lobbying for an unconditional extension of its coveted most-favored-nation, or MFN, trading status with the United States, which is subject to annual renewal.

The U.S. Congress extended China's MFN benefits last year, but only after an emotional debate over China's human rights record. Lawmakers dissatisfied with China's behavior since the crackdown have vowed to renew the debate next year.

The Foreign Ministry spokesman dismissed suggestions that China's judicial system is affected by external politics, saying the dissidents' cases would be handled according to Chinese laws.

''Some reports have been linking these judicial matters with China's foreign policy,'' Li said. ''It is my duty to say that this is of course not the case.''

LONDON (DEC. 6) UPI - Stock prices were sharply higher at midday Thursday on the London International Stock Exchange, boosted by news Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has called for the release of all foreign hostages being held since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 6.3 points Wednesday, was ahead 28.7 points to 2,181.3. The narrower top 30 industrial average was up 32.0 points to 1,721.6.

Volume amounted to around 299 million shares compared with 348 million shares traded during the same period Wednesday.

Analysts said stocks surged on news Saddam had asked Iraq's National Assembly to release all foreign hostages held in Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

The surprise move, announced by the official Iraqi News Agency, came after Saddam had earlier promised to free all foreign hostages in batches between Christmas Day and March 25, provided he was not attacked in the meantime.

The Iraqi move came days before Iraq andGulf standoff.

The U.N. Security Council had authorized the possible use of military force against Iraq if it does not withdraw from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

Meanwhile, on the local economic front, Britain's Confederation of British Industry reported annual growth in retail sales volume came ''to a virtual standstill'' in November, while sales in the wholesaling and motor trades sectors continued lower compared to year-ago levels.

In its latest monthly survey, the CBI also noted that British retailers, wholesalers and motor traders ''expect their overall business situation to deteriorate over the next three months'' and retailers reported the ''first fall in confidence since last November.''

Analysts noted the CBI report helped to keep trading activity in check.

Among the most widely traded international stocks, Imperial Chemical Industries gained 29 cents to $17.16, Barclays Bank PLC gained 10 cents to $6.82 and British Petroleum fell 14 cents to $6.31.

Elsewhere in Europe, stock prices were sharply higher in active trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which gained 24.62 points Wednesday, was ahead 29.04 points to 1,500.00 shortly before the close.

Traders said the Iraqi news helped to boost prices higher across the board.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 6) UPI - Israel played down reports Thursday of a U.S. proposal on an international peace conference, and Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir confidently stated that Washington was well aware of his government's opposition to such talks.

Israeli sources said they were aware of a draft resolution at the United Nations involving the need to consider an international conference at some future date and without any link to the Persian Gulf crisis.

Before his departure Thursday to London and Washington for talks with British Prime Minister John Major, President Bush and other officials, Shamir said he was not aware of such a proposal involving an international peace conference.

''I know that the United States is not supportive of this idea of an international conference and the United States knows very well our position about this,'' Shamir said.

Shamir has long opposed an international conference and has called instead for direct negotiations between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

In May 1989, Shamir unveiled Israel's peace initiative, the centerpiece of which is elections in the occupied territories for Palestinians to select representatives to talk with Israel.

Disagreement over whether East Jerusalem Palestinians and non- residents of the territories would participate in an Israeli-Palestinian dialogue cut short the process.

''I will express my opinions and I have a few ideas of how to start and how to continue (the peace process),'' Shamir said. ''I hope that after our talks we will arrive at a common ground about our plans for the near future.''

Uzi Landau, a member of the Knesset, Israel's parliament, and of Shamir's right-wing Likud Party, said the reports of a U.S. proposal involving a peace conference should be viewed in the context of ''the many conflicting messages coming out of Washington'' during the past few months.

BEAUMONT, TX (DEC. 6) UPI - University of Wisconsin track star Suzy Favor, who won nine national NCAA championships, is the first recipient of the Babe Zaharias Female Athlete of the Year Award.

Favor, a Stevens Point, Wis., native, received the award Wednesday night in a ceremony at the Beaumont Civic Center attended by a sellout crowd of 750 people. The award pays tribute to Mildred ''Babe'' Didrikson Zaharias, an Olympic medalist in track and a pro golfer considered to be the greatest female athlete of all time.

The award will be presented annually to the nation's outstanding female amateur athlete and is sponsored by the Babe Zaharias Foundation, Inc. It is meant to be a companion to honors such as the Heisman Tropy and Sullivan awards for top male athletes.

Olympic gymnast Mary Lou Retton spoke at the ceremony and Favor agreed with her the award to honor female athletes was long overdue.

''I started hearing about Babe Zaharias from my coach when I was young,'' said

Favor. ''It's great to have people like her as an inspiration to young athletes like me.

''We need that, and we need things like this award, especially in women's athletics. Like Mary Lou said, 'It's time, it's due, it's overdue.'''

Runners-up for the award were swimmer Leigh Ann Fetter of Louisville, Ky., andthe University of Texas; track and field star Carlette Guidry of Houston andthe University of Texas; and track and field star Vicki Huber of Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Villanova University.

Favor set records in the 1990 national outdoor meet in the 1,500- meter and 800-meter races in addition to winning nine national NCAA titles in track.

''This is such a wonderful honor,'' she said. ''I am so happy to be able to share it with these three. It's not just one who is the champion. It's all four of us. This is such a wonderful way to end my college career.''

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (DEC. 6) UPI - Negotiators deciding the future of key U.S. military bases in the country were unable Thursday to break a deadlock on Philippine demands for criminal jurisdiction over the facilities, officials said.

On the second day of the talks, the two sides tackled the so-called Status of Forces issues, covering such things as criminal jurisdiction, customs, taxation and related matters, officials said.

Technical-level panels discussing the subjects since Nov. 29 reported Thursday on the impasse during the formal meeting between the two sides headed by Philippine Foreign Secretary Raul Manglapus and special U.S. negotiator Richard Armitage.

A scheduled briefing later Thursday was called off, but Health Secretary Alfredo Bengzon, deputy chief of the Philippine panel, told reporters after meeting with President Corazon Aquino ''some common ground'' had been reached on several issues.

Bengzon said he did not think an agreement would be wrapped up when the third round of talks closes on Friday. He said he expected the discussions would be continued in January.

The Philippines hosts six U.S. facilities, including the sprawling Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Complex, under a 1947 treaty that expires Sept. 16, 1991.

Clark and Subic are the oldest and largest U.S. facilities overseas and are manned by some 14,500 troops.

Washington, which provides the Philippines $481 million in aid annually for use of the facilities, wants to phase down the U.S. presence in 10 to 12 years and keep a limited force after that period.

The Philippines wants to take control of Clark and four smaller facilities by next year and favors a five- to seven-year extension of the Subic lease.

In asserting jurisdiction over crimes in the bases, Bengzon said the Philippines wants ''to make sure our laws apply fully'' and said jurisdiction amounted to a sovereignty issue.

''The United States recognizes and accepts that, but on the other hand, the United States also cites or draws from its experience in other agreements with other countries and tends to use these experiences as reference points or standards,'' Bengzon said.

Criminal jurisdiction has been a sensitive issue between the two countries that has not been completely resolved. Nationalists point out Americans accused of crimes usually were shipped out of the country before they could be tried.

BOLOGNA, ITALY (DEC. 6) UPI - A small Italian air force training plane abandoned by its pilot crashed in flames into a school on the outskirts of Bologna Thursday, killing 12 people and injuring at least 62 others, police said.

The single-seat plane, on a training flight from an air base near Verona, struck the rear of a two-story building of the Gaetano Salvemini Technical Institute while 200 students between the ages of 14 and 18 were in classes.

''I was in class when I saw from the window that this plane coming straight for us near the ground,'' one of the uninjured pupils told reporters. ''I just had time to shout, 'What is that man doing? He must be mad.'''

The Italian-made Macchi MB 326 aircraft smashed through the school wall into an empty room, and then through another wall into a room where students were attending class. Rescuers found a young girl, almost unhurt, under one of the smashed aircraft's wings.

Bologna magistrate Mario Forte said 12 people were killed in the accident.

Air force officials said the pilot, who was flying over Bologna at 10:31 a.m., radioed that the planes engine was on fire and its controls were not working. The pilot ejected from the plane after apparently attempting to steer it toward open country outside Bologna, the officials said.

Witnesses on the ground told police the plane's fuselage was engulfed in flames.

The aircraft crashed into the school and set the building on fire, witnesses said. Firemen quickly extinguished the flames but most of the 62 injured suffered burns or smoke inhalation, police said.

The injured were rushed by helicopter and ambulance to two hospitals in Bologna.

About 100 of the students were trapped with their teachers in the upper rooms of the building but were rescued. Several students were injured when they panicked and jumped to the ground from windows, witnesses and officials said.

Pilot Bruno Viviani, 24, suffered three fractured vertebrae, but doctors said his condition was not serious. He was taken to the same Maggiore hospital where some of the most seriously injured from the school were being treated.

(DEC. 6) UPI - NATO defense ministers gathered today in Brussels and will hear an appeal from Defense Secretary Cheney for additional sealift and airlift support for U-S troops in the Gulf. Cheney also planned to request what a senior American official at NATO called ''other useful things,'' ranging from ''chemical-warfare protection suits to transformers.''

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein has agreed to meet with Secretary of State Baker in Baghdad later this month and Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz will go to Washington for talks with President Bush. The meetings are part of a proposal by Bush to avoid a military confrontation after the U-N deadline of January 15th for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait.

The Japanese Kyodo News Agency in Tokyo reports that 36 of the 141 Japanese nationals held in Iraq will be permitted to leave today with family members visiting Baghdad. In addition, the Australian Foreign Ministry announced that seven Australian hostages were to fly to Amman today, leaving 22 still held in Iraq. The first of an estimated three- thousand Soviet hostages held by Iraq began to return home yesterday.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir left today on a nine-day visit to Britain and the United States. Before leaving, Shamir said he had a ''few ideas'' on how to resurrect the Middle East peace process, but repeated his opposition to an international conference. Shamir will meet British Prime Minister John Major and President Bush during his trip.

Trade ministers from 107 nations meeting in Brussels are trying to avert collapse of world trade talks threatened by a bitter dispute over farm subsidies between the United States and the European Community. Many officials predicted that the talks could either disband in failure, or adjourn until January in hopes of a calmer atmosphere. A four-year round of talks under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade was slated to end on Friday.

Talks on the future of key U-S facilities in the Philippines continued today in Manila. Negotiators attempted to break a deadlock on Philippine demands to assume criminal jurisdiction over Americans at the facilities. A Philippine official says he does NOT think an agreement will be wrapped up when the third round of talks closes tomorrow. He said he expects the discussions would be continued in January.

(DEC. 6) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's proposal to free his hostages elated yellow-ribbon families around the United States Thursday but they maintained a degree of cautious skepticism.

''I hope it means that this is a solid indication that this thing can be worked out,'' said Ingrid Pawlowski, who had to leave her husband, Paul, hiding in Kuwait when she and their 7-year-old daughter fled the country in September. ''I'm afraid to get too excited until it's really the real thing. I'm delighted if it's true but I've learned that it isn't over until it's over.''

Saddam, facing growing international pressure and talk of war from the White House, made his surprise announcement as representatives of Coming Home, a Champaign, Ill.-based group, were on a mission to Baghdad to get relatives freed.

''I can't tell you how elated they are not only that their loved ones are coming out but that everyone's coming out,'' Michael Saba, a Coming Home organizer, said from home in Champaign. ''It's just rejoice, rejoice.''

Saddam had foreigners rounded up in Kuwait and Iraq after he invaded Kuwait Aug. 2 and had been using them as human shields at strategic installations. The standoff prompted Americans to tie yellow ribbons around around trees, a reminder of the hostages that originated during the Iranian hostage crisis of 1980-1981.

Prior to Saddam's announcement, hostages had been released in piecemeal fashion to relatives who flew to Baghdad.

John Stevenson was released just after Thanksgiving after his twin sister, Mary Trundy of Brockton, Mass., went to Iraq on his behalf.

''It's wonderful news this morning, really,'' he said of Saddam's proposal. ''It's the best news we could have hoped for today.''

Stevenson said that before his release, ''I kept running into Iraqi officials at the strategic sites where I was ... and they used to tell me, 'We don't want you here. It's just a matter of time. You're going to be home very very soon.' I was never so confident as I am this morning, of course, with this news.''

Majorie Walterscheid of Jacksboro, Texas, said she received a telephone call Thursday from her hostage husband, Rainard, an oil worker held in Iraq.

''They had heard it on the news (on television),'' she said. ''They have not been told personally but they are hoping to come home soon. I just hope nothing changes before he gets out of there. He says he is really tired and wants to come home and go back to work. I was hoping we would take some time off.''

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker characterized Saddam Hussein's announcement Thursday that he will free all foreign hostages being held in Iraq a ''welcome and significant development,'' but he cautioned he wants to ''see it actually happen.''

Baker, in his second appearance on Capitol Hill to lay out the Bush administration's Persian Gulf policy, read an opening statement to the House Foreign Affairs Committee that was nearly identical to one he read before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday.

When he concluded, Baker responded to news out of Baghdad that Saddam called on Iraq's Parliament to allow all foreign nationals the right to leave Iraq if they wished.

''First of all, I think that we should acknowledge that this is a welcome and significant development,'' Baker said. ''But we do want to see it actually happen. As far as Americans are concerned, we are prepared to implement it immediately.

''Secondly, let me say that it does not lessen nor should it lessen our determination that Iraq's aggression against Kuwait must be reversed by full implementation of all of the Security Council resolutions,'' Baker added. ''And, third ... I think that this is a sign that the strategy of diplomatic and military pressure is working. It seems to me no coincidence that this announcement comes just one week ... after the international community has authorized the use of force.''

On Wednesday, Baker said, ''We have to face the fact that, four months into this conflict, none of our efforts have yet produced any sign of change in Saddam Hussein.

''He shows no signs of complying with any of the United Nations Security Council resolutions,'' said Baker of the 12 resolutions that demand Iraq withdraw its troops, release foreign hostages and restore the exiled Kuwaiti government. The final resolution, passed last week, authorizes the use of force if Iraqi troops are not out of Kuwait by Jan. 15.

''No one wants war,'' said Baker, but argued that relying on sanctions alone merely encourages Saddam to try to break the international coalition aligned against him.

The debate in the Senate committee broke on party lines, with Democrats demanding the administration give sanctions more time and Republicans saying that the public is squarely behind Bush.

''Eventually, the Congress will catch up with the American people,'' said Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind. Lugar cited opinion polls showing 63 percent of those Americans surveyed favor a military solution if Iraq does not withdraw.

Sen. Joseph Biden told Baker that the administration ''appears to be shifting to a new policy based on the premise that sanctions will not work and that an early resort to offensive action may be necessary.''

Baker did not dispute that assessment, but in an earlier statement to the committee said:

''As we wait, Saddam will continue torturing Kuwait and continue killing it as a nation. As we wait he will continue manipulating hostages attempting to break the coalition. As we wait he will continue to fortify Kuwait, he will continue to build chemical and biological weapons and will continue his efforts to acquire a nuclear weapons capability.''

Following Baker's testimony, the State Department announced that Iraq had formally accepted Bush's proposal for direct talks.

Under the proposal, Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz will meet with Bush in Washington after Dec. 15 and Baker will meet with Saddam in Baghdad sometime after that, but before Jan. 15.

Baker promised that he would not negotiate, particularly on the subject of Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip, an issue Iraq has hinted as a key to any negotiated settlement.

''This is not the beginning of a negotiation on subjects unrelated to Iraq's brutal occupation of Kuwait,'' said Baker. ''I will not be neogtiating the Palestinian question or the civil war in Lebanon.''

SANTIAGO (DEC. 6) UPI - President Bush lauded Thursday Chile's recent return to democracy, yet at the same time he praised the economic policies of the man who until recently ruled the country with an iron fist.

Bush, on the fourth stop of his five-nation South American tour, praising Chile's return to democracy on March 11, said in remarks at Santiago airport that a ''democratic renaissance is under way in Latin America.

In the same breath he praised the economic policies of ex-President Augusto Pinochet, who continues to hold the post of army commander, saying, ''Nowhere has the power of free markets gone further and faster than in Chile.''

Pinochet, as army chief, shook hands with Bush and exchanged brief words and smiles in the formal arrival greeting by him and other military commanders and members of the cabinet assembled at Santiago's international airport.

Chile's incumbent President Patricio Aylwin delivered the welcoming remarks, saying that Chile was ''unwavering in its love of liberty and has undertaken beautiful battles to achieve it.''

Aylwin, 72, a Christian Democrat, has not basically changed the free- market economic policies of Pinochet, who ruled as virtual dictator from 1973 to March 11 of this year, when he stepped down to allow an elected civilian successor.

Chile's powerful Communist Party has repudiated Bush's visit, but it has not ordered its rank and file to take steps to disrupt it, according to political sources.

Radical Marxist splinter groups mobilized hundreds of demonstrators in different sectors of Santiago Wednesday, burning the American flag and throwing stones at police before they were dispersed by water cannon, tear gas and clubs.

Police said a score of the demonstrators were arrested.

A half hour before Bush's arrival a bomb exploded in a McDonalds restaurant in the elegant Las Conde neighborhood, blowing out the windows but causing no injuries, police said.

Police reported five other bombings during the night in addition to a noise bomb that exploded late Wednesday in a park near the American consulate.

A device that looked like a rocket was examined by police Wednesday near the consulate, but it turned out to be a fake.

Thousands of spectators lined the motorcade route behind roped off streets from the airport to Aylwin's modest, two-story home, where the two leaders met in a working luncheon.

Some onlookers heckled Bush, while others displayed obscene hand gestures.

Bush, outwardly unperturbed, walked across the street from the president's residence to greet well-wishers.

Security was tight as always. But this time security agents also took the extra precaution of advising members of the Bush entourage to be on guard because of recent terrorist attacks.

Before Bush's arrival, the U.S. government in recent days announced that it had given administrative, though not final, approval to the lifting of trade sanctions against Chile and the lifting of restrictions on arms sales, which were cut off in 1976 when the former Chile defense minister, Orlando Letelier, was assassinated in Washington.

A Washington court is demanding the extradition of two senior ex- secret police officials who served under Pinochet and are prime suspects in the Letelier case, but up to now the Chilean government and court system have denied handing the two men over.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (DEC. 6) UPI - Thousands of blacks marched through the streets of the Pretoria, Johannesburg and two other cities Thursday, heeding a call by the African National Congress to keep the racial reform pressure on the white minority government.

In Pretoria, Winnie Mandela, the wife of ANC leader Nelson Mandela, and South African Communist Party Secretary General Joe Slovo led some 5,000 marchers to the government complex and delivered a petition to the office of President Frederik de Klerk.

Among the demands sought by the ANC are the release of all political prisoners and the suspension of all political trials before Christmas, the formation of an interim government and the election of a constituent assembly to draft a post-apartheid era constitution.

Awash in the green, black and gold colors of the ANC, about 15,000 marchers streamed through downtown Johannesburg, dancing, chanting and singing to the gates of the police headquarters of John Vorster Square, where they also presented a list of grievances.

Veteran ANC and SACP member Mac Maharaj, who led the Johannesburg march, accused the De Klerk government of stalling on its reform pledges, including the promise announced in August to release all political prisoners.

''We have now come to the gates of a place notorious for the murder of some of the best sons and daughters of our country,'' ANC General Secretary Alfred Nzo told the crowd as white and black police peered down at the crowd from the buildings open windows and walkways.

''As we march this our last mile, our people must capture the reins of power as soon as possible because then there will be peace and tranquility,'' he said.

Two other ''Peace and Freedom Now'' marches were held Thursday in the eastern city of Port Elizabeth and the central city of Bloemfontein, the country's judicial capital.

With the exception of the apprehension by police in Pretoria of a white right-winger displaying anti-black posters, the day was peaceful, despite government worries over Mandela's plans to use ''mass action'' to keep up the pressure for racial reform.

De Klerk has regarded Mandela's plans for public marches and demonstrations, including consumer boycotts, as a violation of the spirit of an Aug. 6 agreement between the ANC and his government in which the ANC suspended its 29-year guerrilla war against white rule.

Mandela has dismissed government warnings, insisting mass actions will continue until the government meets its promises to abolish apartheid.

De Klerk's chief racial reform negotiator, Constitutional Development Minister Gerrit Viljoen, warned Wednesday that the government would ''act firmly against anyone guilty of intimidation and violence.''

''The government cannot tolerate the deliberate sabotaging of peaceful negotiations,'' Viljoen said. ''Indefinite continuation of mass protests intending to highlight political demands really are no longer necessary.''

During his tenure at Binney & Smith, maker of Crayola products in Easton, Pa., Emerson Moser produced seas of salmon, pecks of plum and enough maize to color the entire state of Nebraska.

Touted by his company as ''the best in the world'' at his trade and held by his co-workers to be the master of his craft, Moser's slight color blindness was discovered by a company doctor during a physical before he began working for Binney & Smith in 1953.

''It really isn't that bad and doesn't affect my work,'' Moser, 62, of Bethlehem, Pa., said Thursday.

Moser's job is to pour the hot colored wax into molds and then extract the finished crayons.

When he isn't sure of a color mix, Moser, whose wife, son and father- in-law all worked for Crayola, asks co-workers for help.

In all his years Moser said he has ''never made a crayon I was ashamed to put my name on. That's what I've enjoyed most about working here. I make the best crayons in the world.''

Moser began his colorful career on Oct. 12, 1953, working for $1.30 an hour in the same plant where the first box of Crayola crayons was produced in 1903. After being trained in a number of jobs, Moser made his first crayon on May 5, 1955.

During his tenure, Moser has seen colors come and go, most recently when the company decided to discontinue eight classic shades. But despite all the exotic shades that have come out recently, Moser's favorite colors to make are the eight originals: red, blue, yellow, green, orange, violet, black and brown.

''They run the smoothest on the molding machine,'' Moser said. ''I never have any trouble with them. Some of the others like red orange and yellow orange are tougher.''

Despite his penchant for tradition, Moser is sympathetic to the company's need to modernize.

''You need to change with the times,'' said Moser. ''Kids today like brighter colors and that's why we came out with the new colors this summer and the new fluorescent colors this winter. Personally, I like the older colors best.''

After making a billion crayons in his time, Moser said he won't miss job because it's a lot of hard work. But he will miss his co-workers.

''I'll miss the people I work with and the kids who come through on tours. Their eyes get so big when they see me making the crayons.''

Moser plans to retire on Dec. 13. To commemorate the occasion, and in recognition of his years of service, Moser's photograph will be added to the Crayola Hall of Fame in Easton.

DHAKA, BANGLADESH (DEC. 6) UPI - Embattled President Hussain Muhammad Ershad resigned Thursday and handed over power to an opposition-led caretaker government, saying he hoped to quell the violent demonstrations against his rule and return peace to Bangladesh.

Ershad administered the oath of office and secrecy to Chief Justice Shahabuddin Ahmed, the opposition vice presidential nominee. Ershad handed his resignation letter to Anwar and shook hands with the new vice president.

''I congratulate you. I hope peace will return to Bangladesh,'' Ershad said, holding the hands of Shahabuddin. He then left the presidential palace along with Moudud Ahmed, the former vice president and his supporter.

The ceremony also was attended by Cabinet Secretary M.K. Anwar and the chiefs of the Bangladesh army, navy and air force.

Hours before the swearing-in ceremony, Ershad dissolved the 300-seat Parliament and lifted the state nationwide of emergency in Bangladesh.

Under the terms Ershad announced Tuesday night over nationwide television, Shahabuddin would face a vote in Parliament Saturday. Shahabuddin, 60, highly regarded for his integrity, would become the 11th president of Bangladesh immediately after the Parliament's approval of him as vice president.

Shortly after he was sworn in, Shahabuddin declared he would try to hold a free and fair election in the shortest possible time, hand over power to the elected parliament and return to his job of chief justice.

''I have no political ambition to pursue. I pray I am not inspired by general tendency of staying in power in such circumstances,'' the acting president said amid thunderous applause by about 400 opposition leaders and workers.

Ershad, who seized power in a coup in 1982 and won a five-year term in 1986 elections widely boycotted by the opposition, yielded to the caretaker government following violent demonstrations against his rule.

He imposed the state of emergency on Nov. 27, suspending fundamental rights, banning political activities and imposing press censorship in an attempt to smother the opposition movement against his government.

But the move unleashed nationwide protests, with teachers, lawyers and bureaucrats joining opposition parties in demanding Ershad's resignation.

The opposition has organized anti-government rallies and strikes since October and in the past two weeks about 70 people have been killed, 1,500 injured and nearly 3,000 arrested.

Moudud Ahmed, who was appointed vice president in July 1989, vowed earlier Thursday to fight in Bangladesh's parliamentary elections to ''prove who has popular support'' in the country. He did not say whether Ershad, who reportedly has sought asylum from at least two foreign embassies, planned to participate.

Moudud Ahmed, who was prime minister before Ershad appointed him vice president, said if opposition leaders were serious about holding fair elections, they ''should control their people from hooliganism and vandalism.

Amir Hossain Amu, joint general secretary of the Awami League, a member of the anti-Ershad opposition alliance, urged the deposed president to leave the country.

Enayatullah Khan, a newspaper editor who served as ambassador to China and Burma under Ershad, suggested the president might face prosecution if he remained in Bangladesh.

''It is better that he leave the country,'' said Khan, whose weekly English-language newspaper reflects the thinking of leftist parties that joined the movement to topple Ershad.

''The political parties should allow him safe passage.''

The opposition has accused Ershad and his wife of corruption.

The military has not intervened, Khan said, because its commanders knew ''if they came in, they would not be able to hold. The army knows very well they have earned a good name with the people by not intervening. They also know that by not intervening, their privileges will not be taken away.''

Moudud Ahmed said he also believed the army was unlikely to intervene immediately.

''We could have stayed in power,'' said the former vice president. ''Ultimately, we could have handed over power to the army. We did not want to do that. It would have led to more violence. We thought it would be better if we maintained the constitutional process.''

The leaders of four opposition parties nominated the chief justice. Under the constitution, parliamentary elections are to be held within 90 days after the dissolution of the legislature. The presidential elections were scheduled in June.

The opposition has demanded that both elections be held at the same time.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - President Bush Thursday granted an appeal by Arizona for federal disaster aid to assist in recovery from severe storms and flooding and announced Indiana is eligible for similar assistance.

The storms in Arizona struck most of the state during the period of July 8 through Sept. 4. The president's action reverses an earlier decision to deny assistance to that Western state.

Arizona will now receive assistance to pay 75 percent of the costs for the repair and replacement of damaged public facilities in the countries of Coconino, Gila, Graham, Maricopa, Mohave, Pima, Pinal and Yavapai.

In declaring that a major disaster exists in Indiana, the president granted federal assistance to that state for severe storms and flooding beginning last Nov. 27.

The action makes federal funding available to affected individuals in Lake County. The aid can include temporary housing, grants, low-cost loans to cover uninsured property losses, and other programs to help individuals and business owners recover from the effects of the disaster.

ATLANTA (DEC. 6) UPI - Federal health officials, reporting a ''very disturbing'' jump in the homicide rate among young black males, Thursday called for action to curb violence among minorities.

Homicides accounted for 42 percent of the deaths of U.S. black males ages 15 to 24 in 1987, the national Centers for Disease Control said.

The homicide rate in 1987 was 84.7 per 100,000 young black males - the highest rate of the decade and 40 percent percent higher than the rate of 60.6 in 1984 the CDC said.

''Though already recognized as a significant problem, the problem has significantly worsened over the past few years,'' said Dr. Robert Froehlke, a pediatrician and epidemiologist with the CDC. ''We had expected some increase, but the magnitude of the increase was very disturbing.''

In addition, preliminary data for 1988, the latest year for which figures are available, shows a 19 percent increase in the homicide rate for young black males over 1987, indicating the problems has continued to worsen, the CDC said.

''It's a bad problem, and it's getting worse,'' Froehlke said. ''In some areas of the country, it is now more likely for a black male between 15 and 25 to die from homicide than it was for a U.S. soldier to die in Vietnam on his tour of duty.''

While more research is needed, many of the homicides occur during domestic violence, child abuse, rape and disputes among acquaintances, the CDC said.

''Factors identified as potentially important contributors to homicide include immediate access to firearms, alcohol and substance abuse, drug trafficking, poverty, racial discrimination and cultural acceptances of violent behavior,'' the agency said.

The increase was 55 percent for black males ages 15 to 19 and 33 percent for those ages 20 to 24, the CDC said.

Firearm-related deaths accounted for 96 percent of the overall increase in the homicide rate for young black males and 80 percent of all the deaths, the CDC said.

While the homicide rate for young black males has soared, the rate among white males and females and black females has stayed disproportionately low, the CDC said.

Of every 100,000 young black males, 84.7 die as the result of a homicide, compared with 17.7 for black females, 11 for white males and 3.9 for white females, the CDC said.

''It's important to remember homicide has always been a problem in this group, even before the purported epidemic of drugs,'' Froehlke said. ''How the increase is affected by that (drugs) is an important question that has to be addressed.''

Citing a need for urgent public health attention, the CDC scheduled a conference on violence among minority youth next week.

''The conference will attempt to identify programs that have proven effective but need support to be implemented, and programs that seem promising,'' Froehlke said. ''Given the magnitude of the problem and its recent increase, it's of great importance that a conference like this goes on.''

LONDON (DEC. 6) UPI - Grand Metropolitan, the international foods group, said Thursday its annual pre-tax profits had climbed by 25.6 percent, to $1.77 billion from $1.42 billion in the previous fiscal year.

The group, owners of Pillsbury and the Burger King fast-food chain in the United States, said earnings per share increased to $1.23, a jump of 15.3 percent from $1.07 a share.

Grand Met's trading profits, or net earnings, reached $2.08 billion, up 11.9 percent from 1989's net earnings of $1.83 billion.

''The group has had another successful year, all sectors have overcome adverse economic conditions to report good growth ... It is particularly noteworthy that the Pillsbury acquisition, including Burger King, was earnings positive in its first full year in the group,'' Grand Met Chairman Allen Shephard said.

''However 1991 is potentially a difficult year with the translation impact of a weak dollar on our considerable U.S. earnings,'' he added.

OTTAWA (DEC. 6) UPI - Canada's highest court Thursday upheld compulsory retirement for professors and doctors and said only the federal government is bound by the Charter of Rights and Freedoms that protects individuals against discrimination.

The Supreme Court of Canada, which deliberated for 20 months before reaching a decision on four mandatory retirement cases, said even if universities were subject to the Charter, compulsory retirement would constitute a reasonable limit to the right of equality.

''Mandatory retirement ... ensures a continuing and necessary infusion of new people,'' the court said. It said bringing in new teachers is ''vital'' to academic freedom.

''It ensures infusion of new people and new ideas, a better mix of young and old and is a desirable feature of a teaching staff,'' the court said.

One of the four cases involved eight professors and a librarian who faced mandatory retiremen from Ontario universities. Bernard Blishen, a former York University sociology professor who retired four years ago, told the court: ''I reject being retired. I'm at the height of my intellectual skills so why should I retire?''

Another case involved 14 doctors required by the Vancouver General Hospital to retire at 65. The court upheld the hospital's policy on grounds its need to bring new doctors on staff ''depended on the timely retirement of some of those already there.''

Former Chief Justice Brian Dickson, who was involved in drafting the decisions described mandatory retirement as one of the most important issues of the decade that would affect millions of people, pension funds and personal lives.

More than 5 million workers in Canada are covered by mandatory retirement policies, but the provinces of Alberta, Manitoba and Quebec have abolished mandatory retirement.

The decision is disappointing for thousands of the 2.7 million Canadians aged 65 and over, said Lillian Mogenthau, head of the Toronto- based Canadian Association of Retired Persons.

''The decision will make people over 65 feel their self-worth is not as great '' said Mogenthau. She said most retired people want to work.

NAIROBI, Kenya (DEC. 6) UPI - The U.S. Embassy and other Western missions in Somalia's capital laid plans for the evacuation of non-essential personnel Thursday as the threat of government collapse and a rebel incursion into the city mounted.

The U.S. Embassy, in a statement received in Nairobi, said ''the ambassador met with the American community in Mogadishu yesterday to discuss possible contingency plans for an orderly departure.''

It said no formal advisory had been issued. Other Western diplomats in the city, however, said the advice effectively stood and that they understood the embassy had asked the State Department to issue the advisory.

Other embassies, including the British, were expected to follow suit.

The move follows the Somali government's imposition of a state of emergency last week aimed at halting the advance of northern rebels on the capital.

The rebels of the Somali National Movement were reported last week to be less than 30 miles from Mogadishu, prompting president Siad Barre to order his troops to shoot suspected rebels in and around the capital on sight.

The SNM, formed in 1981 with the aim of deposing Barre, has claimed a series of military victories in the past three months. Meanwhile, the government and economy have been plunged into increasing chaos, with virtually no money entering the country, the withdrawal of most Western aid and the collapse of the currency.

Barre has twice changed his entire Cabinet and fired his son as military commander. A pledge to hold democratic elections next year has been widely dismissed as a stalling maneuver.

Barre has fought a bloody war against his northern population for the past decade, drawing international condemnation for mass exterminations and blanket bombing of civilian targets.

LONDON (DEC. 6) UPI - Stocks prices closed sharply higher Thursday on the London International Stock Exchange sparked by the surprise offer by Saddam Hussein to free all Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait.

Stocks also ended sharply higher in Frankfurt.

London's blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which added 6.3 points Wednesday, climbed 24.9 points to 2,177.5. The narrower top 30 industrial average gained 28.3 points to 1,717.9.

Volume amounted to around a vigorous 560 million shares compared with 520 million shares changing hands Wednesday.

Analysts said stocks surged on news Saddam had asked Iraq's National Assembly to release all foreign hostages held in Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

The surprise move, announced by the official Iraqi News Agency, came after Saddam had earlier promised to free all foreign hostages in batches between Christmas Day and March 25, provided he was not attacked in the meantime.

The Iraqi move came days before Iraq and the United States were scheduled to hold talks in Baghdad and Washington on achieving a peaceful solution to the 4-month-old Persian Gulf standoff.

The U.N. Security Council had authorized the possible use of military force against Iraq if it does not withdraw from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

In Washington, the State Department had no immediate comment on either the offer by Saddam to release the hostages.

Meanwhile, on the local economic front, Britain's Confederation of British Industry reported annual growth in retail sales volume came ''to a virtual standstill'' in November, while sales in the wholesaling and motor trades sectors continued lower compared to year-ago levels.

In its latest monthly survey, the CBI also noted that British retailers, wholesalers and motor traders ''expect their overall business situation to deteriorate over the next three months'' and retailers reported the ''first fall in confidence since last November.''

Analysts noted the CBI report went also unnoticed by local investors.

On the trading floor, oil stocks fell as the spot price of oil plummented on cash markets.

British oil drillers London & Scottish Marine Oil tumbled 36 cents to $7.49 while Enterprise Oil slumped 42 cents to $11.63.

Grand Metropolitan, the international foods group, climbed 32 cents to $12.10 after reporting its annual pre-tax profits jumped 25 percent.

British Airways PLC gained 18 cents to $2.98, benefitting from the sharply lower price of oil.

In Frankfurt, stock prices closed sharply higher in active trading on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which gained 24.62 points Wednesday, jumped 33.43 points or 2.2 percent to 1,504.39 - the first time since September 18 the index closed above the 1,500-level.

Traders said the Iraqi news helped to boost prices higher across the board.

SANTIAGO, CHILE (DEC. 6) UPI - President Bush Thursday welcomed Iraq's Saddam Hussein's decision to release all hostages, but said ''it will not change my thinking on his need to comply 100 percent'' with U.N. resolutions requiring withdrawal from Kuwait.

At a news conference, Bush again rejected any linkage of settlement of the Persian Gulf crisis to an international Middle East peace conference to deal with the Palestinian question.

''The question is the agression against Kuwait,'' said Bush, who is on a six-day South American trip. ''There will not be and there is no linkage to the Palestinian-West Bank question.''

Bush said he had rejected the idea of a Middle East peace conference because from the ''very beginning,'' since his invasion of Kuwait last Aug. 2, Saddam ''has tried to justify his illegal invasion of Kuwait ... but we are not going to get diverted from the full implementation of the U.N. resolutions in order to give him some face-saving way out of something he should not have gotten into in the first place.''

Asked if he thought Saddam's hostage announcement was credible, Bush replied:

''I hope that it is credible. No single hostage should have been taken in the first place and I hope that it shows that the strategy is working and that Saddam understands that his hostage policy has incurred the condemnation of the whole world, so we've got to continue keep the pressure on.

''This will be welcome, if true,'' he added, ''but it will not change my thinking on his need to comply 100 percent without conditions to the U.N. resolutions.''

Bush also said he hoped ''Saddam Hussein is getting the message: the message so clearly stated in the last U.N. resolution.'' He referred to the most recent resolution authorizing the use of force in the gulf, if necessary, after Jan. 15 to implement demands for the Iraqi pullout from Kuwait.

''Release of all the hostages would be a very good thing,'' Bush told reporters. ''But the problem is the aggression against Kuwait. Iraq must leave the whole world agrees with that.''

Asked whether there were any back door diplomatic negotiations with Saddam or new incentives offered in view of the Iraqi leader's reference to ''positive diplomatic changes,'' Bush replied:

''One, there are no secret negotiations, direct or indirect with Iraq on this question; none and there will be none on this question.''

''Secondly, I am not looking for incentives or further incentive. What I want to ensure, in going this last step for peace, that Iraqis know from me and Saddam Hussein knows from the Secretary of State how supportive the United States is of the U.N. consioldiated position.

''I don't want any people to think there are secret negotiations going on or that I will even consider making concessions,'' he added. ''That is not what these meetings are about.''

Last Friday, Bush announced that he would receive Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz in Washington and Baker would be his emissary to Baghdad to discuss the gulf situation with Saddam.

The word from Iraq is that Aziz will come to Washington on Dec. 17, but the United States has not yet confirmed this date. Baker is expected to go to Baghdad after Christmas and before the Jan. 15 deadline.

BELGRADE, YUGOSLAVIA (DEC. 6) UPI - The campaign for Serbia's first multi-party elections in 45 years closed Thursday, with the leading opposition presidential candidate accusing the ruling communists of the largest Yugoslav republic of killing one of his campaign workers.

Vuk Draskovic, the head of the nationalist Serbian Revival Movement, said the killing was intended to provoke violence, which President Slobodan Milosevic could use as a pretext to cancel Sunday's elections and call out the communist-led Yugoslav army.

''They wanted to have bloodshed because this is the only way for them to retain power. I beg you not to retaliate,'' Draskovic told more than 10,000 cheering supporters who braved a heavy snowstorm to attend his final rally in the commercial heart of Belgrade.

There was no immediate reaction from the Milosevic regime.

State-run Belgrade Radio said a Serbian Revival Movement activist was shot in the back Wednesday night by a supporter of the ruling communists as he was pasting campaign posters outside the town hall of Vranje, 250 miles southeast of Belgrade.

''The terrorists of the Serbian Socialist Party fired into his back four bullets,'' said Draskovic, a former communist who rose to the forefront of a Serbian nationalist wave through his novels glorifying the history of Yugoslavia's majority ethnic group.

Draskovic charged that the army is backing the Serbian Socialist Party, the name taken by the communists in July. But he predicted victory for his party.

''On Dec. 9, we shall break through the Bolshevik front. In their hands are tanks. Tito's generals have weapons. In our hands are the real democratic bullets: ballots,'' he said, referring to the late dictator Josip Broz Tito.

Draskovic, 44, is considered the main contender among 31 candidates seeking to unseat Milosevic. Voters are also to chose a 250-member assembly from among 1,713 hopefuls from 53 parties. Similar elections are set for adjacent Montenegro Republic.

Other leading parties aside from the communists and Draskovic's organization are the Democratic Party, the Peoples Radical Party and the Alliance of Reformist Forces of federal Prime Minister Ante Markovic.

Campaigning was banned Friday and Saturday to allow for a cooling-off period before the elections, which political experts believe will be close.

Most give the advantage to Milosevic, who has governed since October 1987, because of his rigid grip on the communist-controlled media, bureaucracy and state-run enterprises, and his strong appeals to Serbian nationalism.

The elections are expected to be boycotted by the ethnic Albanian majority of Kosovo Province to protest the elimination of virtually all provincial self-rule in a new Serbian Constitution adopted in September by the communists.

Serbia and Montenegro are the last of Yugoslavia's six republics to hold multi-party elections following the demise in January of the national communist organization, which took power in 1945.

The Serbian contests, however, are regarded as the most crucial to the future of Yugoslavia because they will determine the stance of the most influential republic in a constitutional dispute that many people fear could ignite a civil war in the multi-ethnic nation of 23 million.

Nationalist governments elected in April in Slovenia and Croatia are threatening secession unless a new constitution is adopted making Yugoslavia a confederation of independent states.

The two predominantly Roman Catholic republics fear domination of the federation by majority Orthodox Serbs.

Milosevic, who has refused to negotiate on the issue, has said he opposes confederation unless Serbia's borders are enlarged to include Serbian enclaves now in other republics.

Draskovic and other top opposition leaders have pledged to negotiate with Croatia and Slovenia.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Farmers will be paid $1.74 billion in crop support payments for this year's wheat, oat and barley crops with the lion's share - $1.7 billion - going to wheat growers, the government said Thursday.

This year's wheat crop of 2.74 billion bushels was the third largest on record and has contributed to a slump in market prices. The barley crop totaled 419 million bushels, up slightly from last year, while the oat harvest, at 358 million bushels, was down slightly.

The Agriculture Department said the payments, which will be made in cash, would cover the subsidies due for low prices and payments due under the so-called Zero-92 program. In it, farmers who idle all of the land normally devoted to a specific crop are guaranteed 92 percent of their projected subsidy payment.

Wheat growers will receive subsidies calculated at the rate of 92 cents per bushel - the amount due after subtracting advance payments made months ago and an additional reduction required by balanced-budget law from the five-month average price of $2.72 a bushel.

For barley, the payment rate is 11.6 cents a bushel and for oats, 31. 8 cents a bushel.

In all, barley farmers will receive about $35 million and oat farmers $8 million.

Additional payments will be made next summer if market prices are particularly low.

Producers who enrolled in the Zero-92 program were guaranteed a minimum payment rate of 90 cents a bushel on wheat and 26 cents a bushel for barley. There was no guaranteed payment for oats.

MIAMI (DEC. 6) UPI - The U.S. decision to guarantee a minimum import level for foreign sugar represents a victory for Caribbean producers, although the program may cause problems for domestic producers and undercut world prices, several officials said Thursday.

''I would say the Caribbean has come out big winners with this minimum import level,'' said Parks Shackelford, a consultant to the Cotton, Rice and Sugar Subcommittee in the U.S. House.

''It is important that we maintain access to our market - a premium market - until they (Caribbean producers) are able to get a fair price on the world market,'' Shackelford told a gathering at the Miami Conference on the Caribbean, an annual trade and development conference.

The 1990 farm bill signed Nov. 28 by President Bush sets an absolute floor for U.S. sugar imports of 1.25 million tons.

Although sugar-producing nations in the Caribbean had hoped for guaranteed imports of 2 million tons, ''We have to be pleased with this level,'' said Carlos Despradel, economic adviser to the president of the Dominican Republic.

The United States sets the import quota annually to balance domestic supply and demand, as part of the federal sugar program that sets a domestic support price of 18 cents a pound for raw sugar.

Sugar imports for the current fiscal year will be higher than the guaranteed floor, because of a shortfall in domestic production.

In fact, the U.S. Agriculture Department last week announced a 22 percent increase in the 1990-1991 import level, to 2.3 million tons. Domestic producers condemned that move, however, saying the current harvest is producing yields higher than that estimated by the government.

But Robert Barry, a sugar specialist with the Agriculture Department, said Wednesday domestic production likely will rise in coming years to levels that will undercut the guaranteed import level of 1.25 million tons.

''The potential for higher (domestic) production is very real ... and could trigger the new marketing allotment mechanism,'' in the 1990 farm bill, Barry said. ''What would happen with that excess sugar?''

If the excess sugar lands on the world market, international sugar prices, which already are well below the guaranteed domestic U.S. price, could be weakened further, Barry said.

However, Shackelford said it was unlikely U.S. producers would seek to sell excess product on the world market, when they could hold the product for inclusion in the U.S. program the following year.

''This sugar is not available to the market, so it will not affect the market '' Shackelford said. ''It will be carried over into the next year.''

PARIS (DEC. 6) UPI - Nine Impressionist paintings that were stolen from a Paris museum during visiting hours five years ago, including Claude Monet's ''Impression: Sunrise,'' have been recovered on the Mediterranean Island of Corsica, authorities said Thursday.

The paintings, which include four other works by Monet, two by Auguste Renoir and one by Berthe Morisot, were found by police Tuesday night in an apartment near Porto-Vecchio in the southern part of the French island.

Police arrested seven people, including Donatien Comiti, 30, an unemployed Corsican barman who had photographs of the stolen artworks. Most of those arrested were later released.

Art experts said the overall worth of the nine paintings was difficult to determine, but police sources put their value at $20 million.

Besides "Impression: Sunrise," a work that gave its name to the Impressionist movement, the four other Monet paintings recovered were ''Camille Monet and her Cousin on the Beach of Trouville,'' ''Portrait of Monet,'' ''Portrait of Polly, Fisher at Belle Ile,'' and ''Field of Tulips in Holland.''

The two Renoir paintings recovered were ''Bathers'' and ''Portrait of Monet.'' Also found were ''Young Girl at the Ball'' by Berthe Morisot and Naruse's ''Portrait of Monet.''

The recovery of the masterpieces, some of which were reported to have been damaged, marked the end a five-year police investigation that had largely focused on organized crime in Japan, where police appeared convinced the works had been taken.

It was only after studying many recorded telephone conversations between Japan and Corsica that investigators were led to the apartment in Porto-Vecchio, police sources said.

The heist, believed to be the most important art theft in modern French history, took place on Oct. 27, 1985. About 10 a.m. on that quiet Sunday morning, two young men joined about 40 visitors waiting in line to enter the Marmottan Museum in the elegant 16th District of the French capital.

The two men paid admission and were joined by three accomplices inside the three-story gray stone building, witnesses said.

''I saw the men come in. They threatened the guards at gunpoint and made them lie face down,'' a female attendant said. ''First they made the guards on the main floor lie down, then the ones on the bottom floor. Nobody was hurt, they just waved their guns.''

The robbers quickly removed the paintings from the basement exhibition rooms, getting unexpected help from an unplugged alarm system. Museum officicals explained later that the alarm was turned on only at night.

''They knew exactly what they wanted and where it was, and they left very quickly,'' a museum employee said at the time.

The theft caused as much grudging admiration as consternation in the art world. Critics and museum officials shook their heads in wonderment and embarassement at the daring exhibited by the robbers, which appeared to have been surpassed only by the laxity of the museum's security system.

Adding to the sensasionalism of the crime was that one of the stolen paintings Monet's ''Impression: Sunrise,'' ranks among the most important art works in the world.

The masterpiece, painted in 1872 and first shown in 1874 at an exhibition of painters banned from the formal Parisian exhibition halls, depicts a harbor scene at dawn. The work, which was first brought by a doctor for $54 at the current exchange rate, is today considered priceless by art specialists.

The Impressionist masters, who were to create one of the most widely known and appreciated schools of painting of all time, sought to portray nature through the changing effects of light and movement. Their group included Paul Cezanne, Edgar Degas, and to a lesser extent Edouard Manet.

The paintings stolen from the Marmottan are so famous that art critics had feared they would be impossible to sell, leading to speculation that the theft had been ordered by an extremely rich and most certainly eccentric American or Japanese collector who wanted the works for his private pleasure.

For a time authorities expected a ransom demand from the robbers, but as the weeks passed without further news it was generally thought that the works had been spirited out of France and had found their way to a well-guarded safe on the other side of the world, most likely Japan.

EASTON, Pa. (DEC. 6) UPI - A color-blind craftsman who delighted children the world over with his colorful Crayola crayon creations is retiring after 37 years, his employer announced Thursday.

During his tenure at Binney & Smith, maker of Crayola products in Easton, Emerson Moser made more than 1 billion crayons, including seas of salmon, pecks of plums and enough maize to color the entire state of Nebraska.

His slight color blindness was discovered by a company doctor during a physical before Moser began working for Binney & Smith in 1953.

''It really isn't that bad and doesn't affect my work,'' said Moser, 62, of Bethlehem.

Moser's job is to pour the hot colored wax into crayon molds and then extract the finished crayons.

When he isn't sure of a color mix, Moser, whose wife, son and father- in-law all worked for Crayola, asks his co-workers for help.

In all his years, Moser said he has ''never made a crayon I was ashamed to put my name on. That's what I've enjoyed most about working here. I make the best crayons in the world.''

Moser began his colorful career on Oct. 12, 1953, working for $1.30 an hour in the same plant where the first box of Crayola crayons was produced in 1903. After being trained in a number of jobs, Moser made his first crayon on May 5, 1955.

During his tenure, Moser has seen colors come and go, most recently when the company decided to discontinue eight classic shades. But despite all the exotic shades that have come out recently, Moser's favorite colors to make are the eight originals: red, blue, yellow, green, orange, violet, black and brown.

''They run the smoothest on the molding machine,'' Moser said. ''I never have any trouble with them. Some of the others like red orange and yellow orange are tougher.''

Despite his penchant for tradition, Moser is sympathetic to the company's need to modernize.

''You need to change with the times,'' said Moser. ''Kids today like brighter colors and that's why we came out with the new colors this summer and the new fluorescent colors this winter. Personally, I like the older colors best.''

After making a billion crayons during his tenure, Moser said he won't miss job because it's a lot of hard work. But he will miss his co- workers.

''I'll miss the people I work with and the kids who come through on tours. Their eyes get so big when they see me making the crayons.''

Moser plans to retire on Dec. 13. To commemorate the occasion, and in recognition of his years of service, Moser's photograph will be added to the Crayola Hall of Fame in Easton.

MIAMI (DEC. 6) UPI - A former Panamanian military leader pleaded guilty to a conspiracy charge Thursday and admitted he delivered hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of cocaine bribes to deposed strongman Manuel Noriega.

The plea agreement, accepted Thursday by U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler, calls for Lt. Col. Luis del Cid to testify against Noriega at his drug trafficking trial.

Del Cid, 47, pleaded guilty to one count of conspiracy to commit racketeering.

He has already served one year in jail and the agreement calls for him to serve no more than two additional years.

Sentencing will be postponed until after Noriega's trial, which is scheduled to begin Jan. 28 but expected to be delayed.

In exchange for del Cid's testimony, the government agreed to drop five other counts, including racketeering and cocaine trafficking, contained in a 1988 indictment. If convicted on all the original charges, del Cid could have faced up to 70 years in prison and fines up to $550,000.

Defense Attorney Sam Burstyn said del Cid will probably end up serving less time than if he had waited for trial.

''He would serve three to four years if he persisted in fighting the case and taking it through appeals. This case presents the unusual opportunity where a guilty plea gets you out of jail faster than a trial,'' Burstyn said.

Del Cid, described as a trusted Noriega aide for 20 years, admitted he acted as Noriega's bag man, delivering payoffs from cocaine traffickers who used Panama as a shipping and money laundering station for U.S.-bound drugs.

The U.S. Attorney's Office in Miami issued a prepared statement saying, ''His admission of guilt today speaks for itself.

''The government will carefully consider any cooperation, truthful testimony and evidence before making any recommendation (on sentencing) to the court.''

Like Noriega, del Cid surrendered during the U.S. military invasion of Panama last December.

After months of plea negotiations, a key obstacle was overcome when the U.S. government agreed to oppose any attempts to deport del Cid to Panama to face possible criminal charges there.

Del Cid is the second Noriega co-defendant to plead guilty. Pilot Eduardo Pardo was sentenced to 30 months in prison after pleading guilty in February to flying more than $800,000 in drug profits from Fort Lauderdale to Panama.

The 1988 indictment charges Noriega took $4.6 million in bribes to ensure Colombia's Medellin cartel could safely ship cocaine through Panama. If convicted, he would face a maximum penalty of 145 years in prison and $1.1 million in fines.

Del Cid's testimony could bolster the government's case. But defense attorneys are expected to attack his credibility, claiming del Cid would say anything to reduce his own prison time.

CHICAGO (DEC. 6) UPI - Slugger George Bell signed a 3-year, $12.6 million contract with the Chicago Cubs Thursday to become the second-highest paid player in baseball.

Bell, a free agent, was the 1987 American League MVP and has spent his entire eight-year career with the Toronto Blue Jays. The power- hitting left fielder now teams with Ryne Sandberg, Andre Dawson and Mark Grace to give the Cubs one of baseball's most formidable lineups.

The Cubs announced the signing at a news conference, the day after baseball concluded its winter meetings.

Only Jose Canseco is paid more than Bell. The Oakland outfielder signed in June for $23.5 million for five years, an average of $4.7 million a season.

This is the second big free-agent signing by the Cubs, who landed pitcher Danny Jackson before the meetings.

Bell, 31, batted .265 with 21 homers and 86 RBI last season for the second-place Blue Jays. However, he is a notoriously poor performer during daytime, when the Cubs play most of their games at Wrigley Field.

The Blue Jays revamped their outfield at the meetings. They obtained Devon White and Joe Carter in anticipation of Bell leaving. Bell had sought $16 million over four years from Toronto and was displeased with the Blue Jays' plans to use him as a designated hitter.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (DEC. 6) UPI - Argentine President Carlos Menem said Thursday a group of private businessmen funded an 18-hour military uprising earlier this week.

''Elementary Watson,'' Menem responded when asked about reports that businesmen paid more than 400 renegade soldiers who took over three military installations, including the army headquarters, Monday.

''This will be investigated in depth because there was bloodshed here,'' Menem said. ''No one can be spared, absolutely no one,'' he said.

Casualty figures for the uprisings run from 13 to 21 dead and dozens of wounded.

''The war courts are functioning at full'' speed, he said after accompanying President Bush to the downtown airport Thursday morning.

During his 17-hour visit, Bush endorsed Menem's use of force in putting down the rebel uprising. Bush continued to Chile on his five- nation South American tour Thursday.

Two officers involved in the takeover of a battalion in Palomar, a suburb of Buenos Aires, Col. Enrique Baraldini and Oscar Vega, testified Thursday before the Military Supreme Court, according to an army spokesman.

The spokesman told United Press International the preliminary investigations began Tuesday and would be conducted in the fastest way possible.

Menem said the rebels tried several times to negotiate with government forces, speaking to Defense Minister Humberto Romero, Presidential Secretary Eduardo Bauza and Army chief Martin Bonnet.

''Col. Romero Mundani the carapintada in charge of (the uprising at the tank factory) Tanse, in Boulogne, called the defense minister,'' Menem said.

''The minister told him that I had ordered the only conversation was unconditional surrender,'' he said.

The ''carapintadas,'' maverick soldiers who daub their faces with camouflage paint, led the rebellions Monday. The group also led three uprisings against former President Raul Alfonsin.

''Mayor Hugo Abete, who was in the Patricios Regiment called General Bonnet and asked for mediation; Bonnet's answer was unconditional surrender, in underwear, barefooted and with the hands up,'' Menem said.

When government forces drove Abete into submission with five tanks and mortar fire Monday, they made captured rebels kneel on the ground in the wooded regiment courtyard with their hands on their heads. Later, the renegades were forced to take off their shoes before being carted off to jail in an army truck.

''Later another called who said he was an unemployed lieutenant, who was in the Armed Forces building (behind the executive offices),'' Menem said. ''This one talked to Eduardo Bauza and when Bauza brought me the message, I told him to tell the guy that I was sorry he was unemployed but to go to hell,'' Menem told the news agency Noticias Argentinas.

''I spent almost the whole day (Monday) drinking Mate (herbal tea) and giving orders,'' he said.

Some of the most intense fighting Monday was behind the presidential offices in the Libertador Armed Forces building, where Menem said he had ordered fighter jets to bomb if the rebels were not brought under control.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - The slowing U.S. economy and mounting uncertainties from the Persian Gulf crisis have combined to cloud the short-term outlook for reducing the federal budget deficit, the Congressional Budget Office said Thursday.

In its interim report on the federal budget, the CBO predicted the total federal deficit will rise from $200 billion this year to $250 billion next year and 1992 before easing to roughly $170 billion in 1993, $60 billion in 1994 and $30 billion in 1995.

Robert Reischauer, the office's director, told the House Budget Committee the short-term budget outlook has worsened since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. But the long-term outlook has improved.

''Even allowing for some additional deterioration in the economic outlook, by fiscal year 1995, the total federal deficit is likely to fall below $100 billion for the first time in 14 years and below 1 percent of (gross national product) for the first time in 20 years,'' Reischauer said.

While long-term prospects for the deficit appear healthy, the short- term reality will be dominated by a sluggish economy, Middle East uncertainty and the ongoing savings and loan bailout.

The government's effort to protect depositors of failed thrifts and sell the assets of those institutions will continue to add to federal borrowing requirements in the next few years.

''Over the next two years, massive spending to resolve insolvent savings and loan institutions will keep the deficit at record levels,'' Reischauer said.

The CBO projected that federal spending on deposit insurance will increase from $58 billion this year to $91 billion next year and $107 billion in 1992 before dropping sharply in 1993.

The CBO budget forecast was based on economic assumptions developed in mid-October. The assumptions differ significantly from those of the previous forecast, made in July, by factoring for slower GNP growth and higher inflation.

''Many of the changes from last summer's forecast reflect the effects of the sharp increases in the price of imported oil that resulted form Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last August,'' Reischauer said.

The CBO plans to present its next economic and budget projections in late January. That forecast, Reischauer said, is likely to show further economic weakness.

''Since October, the economic landscape has been clouded by the persistence of high oil prices, weak real estate markets and problems with the balance sheets of many banks and corporations,'' Reischauer said.

''Unless these factors are offset by other developments, a more pessimistic economic outlook will worsen the budget outlook as well.''

TORONTO (DEC. 6) UPI - After a string of losing quarters, auto parts maker Magna International Inc. reported Thursday earnings of $2.37 million, or 9 cents a share, in its first quarter of fiscal 1991.

The earnings compare with losses of $8.4 million in the year earlier period.

Revenues in the quarter decreased to $377.8 million from $390.7 million in the first quarter of fiscal 1990.

Magna's Chairman Frank Stronach told shareholders at the company's annual meeting Thursday that he has made some mistakes but he intends to stay on until the company is turned around.

In fiscal 1990, Magna charged $143.8 million in restructuring costs to its books that pushed year-end losses to $190.7 million on sales of $1.64 billion.

Stronach said it ''would have been easy to resign'' but that wouldn't have solved Magna's problems. He cited a failed attempt to enter politics several years ago and leaving ''too much on the table'' for Magna's young management team as key mistakes.

Magna problems originated in an aggressive expansion strategy that saw its number of plants increase from 22 in 1977 to over 100 in 1990.

Magna management now is concentrating its efforts on selling off some of its assets, forming joint ventures and renegotiating $875.5 million in debt.

Stronach told shareholders that although the economic environment has changed dramatically over the past few years, Magna still has a very good core business.

Magna's key divisions, with operations in Canada, the U.S. and Europe, produce a wide variety of auto parts including door systems, interior trim, body sheet metal, plastics and engine and transmission components.

Shareholders were told that an asset sales program to cut its debt will have raised $362.1 million by mid-1991. Magna has already raised $181.1 million in asset sales and has signed, closed or has letters of intent for another $125.8 million in deals, company officials said.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Meetings orchestrated by S&L operator Charles Keating between the Keating Five senators and federal regulators triggered a ''completely unprecedented and grossly improper'' halt in a probe of Keating's troubled thrift, one of the regulators told a Senate panel Thursday.

William Black, general counsel of the western regional office of the Office of Thrift Supervision and a former official of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said he believed April 1987 meetings between the regulators and senators chilled the bank board's later scrutiny of Keating's Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, Calif.

Black made his statements during the 13th day of hearings before the ethics committee, which is trying to decide whether Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., John Glenn, D-Ohio, John McCain, R- Ariz., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich., improperly pressured regulators to benefit Keating.

Lincoln collapsed in April 1989 in the biggest failure in the nation's savings and loan scandal, costing taxpayers about $2 billion to bail out.

Black told the committee that pressure stemming from April 2 and April 9, 1987 meetings between the senators and regulators led to later orders under bank board Chairman M. Danny Wall to halt the examination of Lincoln by federal regulators from San Francisco, who on May 1 had recommended that the government seize the thrift. Black attended the April 9 meeting.

''This is the most likely explanation for this completely unprecedented and grossly improper action of halting the exam,'' Black testified.

Black said Keating set up the meetings to intimidate the regulators.

Lawyers representing the senators sought to rough up Black during his second day of testimony. Thomas Green, Riegle's lawyer, questioned Black's ''guts'' at one point.

Later in the testimony, Black pointed out that Green's law firm was one of several to receive between $55 million and $70 million by Keating to fight the bank board examination.

Keating, who has been indicted on state securities and fraud charges in California and is the target of a continuing federal grand jury investigation, contributed $1.3 million to the senators' political campaings and causes.

Meanwhile, in connection with its decision to grant limited immunity to James Grogan, a close Keating associate, Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the committee's vice chairman, said the panel had also issued subpoenas for ''very important'' documents from Grogan.

Those documents had been denied when Grogan became one of seven Keating associates to invoke their constitutional right against self- incrimination in refusing to testify before the panel.

Rudman said the committee will see the demanded documents on Dec. 12, will question Grogan in a closed session on Dec. 17, then will decide whether to put Grogan on the witness stand during a public session.

Rudman also said it would be ''unfair'' and a ''denial of due process'' to force the accused senators to testify before Grogan, meaning their appearances before the panel will be pushed back at least several weeks.

While Rudman warned against placing too much emphasis on ''uncorroborated testimony of an immunized witness,'' Grogan's testimony could have a dramatic impact on the hearings.

Grogan served as Lincoln's vice president and corporate counsel for Lincoln's parent company, American Continental Corp., and was Keating's chief lobbyist. The former Glenn aide had close contacts with all of the five accused senators.

PALM BEACH, Fla. (DEC. 6) UPI - The National Hockey League Thursday awarded expansion franchises to Tampa, Fla., and Ottawa, with the teams to begin play in the 1992-93 season.

NHL President John Ziegler made the announcement after a review of the candidate cities by the league's Board of Governors. The decision was greeted by wild cheering from Ottawa supporters.

Tampa and the Canadian capital were chosen from among seven applicants, beating out St. Petersburg, Miami, Hamilton, Ontario and two Southern California cities.

A San Diego group said it would not be ready until 1996, and Jerry Buss, owner of the Los Angeles Lakers, said his group would not be ready until 1993.

The Ottawa invitation was accepted by Bruce Firestone, chief executive officer of the new club that will be known as the Senators.

The Tampa group is headed by former NHL star Phil Esposito. In the last two weeks he acquired millions of dollars in financing from Japanese interests to fuel the bid.

Both teams will play in arenas that are yet to be built but have been financed. Ottawa will become the NHL's eighth Canadian team.

The NHL this season has 21 teams. The expansion San Jose Sharks will join the league next year. In addition to Tampa and Ottawa, plans call for further expansion over the next decade.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker Thursday welcomed Iraq's announced intention to release all hostages in Iraq and Kuwait, but said the United States will continue to demand unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

Baker told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that the Iraqi foreign ministry had confirmed officially that all foreign nationals will be permitted to leave.

The Iraqi ambassador to Washington, Mohammed al-Mashat, in an interview on Cable News Network, said, ''All our guests once again will be in their homes well before Christmas.''

But Baker, testifying before Congress, and Bush, at a news conference in Santiago, Chile, said freeing the hostages would not soften U.S. insistence that Iraq conform to all U.N. resolutions demanding full withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait.

Earlier, Baker had expressed reservations to the House Foreign Affairs Committee about a broadcast report of the hostage release because there had been no ''government-to-government'' confirmation of the Iraqi report that President Saddam Hussein had requested the Iraqi Parliament to approve the release of all foreign nationals.

But in the course of 2 1/2 hours of testimony, Baker learned that confirmation came in a telephone call to the State Department from acting Ambassador Joseph Wilson in Baghdad, who had met with officials of the Iraqi Foreign Ministry.

The exact number of foreign nationals in Iraq and Kuwait has never been precisely established. But it is thought there are around 900 Americans, including 88 held as human shields, plus an estimated 5,000 other foreigners.

Opening his testimony before the House panel, his second appearance on Capitol Hill in two days to explain the Bush administration's Persian Gulf policy, Baker said, ''We should acknowledge that this (hostage report) is a welcome and significant development. But we do want to see it actually happen. ...

''Secondly, let me say that it does not lessen nor should it lessen our determination that Iraq's aggression against Kuwait must be reversed by full implementation of all of the Security Council resolutions.

''And, third ... I think that this is a sign that the strategy of diplomatic and military pressure is working. It seems to me no coincidence that this announcement comes just one week ... after the international community has authorized the use of force.''

Bush also said Saddam's offer to free the hostages ''would be welcome if true, but it will not change my thinking on his need to comply 100 percent, without condition, to the U.N. resolutions.''

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole said of the proposed release of the hostages ''No doubt about it. The president's policy is working. The last thing we need are any more timid signals from Congress.''

On a related matter, Baker was asked about reports the United States, in a shift of policy, was recommending the U.N. Security Council support an international Middle East peace conference.

''We have not in any way shifted our position on an international conference '' Baker said. ''... because of our consistent position that we will not link the gulf crisis and Arab-Israeli dispute. This is certainly not an appropriate time for such a conference.''

Baker was backed by Bush, who told reporters in in Santiago, ''The question is the aggression against Kuwait. There will be and is no linkage to the Palestinian or the West Bank question.

Baker said there is no evidence that economic sanctions against Iraq will have the required effects, and therefore the option of military action must be raised.

He told the House Committee, ''We have to face the fact that, four months into this conflict, none of our efforts have yet produced any sign of change in Saddam Hussein.

(DEC. 6) UPI - There may be a major break in the Iraq crisis. The official Iraqi News Agency says President Saddam Hussein has asked his rubber-stamp National Assembly to let all detained foreigners go home. This follows by less than 24 hours Iraq's acceptance of face- to-face talks with Washington on the crisis. Initial U-S reaction to the latest development is cautious.

Saddam earlier promised to free the hostages in various stages between Christmas and next March 25th, provided his country is NOT attacked by the international military force now drawn up against it. Iraq yesterday said that the 33-hundred Soviet workers it holds also are free to go home. Western diplomats report that leaves another two- thousand hostages in Iraq.

It is NOT clear if freedom for the remaining hostages will come as soon as Iraq's National Assembly agrees to meet Saddam's request. Although he effectively rules the country, he left the final decision to the speaker and members of the National Assembly.

NATO defense ministers have started a two-day meeting in Belgium that is expected to hear U-S Defense Secretary Cheney ask for more naval and airlift support for troops in the Persian Gulf. Cheney also is expected to ask for more help from NATO members. Several have already provided various naval and air transport assistance to the multi-national force drawn up against Iraq.

The hard-luck Columbia mission has been hit by another setback. The crew reported a burning smell this morning, similar to that noticed before one computer failed shortly after launch on Sunday. Minutes later, the second computer stopped functioning. That has left the crew unable to operate the mission's 150-Million-dollar telescope payload. Technicians are now scrambling to see if they can get the first computer to operate again or see if they can rig up a way to operate everything from the ground.

Italian police say a small air force training plane abandoned by its pilot crashed in flames into a school on the outskirts of Bologna today, killing 12 people and injuring at least 62 others. The single-seat plane was on a training flight from an airbase near Verona when it crashed into the rear of the two-story building. Air force officials said the pilot radioed that the plane had caught fire and the controls were NOT working.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - The head of the World Council of Churches condemned Thursday the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, but said war ''cannot be the right solution,'' warning it might ''wipe out'' Kuwait.

''The (Iraqi) militarty occupation cannot be accepted as a way to solving conflict between nations and no big power should be allowed to impose its will on a smaller one,'' said the Rev. Emilio Castro, general secretary of the world council. ''And so obviously the United Nations is correct in asking for (Iraqi) withdrawal.''

''But war,'' he added, ''cannot be the right solution,'' and he urged the economic sanctions now in place be given time to work.

''The actual consequences of the medicine called war would be worst than the present situation,'' he said.

Castro, who heads the international council of 311 Protestant and Orthodox churches in more than 100 countries, made his comments in an interview with United Press International.

Castro said the World Council's position had first been spelled out in September in a resolution adopted by its executive committee and the principles spelled out then - release of the hostages, Iraqi withdrawal, opposition to the use of military force by the U.S.-led coalition - remain the fundamentals of council policy.

''We believe the embargo has promise,'' he said. ''And we talk with experience because the World Council was practically the initiator of embargoes and boycotts against South Africa that later on was followed by the United Nations.''

Castro said the church council does not forget that ''the price for our patience, the international community's patience, is paid for by the Kuwaiti people.''

Yet, he said, inside such ''tragic circumstances'' the council believed the sanctions offer more hope. ''The war solution,'' he said, ''could simply wipe out Kuwait.''

Castro also rejected efforts made by some Arab leaders and church officials to specifically link a solution of the Kuwaiti situation with that of other conflicts in the Middle East.

''While obviously, the events in the gulf are not isolated from events in the whole region,'' he said, ''we cannot accept the linking of solutions to one problem to a solution of all problems.''

Such linking, he said, ''would be ideal, but being in the world of powers, we cannot sacrifice one suffering people as the price for solving the problem of another suffering people.

''So, for example, I am very interested in the ending the Turkish occupation of Cyprus,'' Castro said, deliberately not choosing the example of the Israeli-Palestinian conflict usually raised in such discussions. ''Whatever can be done, should be done.''

But, he added, ''If linkage cannot be accepted, on the contrary, coherence must be demanded. If we are now engaged in a just cause,'' he said of the Kuwait situation, ''we may get a taste for more engagement in other just causes'' such as the Cyprus and Palestinian situations.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 6) UPI - Shares of Orion Pictures jumped Thursday on a report that South Korean electronics giant Samsung Group may try to buy the studio in what would be another foreign takeover of a Hollywood studio.

Orion rose $1.50 a share to $14.50 in early afternoon trading on the New York Stock Exchange following a report in the Los Angeles Times that Samsung has made inquiries about a possible purchase.

Orion, the smallest and poorest recent performer of the eight major Hollywood studios in Hollywood, said it had no comment on the report, which said that Samsung would pay about $300 million for the studio - or about $15 a share - and provide a $500 million cash infusion.

Entertainment analyst Paul Marsh of Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards of Los Angeles said that such a deal is quite feasible, given Samsung's deep pockets. The company, rated as the world's 20th-largest industrial concern by Fortune magazine, had 1989 earnings of $515 million on sales of $35.2 billion.

Orion earned $15.1 million last year on revenues of $485 million. Its key asset is its film library, which includes ''Amadeus,'' ''Hannah and Her Sisters,'' ''Platoon,'' ''Robocop'' and the ''Cagney & Lacey'' television series.

The company's TV arm produces ''WIOU,'' ''Unequal Justice'' and ''Lifestories.'' It does not have a studio lot.

''If Samsung is interested, they would be interested from the standpoint of building up a weaker studio into a major studio,'' Marsh said. ''There's no question that Orion needs more equity.''

Orion, which had been plagued by a series of box-office duds over the past two years until the recent release of current hit ''Dances With Wolves,'' has given strong indications that it may be for sale. It announced in October that it had retained investment bankers Salomon Brothers to explore securing additional financing.

Marsh said analysts are uncertain whether billionaire John Kluge, who owns 70 percent of Orion would be willing to sell at $15 a share, since he acquired part of his stake at higher prices.

Orion is carrying a debt load of about $375 million and analysts have expressed concern that its future earnings may be negatively impacted by its method of accounting for the costs of its movies, which spreads the costs out over a longer period than other studios. They have also said that it lacks the resources to adequately market its films.

The three studios still under American control would be Disney, Paramount and Warner Bros.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - The U.S. goverment may offer to buy used cars from their owners in an effort to clean up the air as part of its new national energy strategy, industry and government sources said Thursday.

One government official, commenting on condition that he remain unidentified, said the buy-back of older cars unequipped with any antipollution devices is one of 60 options being considered by the Energy Department in the writing of its long-awaited National Energy Strategy.

''I think one of the energy options that'll be presented to the president will be: should the government embark on buying old cars to get them off the highway,'' said a senior executive of a major oil company who asked not to be named.

The Energy Department was scheduled to forward its new energy strategy to the White House sometime after the first of the year.

No immediate comment could be obtained from the department on the option to buy back older, dirt-spewing, used cars.

Delays in completion of the National Energy Strategy has spurred Rep. Ron Wyden D-Ore., to ask the General Accounting Office, the congressional watchdog agency, to investigate the Energy Department's effort. The investigation is underway.

It is difficult to determine the number of 20 year- or older cars still on the road nationally. General Motors said there were 154.8 million cars in operation as of July 1989. Of these, 9.8 million were at least 15 years old.

The federal car buy-back effort could be modeled on a successful test conducted in the Los Angeles area earlier this year by Unocal Corp., aided by the Ford Motor Co.

Unocal spokesman Jim Bray said the program resulted in buying back 8, 376 cars 20 years and older from April through September at a cost of $5.9 million to show the potential of reducing smog in the Los Angeles basin.

The oil company paid $700 for each car and sold them as scrap for ''less than $50 each,'' Bray said.

He said the 1970 cars were chosen as the break point because 1971 models were the first ones equipped with some kind of air pollution devices. About 410,000 cars 20 years and older are registered in the Los Angeles area, he said.

An intensive ''smog check'' of 75 of the older cars returned to Unocal showed they emitted 10.7 million pounds of pollution annually, 60 times the pollution of new 1990 models equipped with cleanup devices.

''We had anticipated only 15 to 30 times,'' Bray said.

The Unocal program was ''not intended to cure the smog problem. It was only intended as a pilot program,'' Bray said.

It also was hoped that the effort would ''challenge other companies to come up with their own innovative ideas'' for cleaning up the air, the spokesman said.

Ford, local Ford and Lincoln-Mercury dealers put up money for buying back about 1,090 of the older cars and California's South Coast Air Quality Management District contributed $100,000 for another 143 autos, Bray said.

The senior executive of another major oil company said the Unocal program demonstrated that ''as more and more new cars are bought, a lot of the environmental problems will be solved.''

UNITED NATIONS (DEC. 6) UPI - The U.N. Security Council postponed Thursday a debate on the situation in the Israeli-occupied territories so diplomats can agree on a final resolution that would include a call for an international conference on the Middle East, U.N. and diplomatic sources said.

The 15-nation council had scheduled a Thursday afternoon meeting to vote on a resolution supported by non-aligned countries but the document was unacceptable to the United States, the sources said.

A U.N. spokeswoman said the council will meet Friday. Diplomats said a text might be ready then for a vote.

The non-aligned - Malaysia, Yemen, Cuba and Colombia - introduced the resolution for a vote last month but it was not taken up for consideration because the council was dealing with resolutions against Iraq if the latter has not withdrawn from Kuwait by Jan. 15.

The non-aligned resolution sought stronger U.N. protection for Palestinians in the West Bank and Gaza Strip after the Oct. 8 riots on the Temple Mount in which Jerusalem police killed at least 19 Palestinians.

The resolution called for reconvening the 164 signatories of the 1949 Fourth Geneva Convention dealing with Israeli responsibilities as the occupying power in the West Bank and Gaza.

A U.N. commissioner, or ''ombudsman,'' would be sent to oversee the Palestinian population if the council adopted the resolution, a move strongly opposed by Israel and the United States.

Diplomats said the United States' U.N. Ambassador Thomas Pickering was discussing the idea of calling for the Middle East conference with Malaysian Ambassador Ismail Razali, who represents the non-aligned bloc in the council.

The discussions would involve changing demands in the non-aligned resolution regarding the ombudsman and a meeting of the Geneva convention while keeping the idea of the Security Council calling for the Middle East peace conference.

Israel and the United States have opposed a U.N. conference on the Middle East because it would involve the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar told reporters Thursday that the United Nations will play a ''crucial role'' in such a conference.

''It will be under the United Nations umbrella and with the United Nations participation,'' he said. ''The Palestinians have to be involved in the process, it is unavoidable.''

The resolution said the conference should be convened ''at an appropriate time'' and in a ''properly structured'' manner to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict.

The United States alone among the five Security Council permanent members was against a U.N.-organized Middle East meeting. The other four - the Soviet Union, France, China and Britain - supported the idea.

In London, the British Broadcasting Corp. reported earlier Thursday that the United States had proposed a Middle East conference and had urged the Security Council to help set it up. The U.S. quickly denied the report.

Secretary of State James Baker told the House Foreign Affairs Committee on Thursday, ''We have not in any way shifted our position on an international conference. Our longstanding position has been that an international conference, properly structured at an appropriate time, might be useful.

''We are not now recommending that an international conference on the Arab-Israeli conflict be held, nor are we supporting a resolution in the Security Council that would seek to convene such a conference precisely because of our consistent position that we will not link the gulf crisis and Arab-Israeli dispute. This is certainly not an approrpiate time for such a conference,'' he said.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who was to be in Washington Friday, said he was unaware of such a move by the United States.

''I know that the United States is not supportive of this idea of an international conference, and the United States knows very well our position about this,'' Shamir said.

The United States called for a Middle East conference in 1973 with the participation of the Soviet Union, Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria beside itself. But when it was convened Dec. 21, 1973, at the United Nations Palais de Nations in Geneva, Syria refused to sit at the same table with Israel, thus scuttling the meeting.

CHICAGO (DEC. 6) UPI - Short-covering and renewed hopes for an export credit offer to the Soviet Union boosted grain prices Thursday.

Grain and soybean futures were higher at the close on the Chicago Board of Trade, with the exception of December corn which lost a penny.

After some early weakness, the market rebounded on a pick-up in buying interest and a slight increase in export business. There also were indications that Wednesday's losses were overdone.

Soybean oil was the price leader in the soy complex. The prospect of continued tight supplies rallied the oil to session highs, although gains were trimmed by profit-taking late in the day.

Soybeans and meal were moderately higher on spillover from the oil pit and reports of fairly active trading on European markets.

December corn was pressured by heavy deliveries and was down 1 1/4 cents at the final bell. Prices were fractionally higher in the rest of the corn in line with the rally in soybeans.

The demand for wheat was based on news that Morocco and Algeria were in the market for nearly 300-thousand tons of wheat.

Basis levels were firm on continued light country movement.

At the close, corn was off 1 1/4 to up 1, soybeans up 3 to 5 1/2, wheat up 1 1/2 to 3 1/2 and oats up 1 1/2 to 2.

WASHINGTON (UPI)- The Voice of America told U.S. citizens in Kuwait and Iraq Thursday that preparations are being made to evacuate them as soon as possible.

Just hours after the State Department was officially notified of Iraq's decision to release the hostages, it released the text of the announcement being broadcast in English to the Middle East:

''The Iraqi government has announced it intends to release all foreigners.

''We have asked for, but not yet received, information from the Iraqi government on when and how such releases can take place. We will be pursuing this on an urgent basis.

''We are making preparations to evacuate all U.S. citizens as soon as they are permitted to leave.''

It is estimated that about 900 American citizens, including foreign- born spouses and children, are in Iraq and Kuwait, 88 of them as detainees being held as human shields around strategic installations.

So far, the U.S. government has evacuated about 2,300 Americans, mainly women and children, on chartered flights.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Scientists reported Thursday they had discovered an enzyme that apparently plays an important role in how the nose detects odors.

Researchers at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions in Baltimore found the enzyme, adenlyl cyclase, in the nasal cells of rats, which have odor detection systems similar to human's.

''The enzyme fits right into our model of how odor molecules are recognized and then sent from our noses to the brain,'' said Randall Reed, who led the research.

Scientists have long known that smelling begins in the mucous membranes behind the bridge of the nose where hair-like nerve endings from 5 million so-called receptor cells pick up airborne odorants.

Reed and his colleagues previously proposed a complex chemical system inside nasal cells makes cells fire a signal to the olfactory bulb, a processing center that translates the signal into a sensation and sends it to the brain.

The cascade of events inside sensory cells begins when the odor- carrying substances adhere to a protein on nasal cells called a receptor, activating messenger proteins that in turn trigger the new enzyme.

In a new study, published in the journal Science, Reed and his colleagues described how they copied the enzyme from rat cells and found evidence it regulates the odor identification process, indicating the enzyme may play a role in how the nose can detect even faint odors.

''This enzyme gives ways to look for the receptor to which odorants bind,'' he said. ''It is also possible that a defect in this enzyme may cause a loss in the ability to detect odors.''

DETROIT (DEC. 6) UPI - Chrysler Corp. plans to idle its light truck plant in Warren, Mich., the week of Dec. 17 and then operate it for two weeks each month through January and February to trim inventories, union and company workers said Thursday.

All U.S. vehicle assembly plans will be closed the last week of December for the holidays.

Bob Moriarty, secretary of United Auto Workers Local 140, said plans currently call for Chrysler to idle its Dodge City plant, which makes mid- and full-sized pickup trucks, for two weeks in January and two weeks in February.

The idlings would affect about 3,200 workers each time, he said.

Chrysler declined to confirm the temporary closings. ''Plans can change on a dime,'' company spokesman Doug Nicoll said, adding that the No. 3 automaker will not issue its early 1991 plant schedules until Dec. 20.

But Chrysler's supply of light trucks are considerably above the 70 to 75-day supply considered normal for this time of year. It had a 123- day supply of mid-sized Dodge Dakotas on hand as of Nov. 30, while its full-sized trucks posted a days' supply equal to 175 days.

Chrysler is not alone in trying to trim light truck supplies, swelled by soft sales because of rising fuel prices and economic uncertainties that have hurt U.S. vehicle sales in general.

Industry General Motors Corp. plans to temporarily close several light truck and van plants for two weeks starting Monday, including ones in Baltimore, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Pontiac, Mich.; and North Tarrytown, N. Y.

GM will also close its Flint, Mich., light truck plant for one week starting Monday, and its Moraine, Ohio, and Shreveport, La., truck plant for one week starting Dec. 17.

GM, which like Ford Motor Co. pared back fourth quarter production dramatically because of the Persian Gulf crisis and the poor economy, will also idle at least eight North American car plants this month.

A Ford spokesman said all its U.S. car and truck plants are expected to be operating next week, but that several facilities will be idled the week of Dec. 17.

WARSAW, POLAND (DEC. 6) UPI - Polish Interior Minister Krzysztof Kozlowski said Thursday that presidential candidate Stanislaw Tyminski came to Poland seven times in the last decade from Tripoli, considered a center of terrorism.

He also revealed that documents found within the ministry show preparations for martial law in Poland began as early as October 1980 - nearly three months before it was imposed.

Tyminski, a Canadian businessman who returned to Poland after 21 years to run for president, faces Solidarity leader Lech Walesa in Sunday's presidential runoff election after beating Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki in the first round.

Tyminski has repeatedly denied visiting Libya despite the fact that all seven of his visas to Poland during the past decade bore serial numbers issued by the Polish Embassy in Tripoli.

Kozlowski and his deputy, Jan Widacki, were showered with questions at a news conference by reporters who criticized Polish security for allowing an unknown candidate from abroad to run for office without checking his files.

''No police organizations collect information about presidential candidates,'' Deputy Interior Minister Jan Widacki said, adding that even the American FBI does not do it.

One reporter implied that Tyminski could be an ''agent.''

''We don't know and we don't have any such information,'' Widacki said.

Kozlowski said the computer confirmed that Tyminski visited Poland seven times in the past decade, always from Tripoli.

''The computer printed out his seven-time stay in Poland,'' Kozlowski said.

Kozlowski said he ordered a check of the computer system after Tyminski's repeated denials and that the computer reconfirmed the information.

''These data cannot be undermined,'' he said.

Tyminski owns an electronic firm in Toronto whose products could be applied to various armament systems, according to the ministry. Widacki said Canadian and U.S. intelligence services became concerned with such a possibility because ''the technology the firm has access to is guarded.''

On another subject, Kozlowski said documents recently found in the ministry building confirmed that preparation for martial law began Oct. 25, 1980, to ''create a condition for the reconstruction of the influence of the Communist Party and the government.''

The president, Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, imposed martial law Dec. 13, 1981, to crush Solidarity.

The latest results published by the state-run CBOS polling agency bolstered Walesa's chances to win Sunday's election. Of 1,476 respondents, 58 percent said they will vote for Walesa and 23 percent for Tyminski.

Both candidates agreed to a televised debate Sunday but Tyminski did not appear at the studio. Tyminski suggested Thursday instead but Thursday morning Walensa rejected the offer.

A statement released by Walesa's campaign staff, citing the earlier agreement, said Thursday was unacceptable.

''With the regular violations by Mr. Tyminski of the basic principles of poitical culture, Lech Walesa does not see the possibility of holding such a discussion,'' it said.

The Roman Catholic daily newspaper Slowo Powszechne carried an interview with Cardinal Jozef Glemp, who said Tyminski surfaced on the political scene because of the growing dissatisfaction with Poland's tough economic reforms under the Mazowiecki administration.

Nevertheless, Tuminski's candidacy is not acceptable, the primate said. ''He is a joke of history,'' Glemp said.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Laboratory tests show a potential new AIDS drug may be as powerful as AZT, the only government-authorized drug to fight the AIDS virus, while producing fewer side effects, researchers said Thursday.

Researchers from University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester, Mass., and Boehringer Ingelheim Pharmaceuticals in Ridgefield, Conn., said they hope to begin testing the promising compound on humans early next year.

Scientists found the drug, dubbed B1-RG-587, while screening about 1, 000 substances for those that would knock out reverse transcriptase - an enzyme that the AIDS virus needs to multiply - while leaving similar enzymes in human cells unharmed.

The current standard therapy for AIDS, zidovudine or AZT, blocks reverse transcriptase but also damages similar enzymes in human cells, creating serious side effects like bone marrow suppression. Other experimental drugs in widescale testing, DDI and DDC, act in the same fashion as AZT and produce side effects like pain in the nerve endings and potentially fatal inflammation of the pancreas.

''The significant difference of this compound from AZT is that unlike AZT, it is not capable of inhibiting normal cell growth,'' said Alan Rosenthal, head of research at Boerhinger Ingelheim and co-author of the study published in the journal Science.

In tests on rodents, monkeys and chimpanzees, oral doses of B1-RG-587 did not suppress bone marrow or cause other serious side effects at levels expected to be used in humans. It also appeared better able than the AZT family of drugs to cross from the bloodstream into the brain, Rosenthal said.

''We hope we will be able to have a product that would be useful in control of disease, but it would not be correct to say a 'cure,''' Rosenthal said. ''Our goal is to completely control and suppress the disease to the point a patient could lead a normal life - to arrest the disease in its tracks.''

The compound's ability to thwart the growth of the main type of the AIDS-causing human immunodeficiency virus, or HIV-1, appeared equivalent to AZT's power in tests of laboratory strains of HIV and in blood drawn from patients, Rosenthal said.

However, the drug had no effect against HIV-2, a form of the AIDS virus which is very rare in the United States and most prevalent in West Africa. Scientists regard that as an encouraging sign because ''the more specific something is, the more safe it usually is,'' Rosenthal said.

Preliminary evidence also indicates B1-RG-587, which should not be unusually costly to produce, appears active against HIV-1 that has developed resistance to AZT - a finding that could have significant treatment implications, Rosenthal said.

In another study published Wednesday in the journal Science, University of California-San Francisco scientists presented findings that may open a new door to gene therapy for AIDS.

John A.T. Young and his colleagues said their work involving bird viruses and the protein HIV usually uses to enter cells, called the CD-4 receptor, may lead to a better way of killing HIV-infected cells while sparing healthy cells.

In a complicated genetic engineering procedure, researchers found that when they inserted genes carrying instructions for the production of human CD-4 into quail cells containing a virus called the avian leukosis virus, the cells produced new bird virus that bore human CD-4 receptors.

Researchers theorize that the CD-4-coated viruses could home in on human cells infected with actively reproducing HIV because the surface of such cells contain a HIV protein, called gp120, that fits into the CD-4 receptor.

''Right now, for a person with HIV, this doesn't mean anything,'' Young said.

But work is underway to see if the CD-4-bearing viruses zero in on HIV-infected human cells in the test tube, Young said.

DES MOINES, Iowa (DEC. 6) UPI - A civil liberties organization filed suit in U.S. District Court Thursday contending the Fairfield Daily Ledger violated the religious liberty rights of two journalists who joined an anti-abortion organization.

The suit was filed by the Rutherford Institute on behalf of Terri Lambertsen and John Kennedy, two editors who were fired from the 5,000- circulation newspaper in April after they met at their church and joined a newly formed group that later was called the Jefferson County Right to Life.

Ledger Publisher Byron Kimble and editor Jan Nierling said the firings were justified because the two editors violated the newspaper's policy on outside activities and threatened its reputation for objective reporting on the abortion issue.

Kimble declined further comment Thursday but said the newspaper's policy on outside activities continues in effect.

Lambertsen and Kennedy said their outside activities did not affect their objectivity. They also said their participation in the pro-life group stemmed from their Christian convictions and that the newspaper forced them to choose between their livelihood and their sincerely held religious beliefs.

They also said they weren't told about a policy restricting membership in outside organizations.

The lawsuit contends the newspaper violated the Constitution and the Civil Rights Act of 1964 by failing to reasonably accomodate the journalists' religious beliefs.

''Employers cannot demand as a condition of employment that one waive his or her constitutional rights to free exercise of religion, free association and free speech,'' said attorney Larry Crain, representing the Rutherford Institute, a non-profit organization specializing in defense of religious liberties.

''News workers do not have to lay aside their deepest convictions in order to adhere to a pretense of neutrality demanded by their employer,'' he said.

The suit seeks $250,000 in lost pay and benefits for the two fired journalists as well as attorneys' fees and court costs.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - White House chief of staff John Sununu all but said Thursday that President Bush would seek re-election in 1992 with Vice President Dan Quayle on the ticket.

''If you had a lot of money to bet, in my opinion, it could be a very good bet that the president and vice president will be running as a strong team,'' said the combative senior official in an interview with United Press International.

Although Bush has not announced that he will seek the Republican nomination for another four-year term, the president doused speculation last year that he would dump Quayle, saying the vice president would be on the GOP ticket.

Sununu said aides are researching President Ronald Reagan's re-election timetable and the pre-campaign moves of other GOP chief executives. ''He will announce at the appropriate time,'' Sununu said.

Reagan formally announced his intention to seek a second term roughly 10 months before the November 1984 election in which he trounced Vice President Walter Mondale.

The president has a full plate of issues when he returns to Washington on Saturday from a six-day swing through Latin America, including the Persian Gulf crisis and the troubled U.S. economy.

Sununu predicted that the downturn in the economy will last for three to six months, adding: ''We would like to do what we can to help it to be short.'' The chief of staff praised moves by the Federal Reserve to lower interest rates and to ease banking restrictions that make it easier to loan money.

On Iraq, Bush is expected to meet with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz within the next 10 days or so for meetings on the gulf crisis. The president has said that he will not negotiate with Aziz on alternatives to the United Nations's demand that Iraq withdraw its forces from Kuwait.

The president also will meet with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzak Shamir, perhaps on Tuesday, and newly elected British Prime Minister John Major at Camp David on Dec. 21 and 22.

Bush has delayed or canceled trips apparently to be on deck for further developments in the gulf and on the economy.

Bush still is expected to journey to Moscow early next year, perhaps in January, for the fourth summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev where the two leaders will sign the Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty. If signed, it would dramatically reduce superpower arsenals of nuclear weapons.

Sununu said the president's State of the Union address is still in the outline stage, although he acknowledged internal White House friction over the blueprint for Bush's speech.

''We are talking about preparing the president's agenda and one of the healthy signs is people are willing to argue, to debate the issues,'' he said.

In recent weeks, a squable over the direction of the administration's domestic agenda has emerged between Office of Management and Budget director Richard Darman and White House policy aide James Pinkerton, who has espoused redirecting government aid in the form of vouchers and tax credits to people in need instead of through traditional government programs.

''There are a lot of strong feelings on issues, but we've had these hot debates on clean air, trade,'' Sununu said. ''But once the president makes a decision everyone has supported it, and I'm sure that will happen here.''

The White House calls that report a ''hopeful sign,'' and Secretary of State Baker told Congress that it is ''a welcome and significant development.''

Western diplomats in the Middle East say Iraq still holds about two- thousand Western and Japanese hostages. The Iraqis had already agreed to allow about 33-hundred Soviet hostages to return home.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - The jury in the Central Park rape and beating trial struggled through its seventh day of deliberations Thursday reviewing testimony about hairs found on one defendant's clothing.

A pubic hair and two head hairs similar to that of the blonde jogger attacked April 19, 1989, were found on the clothing of Kevin Richardson, one of two black teenagers on trial.

Richardson, 16, and Kharey Wise, 18, are charged with 13 criminal counts stemming from the random crime spree by a gang of up to 30 youths.

Defense lawyers say the youths are innocent and were arrested only because they are black and the victim was white and well-to-do.

A head hair similar in color and texture to the jogger's was found on Richardson's underwear and on his jeans. A pubic hair similar to the woman's was found on his sweatshirt.

The hairs represent the only physical evidence linking any of the youths to the violence.

The prosecutor's most powerful tool is the videotaped confessions of Richardson and Wise. Richardson admits getting scratched by the woman, but claims he was trying to stop the attack. Wise admits ''playing with her leg'' while the rape was under way.

The five-man, seven woman panel also asked to hear the legal definition of sodomy and wanted to examine again clothing taken from the youths after their arrest.

They also asked to look at glossy photographs of the jogger's injuries and the crime scene off a jogging path near the park's 102nd Street Transverse.

The gang roamed the moonlit park, randoming robbing and beating joggers and bicyclists.

The most seriously injured victim was the 30-year-old investment banker who was gang raped, beaten into a coma and left for dead in a muddy gully.

Richardson is free on $25,000 bail. Wise has been held at Rikers Island on $50,000 bail since his arrest days after the attack.

CONCORD, NH (DEC. 6) UPI - Opponents of the $2.3 billion buyout of Public Service Co. of New Hampshire by Northeast Utilities of Connecticut told the state Supreme Court on Thursday that utility regulators failed to do their job when they approved the deal.

But lawyers for the utilities and the state replied that the takeover was fair to everyone and overturning it now would harm the company and the state's economy.

The acquisition, which was approved in December 1989 by a special session of the Legislature as well as the Public Utilities Commission, was aimed at bringing PSNH out of bankruptcy. The plan calls for seven annual rate hikes of 5.5 percent.

In oral arguments before the high court justices, Robert Backus, attorney for the Campaign for Ratepayers Rights, said that the legislation approving the PSNH takeover required that the PUC carefully review the plan to determine that the rates included in it were "just and reasonable."

Backus charged that the buyout plan reversed the process of setting utility rates, which is ordinarily done by determining the cost of producing the power and adding a reasonable rate of return.

"(The amount of needed revenue) was found, then the process was turned backwards to determine the rates," he said. "The task that the Legislature intended to be performed has not been done. The PUC was not intended to be a rubber stamp."

Backus said financial statements in the bankruptcy case listed the value of PSNH's 35.6 percent share of the Seabrook nuclear power plant at $700 million. But he said Northeast later tacked on an "acquisition premium" of $800 million to boost the value of the plant in the PUC rate case.

The acquisition was also challenged by Robert C. Richards, a PSNH stockholder, who argued that common stockholders did not receive enough value for their shares.

"Common stockholders were not represented (in the negotiations)," Richards said. "Management did not represent them and the creditors committee was dominated by holders of preferred stock."

Thomas Rath, the attorney for Northeast who played a major role in brokering the deal, said the Legislature and the PUC gave the proposal extensive review before approving it. He said regulators would have rejected it if it were not "reasonable and prudent."

"The PUC had all of its authority to say no, to reject the rates," Rath said. "The PUC accomplished the balancing act of setting just and reasonable rates."

Asst. Attorney General Harry Judd urged the justices to reject the appeal because starting over with a new proposal would create economic instability. "The economic health of the state is tied to the resolution of the bankruptcy of PSNH," Judd said. There was no immediate indication of when the justices would rule on the appeal.

PSNH filed for bankruptcy court protection on Jan. 28, 1988 because of the burden of its investment in Seabrook. The company is being operated by Northeast Utilities under a temporary management contract until the takeover is completed early next year.

MOSCOW (DEC. 6) UPI - Directors of more than 3,000 state-run enterprises met Thursday to press for continued central control of the economy and were assured by Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov that the state sector will remain a key in the Soviet system.

Some of those at the meeting lashed out at President Mikhail Gorbachev's perestroika reforms, blaming them for the economic crisis by destroying the state control system.

The directorships of state enterprises are generally limited to loyal communists and the group that filled a hall at the Kremlin seemed to reflect the conservative wing of the party.

A director from an enterprise in Estonia told Gorbachev, who attended the meeting with Ryzhkov and other top officials, that perestroika is leading the Soviet Union "not in a constructive but a destructive direction," according to the independent Interfax news agency.

"Today's soviets (government councils) are incompetent," said the director, identified only as Shepelevich. "They are leading the country to anarchy and chaos. Large-scale political struggle is under way. We are heading toward the disintegration of the country."

The harsh words were greeted by applause and murmurs of agreement from the directors, but Gorbachev retorted, "You are laying it on thick. What else shall we do? Do you mean we shall retreat?" Shepelevich suggested Gorbachev declare an "economic state of emergency" and impose a moratorium on economic sovereignty of Soviet republics through 1991.

Conservative communists blame food shortages and most of the country's other economic ills on the liberalization of the strong central command system, disregarding evidence that 70 years of communism crippled the economy before reforms were attempted.

The state enterprise directors echoed recent calls for the government to reimpose strong central control, with Anatoly Denisov, director of the Kirovochepetsk Chemical Mill, urging Gorbachev to "hold the helm tightly and rule firmly."

Gorbachev was expected to address the meeting Friday, but Ryzhkov assured the enterprise bosses that state-run businesses would continue to be a key part of the Soviet economy despite the moves toward a market system.

"It is evident now that an extremely negative role was played by hasty measures to dismantle the former system of management of the national economy without setting up new economic structures," said Ryzhkov, whose cautious approach to economic reform has led to calls for his ouster by supporters of a market system.

"I know that a number of leaders of big enterprises voice fears about the state sector of the economy," Ryzhkov said. "I must say that rushing from one extreme to another, from domineering state property to elimination of this sector, is inadmissable here. This would be a fatal mistake. In the near future and in the long run as well the state sector will cover a number of key spheres in the national economy."

AUSTIN, Texas (DEC. 6) UPI - Texas is one of the nation's most successful exporters, accounting for $38 billion in sales - almost 11 percent of all U.S. exports - in 1989, the state comptroller's office said Thursday.

Exports represented more than 11 percent of all goods and services produced by Texas last year, and export sales have grown 2 1/2 times faster than the overall gross state product since 1987, the agency said in its monthly newsletter, ''Fiscal Notes.''

''This economic importance translates into jobs,'' the publication said. ''Texas exports directly or indirectly supported nearly 15 percent of all Texas jobs in 1989.''

The largest share of exports come from manufacturing, particularly chemicals, oil field machinery and computer parts, followed by agricultural products.

Mexico, Canada and Japan are the state's largest foreign customers, but Texas products are purchased by almost every region in every country of the world, including China and the Soviet Union, the article said.

Mexico, the largest buyer of Texas goods, bought more than $11 billion worth of Texas products in 1989, just under 29 percent of all the state's exports.

The $38 billion in Texas products shipped to other countries last year represented 11 percent of all U.S. exports and ranked second only to California's $54 billion. Third-ranked New York had $27 billion in exports.

BOSTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Overfishing of such species as cod, haddock and flounder is endangering staples of both the New England diet and the region's economy, according to a report released Thursday.

The Massachusetts Offshore Groundfish Task Force, which released the report at a Boston news conference, urged steps to curb overfishing before the supply is wiped out.

''Massachusetts' offshore fishery represents one of the most unique and prolific life support systems in the world, and we manage it no better than Brazil manages its rain forests,'' said John DeVillars, state secretary of environmental affairs.

''We've overfished our waters for far too long, and if we keep it up, we stand the very real risk of economic catastrophe for our commercial fishing industry and the unforgiveable loss of a precious marine resource,'' he said.

DeVillars said quotas and stricter enforcement of fishing codes are needed to protect fish stock. He also said closing certain fishing grounds, especially during spawning seasons, would protect young fish.

Walter Bickford, commissioner of the Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, also stressed the need for stricter enforcement and policy changes.

''The abuses - both legal and illegal - which have led to overfishing must be stopped,'' Bickford said.

''Policies which have flooded our waters with new boats even as fish stocks plummeted must be changed. Enforcement to punish fishermen who violate minimum net mesh sizes - and thereby kill whole generations of critical juvenile stock - must be effective,'' he said.

The task force's findings included:

-Landings of groundfish have hit all-time lows. Haddock and redfish yield less than 10 percent of their potential.

-Consumers in Massachusetts are paying an estimated $19 million more per year than they would if fish stocks were properly maintained.

CANCUN, Mexico (DEC. 6) UPI - Natural gas will be the premier fuel of the decade for Texas and United States, winning an increasing market share of the nation's energy mix, a Texas energy industry expert said Thursday.

Speaking to a conference of indepdendent oil producing countries, James Nugent of the Texas Railroad Commission, ''Dynamic forces are at work in the U.S. and world economies that will reduce our oil consumption and increase use of our more plentiful natural gas reserves. ''

The Texas Railroad Commission regulates the energy industry in the state.

Nugent said although the U.S. is the leading market for the world's oil, expanding markets for natural gas in the Northeast, fuel-switching in industrial and electric utility markets, the search for alternate fuels in the transportation industry, and environmental initiatives like the Clean Air Act will work together to boost natural gas demand at the expense of imported oil.

He said as much as 570,000 barrels a day of residential, industrial and utility oil consumption could be replaced by natural gas as early as two years with much of that fuel-switching taking place in the Northeast.

He said 95 percent of the petroleum products imported into the U.S. last year were brought into New England and the Middle Atlantic states, making the region a prime gas market.

Nationwide, if crude oil prices in 1991 remain above $20 a barrel, estimates show some 40 billion cubic feet of natural gas will replace oil as a result of fuel-switching.

Other attractive markets will be opening as vehicle fleet owners expand their use of compressed natural gas as an alternate motor fuel. Nugent estimated that if all centrally-refueled fleet vehicles in the United States were run on compressed natural gas, U.S. oil imports would be reduced by some 140 million barrels a year.

''The recently-enacted Clean Air Act will also increase demand for clean-burning natural gas as industrial plants and electric utilities across the United States are required to reduce emissions,'' Nugent said.

If the 37 proposed pipeline projects now pending before the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission were expedited and approved, Nugent said, they would have the potential to displace up to 55,000 barrels a day of petroleum imports by the end of next year, and nearly 600,000 barrels a day by 1994.

''We have plentiful and secure natural gas supplies in the United States, over a 60-year supply at current production levels, and over a 100-year supply if we use advanced technologies and recovery efficiencies. It is only logical that U.S. energy policy exploit these secure, abundant reserves in the future '' he said.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - The American paper industry Thursday announced plans to expand the use of recycled paper in its production and said it expects to reach its goal of recovering 40 percent of the paper used in the United States by 1995.

The industry's main trade group, the American Paper Institute Inc., said at a news conference that it aims to increase its consumption of waste paper by 7.2 percent a year for the next three years, higher than the previously forecast 5.9 percent.

The group said consumption of waste paper at mills in the United States is now growing at a rate more than twice that of all other fiber sources. By 1993, the waste paper stream is expected to account for nearly 30 percent of all fiber consumed at domestic mills. About 32 percent of all paper consumed domestically is now recovered for reuse by the paper industry, the group said.

API President Red Cavaney, announcing the institute's annual Capacity Survey, said paper companies are investing in new recycling facilities which will increase the consumption of waste paper by about five million tons a year by 1993.

The survey found that in 1989, 60 percent of all primary manufacturing plant in the industry has been newly installed or significantly upgraded within the last ten years. The investment in new plant represents a capital investment of about $82 billion from 1980 to 1989, the survey said.

"In 1993, if the mills operate at full capacity, 27,148,000 tons of waste paper, or 33 percent more than in 1989, would be processed and used to manufacture new paper and paperboard," Caveney said in the report.

Responding to a question as to whether the industry would be able to use the increasing supply of waste paper coming from local recycling programs, Canavey said, "We think that over time we will be able to find a home for most of the waste paper."

He added that of 500 mills in the United States using waste paper, about 200 use that material only, while the remainder use some portion of it in their production. He said API is about to distribute a directory of mills using recycled paper to local governments and communities nationwide.

Cavaney said the industry is now projected to expand at about 2.9 percent a year, or closer to the historical rate of 2.4 percent than the 3.4 percent reported by producers last year.

The industry's newsprint capacity is expected to increase by an unusually large 8.4 percent this year as a result of four new paper machines, two of which are associated with waste paper drinking plants.

The new machines will bring the industry's capacity for newsprint production to 6,828,000 tons in 1990. Further addition of plant will result in newsprint capacity of 7,430,000 tons by 1993, or a 2.9 percent per-annum growth over three years.

At least 14 major producers are actively studying or have made commitments to install drinking plants in their mills, the institute said, and these are expected to increase the consumption of old newspapers by 808,000 tons, or almost 50 percent from 1990 to 1993.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - The lead singer of Blood, Sweat & Tears filed a $120 million lawsuit against Milli Vanilli on Thursday, claiming the duo stole his 1960s hit and turned it into their rap-infused song ''All or Nothing.''

''This lawsuit is about the song they never wrote on the album they never sang '' said Robert Marcus, a lawyer who filed the suit at state Supreme Court in Manhattan on behalf of singer David Clayton-Thomas.

Milli Vanilli were stripped of their Grammy award after it was revealed the duo never sang a word on their album, ''Girl You Know It's True.''

Now, Clayton-Thomas is suing them for copyright infringement.

He claims they stole the melody to his hit ''Spinning Wheel'' and used it to create ''All or Nothing,'' which is part of the controversial album.

The lawsuit names Milli Vanilli, their creator Frank Farian and EMI Music Publishing.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - The dollar dropped Thursday in New York currency trading on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's pledge to release all foreign hostages, which undermined dollar support coming from fears of Mideast war.

Saddam asked the rubber-stamp Iraqi National Assembly to "lift the ban on the travel of all foreigners" from Iraq, where about 6,000 were being held. Iraq's ambassador in Washington said captives could be home by Christmas. The U.S. administration welcomed the development and said it showed that its military and diplomatic pressure on Iraq was working.

The Iraqi announcement significantly increased financial market expectations that a peaceful solution might be found. That weakened the dollar, into which investors have fled for security at times of peak tensions.

In late New York trading, the dollar was at 1.4875 German marks, down from 1.4990 marks Wednesday, and at 132.20 Japanese yen, off from 133.55. The British pound moved up to $1.9400 compared with $1.9260.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2716 Swiss francs, off from 1.2785; 5.0500 French francs, down from 5.0750; and 1,121.75 Italian lire, off from 1,127.50.

"Mideast tensions have been supporting the dollar," said Harris Bank currency adviser and vice president Earl Johnson, "and if this continues I think you're going to start focusing on the U.S. economy, and that's bearish."

The dollar's decline did not match that of oil prices, though, as uncertainty lingered as to the final outcome of the Gulf crisis, which opened Aug. 2 with the Iraqi invasion and occupation of Kuwait, Johnson said.

The price of a barrel of oil, which stood at over $32 last week, Thursday was approaching $26 - a drop of more than 21 percent.

In Europe, the dollar closed mostly lower after Saddam's surprise promise to release the Western hostages. It also was hurt by persistent speculation that the German Bundesbank would raise its key interest rates.

Currency analyst Gwynn Hache of James Capel, an investment bank, pointed to a "knee-jerk reaction" to the Iraqi announcement. "The more the Gulf settles, the more the dollar loses safe-haven status," he said. Weak U.S. economic performance and expectations of a higher American jobless rate in date to be released Friday also weakened the dollar.

In Frankfurt, the dollar closed lower at 1.4875 German marks against 1.4990 at Wednesday's close. In Zurich, the dollar also closed lower at 1.2705 Swiss francs, vs. 1.2825 the previous day. The pound strengthened, fetching $1.9390 compared with $1.9225.

In Paris and Brussels, the dollar fell to 5.0540 French francs from 5.0730, and to 30.88 Belgian francs vs. 31.07. But it gained in Milan, to 1,125.50 Italian lire against 1,124.35.

Earlier, the dollar surged against the Japanese yen as a side-effect of heavy sales of the yen for the mark, closing at 134.07 yen vs. 133.42 yen.

Participants sold yen for dollars to finance purchases of the German mark on speculation that German interest rates will climb, said Junpei Ishi, a senior vice president of the Taiyo Kobe Mitsui Bank.

In Zurich, gold closed lower at $368.50 an ounce vs. $377.50. In London, the precious metal declined to $370 an ounce from $377.50.

Silver in Zurich closed unchanged at $4.15 an ounce. In London, silver closed lower at $4.12 an ounce from $4.17.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $370.75 an ounce, down from $373. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold contracts at $371.70 an ounce, also down from $374.20.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.145 an ounce, off from $4.155. Comex silver finished trading at $4.121 an ounce, a decline from $4.148.

(DEC. 6) UPI - The nation's major retailers Thursday reported weak November sales, continuing the pattern of recent months and raising fears the all-important Christmas shopping season could be the worst in more than a decade.

Stores again suffered from slumping consumer confidence brought on by higher gasoline and heating-oil prices, fear of war in the Middle East and a declining economy, analysts said.

Analysts said the figures point to a sharp fall in retail industry earnings for the Christmas period and a Christmas shopping season marked by heavy promotional selling as retailers attempt to move inventory.

"The November sales were extremely weak and even below our most conservative expectations," said Jeffrey Feiner, first vice president at Merrill Lynch. "There has been a deterioration since Thanksgiving that leads us to believe that this could be one of the most difficult Christmases in 15 years."

He said Merrill Lynch had been predicting flat earnings for the Christmas season but is now looking at a dropoff in earnings of between ten percent and 15 percent.

Among the nation's three largest retailers, Sears Merchandise Group, based in Chicago, reported a 2.4 percent fall in comparable-store sales, or sales from stores that have been open over a year. The group's overall revenues fell to $3.09 billion, 1.6 percent below November 1989 levels.

K mart Corp. of Troy, Mich., reported a 1.5 percent fall in same-store sales and an increase of 5.1 percent in overall sales to $2.87 billion. Wal-Mart Stores Inc. of Bentonville, Ark., recorded increases of seven percent in same-store sales and in overall sales to $3.22 billion.

But Wal-Mart, the stand-out performer of the biggest retailers in recent months, showed a marked drop in November's same-store sales growth compared with 1989, when it reported a 12 percent monthly increase.

Kurt Barnard, publisher of Retail Marketing Report, an industry newsletter, called the overall sales figures "terrible" but not surprising: "The figures are the result of concern about a recession and more money being spent for gasoline and home-heating oil, leaving people with less money to spend in the stores.

"This is a clear indication of where Christmas sales are going, and all we can do now is look forward hopefully to an improvement in the second half of next year."

Many retailers have a sense of resignation that Christmas is going to be "a great struggle, which will at best leave them with results that are going to be flat with last year," said Barnard.

But the significance of the November figures was downplayed by Alan Silverman, managing director of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. He said the shopping season would really begin in the last two weeks before Christmas but warned 1991 would be a "disaster" because of federal restriction of the money supply.

Among other major retailers, J.C. Penney of Dallas reported a 4.6 percent fall in same-store sales and a 3.1 percent decline in overall sales to $1.50 billion.

Minneapolis-based Dayton Hudson Corp. said total sales rose 37.4 percent to $1.55 billion. Same-store sales rose 21.4 percent, reflecting what the retailer said was a seven-day shift in the Christmas season between the 1990 and the 1989 accounting calendar.

Gap Inc., the San Francisco-based apparel retailer that has been one of the best performers of recent months, recorded a same-store sales gain of six percent and an overall sale increase of 18 percent to $152 million. The Limited Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, reported a four percent rise in same-store sales and a 24 percent increase in overall sales to $508.5 million.

New York-based Woolworth Corp. said its domestic same-store sales rose 1.3 percent while total sales, including its overseas operations, advanced 7.9 percent to $904 million.

Despite the gloom, Barnard predicted the retail environment would rebound by next fall as oil prices fall and healthy export and agricultural sectors continue to shore up the general economy. "All this will give rise to pent-up demand that will burst forth toward the third quarter," Barnard said.

But he cautioned that retailers could not expect a return to the "heady" days of the 1980s. "The consumer that emerges from the downturn will be a very thoughtful and basically a very frugal consumer," he said.

(DEC. 6) UPI - Secretary of State Baker says the word from Iraq that all foreign hostages may be freed is an indication that diplomatic and military pressure is working. Baker told Congress this morning that it is NO coincidence that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein called on his rubber-stamp parliament to free the hostages just one week after the U-N Security Council approved the use of force in the Persian Gulf.

President Bush was told of the new Iraqi developments aboard Air Force One on the way from Argentina to Chile on his South American tour. A spokesman termed the word from Iraq a ''hopeful sign.'' Across the nation, families of the American hostages in Iraq and Kuwait were elated at the news, though some maintained some cautious skepticism. Ingrid Pawlowski- who left her husband in hiding in Kuwait when she and her seven-year-old daughter fled- says ''I'm afraid to get too excited until it's really the real thing.''

Secretary of State Baker appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee and called the word from Iraq a ''welcome and significant development.'' But he also said officials would wait to see the hostages actually freed. And Baker warned that the development should NOT take attention away from the U-N Security Council resolutions that demand an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait and the restoration of the Kuwaiti government.

Secretary of State Baker says the United States is NOT backing any proposal for an international conference to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict. A draft resolution to that effect is circulating in the United Nations. It says there may be the need for such a meeting at a later, unspecified date, without any linkage to the current Persian Gulf crisis. Baker says the U-S position remains the same, that a properly structured conference at an appropriate time might be useful. But he says this is NOT the time.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir also downplays the idea of an international conference, saying the United States is well aware of his stand. Shamir has talked before of direct negotiations between Israel and its Arab neighbors. His comments come as he prepares to leave for talks in London with newly installed Prime Minister John Major. Shamir will later head to Washington for meetings with President Bush.

The 150-Million-dollar set of telescopes in orbit around the earth on the shuttle Columbia has NO computer for guidance. A second computer shut down this morning after the shuttle crew reported smelling a burning odor. The astronauts earlier had removed panels from the first computer that failed on Sunday. They found the vents clogged with lint and dust, something that may have caused it to overheat. Officials are NOT optimistic that either computer can be re-started. That could mean that controllers will have to see if they can aim the telescopes from the ground.

Officials in Manila say the U-S-Philippine negotiations on the future of U-S military bases could NOT break an impasse today over Filipino demands for criminal jurisdiction over the facilities. The technical- level groups that have been discussing the subject since November 29th reported the impassed today during a formal meeting of the two sides. One official says he does NOT believe an agreement can be reached before the last session on Friday. He says the negotiations will have to resume in January.

The creator of the comic strip ''Funky Winkerbean'' is in a funk of his own. Thomas Batiuk has filed suit in Ohio against the North America Syndicate, saying it is failing to promote his strip through merchandise and books. Batiuk was a junior high school art teacher in Elyria, Ohio, when he signed on with the syndicate to handle his strip in 1971. He wants changes in a contract that requires that he produce seven strips a week- forever.

CHICAGO (DEC. 6) UPI - Sears, Roebuck & Co. has told 20,000 managers their salaries will be frozen for at least a year, but analysts said Thursday the pay freeze is just the tip of a cost-cutting iceberg for the nation's No. 1 retailer.

Analysts said they expect Sears to announce major cost-cutting moves after the first of the year - aimed at paring expenses by $500 million to $1 billion.

But a Sears spokesman, asked Thursday about further cost-cutting plans, said: "At this point I'm not aware of any announcement ... or any such plans in the pipeline."

On Wednesday, Sears informed 20,000 salaried workers their 1991 salaries would be frozen at present levels. Those workers normally would have expected pay raises of five percent to seven percent.

"The salary freeze is part of the company's ongoing, company-wide cost-reduction program," the Sears spokesman said Thursday. "It involved all levels of Sears management, in its corporate offices and in the domestic merchandise group," he said. "The policy is effective beginning Jan. 1 for 12 months and would be reviewed as conditions warrant after that 12-month period."

But securities analysts said the pay freeze is just the beginning. "I still think there's probably a bigger announcement coming, probably early next year, which will entail a much bigger cost-cutting program," said Daniel Barry, a retail industry analyst at Kidder, Peabody & Co. in New York.

Analysts said elimination of furniture departments and the shutdown of unprofitable or marginal stores are among the possibilities open to Sears. Sears Chairman Edward Brennan took over direct responsibility for Sears Merchandise Group in July, and analysts predicted he would be aggressive about cutting costs.

"I think most people expected him to make changes, particularly in cost-cutting," said Barry. "The first major one was two months ago, when he consolidated the headquarters staff with the staff of the merchandise group, and there were some severence packages offered." "These pay cuts are really the second major move," he said, adding they are far from the last.

"There's just a general feeling that he's going to really cut costs. That's something investors have been arguing for years and he'll probably start doing that soon," Barry said.

Sears' stock has been regarded for some time on Wall Street as a laggard, in part because the retailer has given the appearance of being unconcerned about keeping costs in line.

In active trading on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday, Sears closed at $26.625 a share, up 37.5 cents on the day. The stock moved up by that same amount Wednesday.

"People have thrown out the figure of a half billion to a billion dollars to be taken out of the cost structure," Barry said, estimating the pay freeze would save Sears $25 million to $40 million - or four cents to seven cents a share.

N. Richard Nelson, retail analyst for the Chicago-based debt-rating firm Duff & Phelps Inc., estimated the pay freeze could save up to $50 million, but heagreed that bigger cost-cutting moves are expected. "The pay cut is indicative of some of the changes that are going to be occurring on the cost-cutting equation," said Nelson.

"I think they definitely needed to take a good hard look at the cost side of the equation. Given the economic environment, sales increases are really hard to come by, so you have to focus on costs. And by my calculations, Sears is over-expensed by $500 million to $1 billion," Nelson said.

"But there's a lot more to come," he said. "I think this is one of many announcements we're going to be seeing from Sears in terms of cost reduction."

PANAMA CITY, Panama (DEC. 6) UPI - Panama returned to normal Thursday following a failed police uprising that left one dead and five injured, the U.S. Southern Command said.

Stores reopened and a dawn-to-dusk curfew for parts of Panama City was lifted one day after about 100 rebel policemen led by former Police Chief Eduardo Herrera Hassan seized police headquarters.

At the request of President Guillermo Endara, about 500 U.S. troops surrounded the headquarters.

After a 10-hour standoff, the police tried to leave the building and walk to the National Assembly to demand better pay and conditions for the force. But the soldiers moved in and arrested Herrera and 36 rebel policemen.

Panamanian reporters blamed heavily armed U.S. troops for most of the casualties but the Southern Command was vague about the circumstances surrounding the violence.

Police Sgt. Filemon Montero Del Rosario was shot and killed Wednesday as rebels tried to leave police headquarters. The Southern Command said he wsas shot in the back by an identified assailant.

Two Panamanian news photographers were also injured as they covered the event. Panamanians newspapers said U.S. troops hit them with rifle butts. The Southern Command said one of the men fell off a wall and that the cause of injuries to the other photographer were ''unknown.''

''We denounce this new outrage and insult to the rights of journalists by invading troops,'' the Panamanian Journalists' Union said in a statement released Thursday.

One U.S. soldier was slightly injured.

Endara called the uprising a ''coup attempt'' and said the vast majority of the police force proved its loyalty to his government by ignoring Herrera's calls for support.

The 12,000-member police force - trained and equipped by the United States - was built from former military ruler Manuel Noriega's army after the U.S. invasion last December.

The force remains a source of controversy because of its ties to Noriega and several police officers have been accused of plotting coups.

Editorials in Panama City newspapers Thursday denounced the uprising but also pointed out weaknesses in the Endara government, which was installed during the invasion.

Economic problems continue to plague the Endara administration while his popularity in recent polls has dropped. On Tuesday, thousands of protesters marched through Panama City to protest public job lay-offs.

The police uprising comes just as U.S. officials were trying to wean the Endara government from U.S. security support by withdrawing the last 150 U.S. troops from Panama City police stations. U.S. troops have supported the police since the invasion.

''As long as the government has to fall back on U.S. troops, we will not be a sovereign country,'' said La Estrella de Panama newspaper.

A cartoon in the newspaper La Prensa showed Endara, backed by a giant U.S. soldier, announcing his pride over the limited role of loyal Panamanian police in putting down the uprising.

ROMULUS, Mich. (DEC. 6) UPI - A pilot who strayed into a collision which killed eight on a fog-bound runway was not alone in becoming confused while taxiing at Detroit Metropolitan Airport, a federal investigator said Thursday.

''We have had reports from some of the pilots who were interviewed who also said there had been confusion in the past, and not necessarily in low visibility conditions,'' said John Lauber, who headed a National Transportation Safety Board investigating Monday's crash.

Lauber, asked if the other pilots voiced safety concerns about the runways, said, ''all I can say is they have encountered situations where they were confused.''

''I think the fact that they've come forward with that information is significant,'' he said.

The pilot of the DC-9 involved in Monday's crash, Capt. William Lovelace said he never heard an exchange between the control tower and James Schifferns, his first officer on Northwest Flight 1482, in which Schifferns said the jet may have taken a wrong turn onto the runway.

Had he known, Lovelace told investigators, he would have ''gone for the weeds '' maneuvering his DC-9 off the runway.

Eight people were killed and 24 injured Monday afternoon when the DC- 9 bound for Pittsburgh was clipped by Northwest Flight 299, a Memphis- bound Boeing 727-200 that was already lifting into takeoff on Runway 3 Center.

Investigators steered a DC-9 Thursday over the route followed by Lovelace to document the path, the lighting and signs that might have been seen from the cockpit, Lauber said.

While Monday's weather conditions could not be recreated, Lauber said it was possible the exercise might be repeated when similar conditions existed. He also said it also could be done in simulators.

In his last news briefing before returning to Washington, Lauber said a final report might be a year away but recommendations to enhance safety at the airport could be made at any time, he said.

''The public should know we are not going to wait a year if we find anything '' Lauber said.

He said a decision on a public hearing would be up to the full NTSB board.

''All I can say is that typically in an accident such as this which raises a number of significant issues would want to hold a public hearing,'' he said.

NTSB spokesman Brent Bahler said the coroner's final report listed two deaths from smoke inhalation, two from smoke and/or trauma and four from trauma. Originally, authorities theorized most died from smoke inhalation,

Lauber said the 70-member NTSB team spent Wednesday conducting closed-door interviews, reviewing records and studying the wrecked airliners. Most of the team left Thursday afternoon, and Lauber said he thought the on-site investigation would be completed sometime during the weekend.

A supervisor in the control tower, who was unable to see the runways because of the fog, yelled ''Stop all aircraft! Stop all aircraft!'' but it was too late to avoid the collision, Lauber said.

Lauber said it is not clear why Lovelace, 52, was not talking to the tower himself and why he didn't hear Schifferns' exchange, and whether Schifferns had time to tell him to steer off the runway.

It also is not certain that Lovelace, making his first unsupervised flight since returining from a five-year medical leave, could have steered out of harm's way had he realized where Schifferns, 43, said the plane was.

Lauber said controllers didn't order the 727-200 to abort its takeoff once they learned the DC-9 had strayed onto the active runway because they thought the larger jet already was in the air.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (DEC. 6) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney asked NATO allies Thursday for additional sealift and airlift support for the massive U.S. troop deployment in the Persian Gulf.

Cheney, at a meeting of NATO defense ministers, also asked ''generically'' for equipment relating to ''combat capability'' but did not recite a detailed wish list, said a senior member of the U.S. delegation.

''He did not come here to go door-to-door, minister-to-minister, with a list tailored for each country,'' the U.S. official said.

The defense ministers are in Brussels for a two-day joint meeting of NATO's Nuclear Planning Group and Defense Planning Committee to chart defense strategy for post-Cold War Europe. The meeting ends at midday Friday.

The gulf is considered ''out of area'' for NATO military action under its 1949 charter but U.S. officials have used NATO meetings to request other help.

Britain, which has sent large numbers of ground troops to the gulf, also asked NATO allies for assistance.

''It includes ships. It includes aircraft. It includes medical. It includes some ammunition,'' British Defense Secretary Tom King said of Britain's requests.

''Also, chemical protection equipment, and training, and money,'' King told reporters. ''For instance, Hungary is sending chemical protection equipment and personnel.''

At their landmark London summit last July, NATO leaders called for a strategic overhaul, including reduction in the size and readiness of standing forces.

Many NATO countries are anxious to reap a ''peace dividend'' from the ending of four decades of East-West tension.

''The budgetary pressures are extremely strong,'' said the senior U. S. official at NATO, who expects the alliance's review to be completed by the middle of 1991.

''To take much longer than that will not respond either to the situation we find on the ground in Europe, which has changed, or to the fiscal pressures from many capitals,'' he said.

Cheney told other defense ministers that NATO still faced four basic risks - the residual Soviet threat, instability in Eastern Europe, proliferation of chemical and biological weapons, and disruption of vital resources.

Interim decisions on NATO's new defense structure were expected from the meeting of defense ministers and a Dec. 17-18 meeting of NATO foreign ministers, also in Brussels.

With events in Europe changing so fast, the strategic review puts NATO ''in the difficult situation of trying to paint a moving train,'' said a senior alliance official.

A crucial part of NATO's plans are to replace layered divisions of national forces with highly mobile multinational units, which requires a new command structure.

NATO is also overhauling its obsolete nuclear strategy, which was based for decades on the doctrines of ''forward defense'' and ''flexible response,'' calling for the use of nuclear weapons if necessary to repel an overwhelming conventional attack. At the London summit, NATO said nuclear weapons would only be used as a ''last resort.''

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - Stocks closed mixed in the heaviest trading in months Thursday after an early rally sparked by Iraq's hostage release offer was derailed by renewed fears about the health of the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which surged 30.70 Wednesday, fell 7.92 to close at 2602.48, managing to finish just above the 2600 level.

Among broader market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index lost 0.40 to 179.71. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 0.85 to 329.07. The price of an average share slid seven cents.

Advances led declines 867-691 among the 2,017 issues crossing the Big Board tape. Volume totaled 256,380,000 shares, compared with 205,820,000 traded Wednesday, the heaviest turnover since 292,360,000 shares changed hands on Aug. 3 in the wake of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Stocks rallied from the opening after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein asked the National Assembly to release all foreign hostages held in Iraq and occupied Kuwait.

The Dow jumped almost 35 points and oil prices tumbled on the news, falling as low as $25.25 a barrel before rebounding a bit. The Bush administration said the development indicated that "diplomatic and military pressure" against Iraq was working.

It remained unclear exactly when the remaining 6,000 Western and Japanese hostages would be allowed to leave, but Iraq's ambassador to the United States Mohamed al-Mashat, said the captives could be home by Christmas.

In the afternoon, however, with anxiety about the crisis in the Mideast waning the focus shifted to the state of the economy and the outlook for corporate earnings after rumors that International Business Machines Corp., known on Wall Street as Big Blue, had advised an analyst to lower an earnings estimate for the company. IBM denied the rumors, but the stock remained sharply lower and in fact extended its losses.

The Dow turned lower and the broad market weakened but stayed in the plus column. "When we came in this morning, we rallied on the good news out of the Mideast," said Jeff Kaminsky, head of institutional sales trading at Mabon, Nugent & Co.

"But at midday, the report that an analyst who had been carrying one of the lower earnings estimates for IBM for next year and the rumor that IBM had endorsed that low estimate, in effect telling Wall Street the number will be disappointing, caused us to sell off," he said.

Kaminsky said IBM's status as a bellwether stock forced the market to focus on the reason IBM may have disappointing earnings. "That reason is the economy is in a recession," he said. "The magnitude is not yet known. So while tensions seem to be falling off in the Mideast, we've still got an economy in some trouble."

On the trading floor, Citicorp was the most active issue, retreating 7/8 to 14 7/8 after the rally in financial issues over the past two sessions.

NCR followed, surging 6 1/8 to 92 3/4. NCR late Wednesday rejected AT&T's $90-a-share takeover bid. AT&T followed by launching a hostile bid for NCR Thursday and NCR said it would consider the bid at a board meeting in ten days. AT&T, the fifth most active issue, was unchanged at 30 1/8. First Chicago was third, off 1/8 to 21.

Two retailers were heavily traded. The Limited rose 3/8 to 16 7/8 after reporting a 24 percent sales rise in November. Toys 'R' Us was unchanged at 22 7/8, stable after its slide Wednesday.

Among the other blue chips, IBM plunged 3 1/8 to 111 1/2 in heavy trading, General Electric gained 1/2 to 57 1/2, and Philip Morris rose 3/8 to 50 1/8 but USX, which owns Marathon Oil, was down 7/8 to 30 1/2 as oil prices tumbled on the improved prospects for peace in the Mideast.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 308,928,600 shares, compared with 252,680,520 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices rose in heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index added 0.94 to close at 306.35. Advances led declines, 324-261, among the 848 issues traded. The price of an average share rose three cents. Composite volume totaled 21,709,600 shares vs. 16,116,750 traded Wednesday. B.A.T. Industries led the Amex issues, down 5/16 to 11 3/16.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index rose 1.42 to 372.29.

CAIRO, Egypt (DEC. 6) UPI - Kuwaiti Oil Minister Rashid Salim Al Ameeri said Thursday the Iraqi invasion of his country had led to the collapse of the emirate's economic infrastructure, particularly in the oil sector.

The Kuwaiti minister said his exiled government will demand compensation for the losses it suffered as a result of the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion.

''It is clear the economic infrastructure of Kuwait has completely collapsed as a result of the aggression, especially the oil sector,'' Ameeri said.

He did not say how much compensation would be demanded from Iraq.

''It is difficult to estimate the amount of damages inflicted to Kuwait, but no doubt we will demand compensation according to U.N. resolutions,'' the Kuwaiti oil minister said.

Ameeri arrived in the Egptian capital Thursday evening to take part in the ministerial meeting of the Kuwait-based Organization of Arab Petroluem Exporting Countries scheduled for Saturday.

Ameeri said his government has coped with shortages in oil supplies to its overseas refineries after Iraq invaded the emirate and halted oil exports.

Kuwait has three major oil refineries in Europe in addition to 5,000 gasoline stations.

He said the Kuwaiti oil sector is fortunate in that many oil officials were abroad when the emirate was invaded and were able to find alternative sources of oil for the refineries from Saudi Arabia and other Arab states belonging to the Gulf Cooperation Council.

NEW YORK (DEC. 6) UPI - Assets of the nation's 533 money-market mutual funds rose by $1.02 billion to $424.89 billion in the week ended Wednesday, according to the Investment Company Institute, a research arm of the U.S. mutual fund industry.

Two other financial reporting organizations said average yields on money-market mutual funds were unchanged or lower, while deposit and lending rates at U.S. savings and loan institutions were mainly lower.

The Investment Company Institute said Thursday that broker-dealer funds' assets rose by $147.3 million to $166.53 billion, while assets of general purpose funds increased by $303.8 million to $150.32 billion and those of institutional funds gained by $570.8 million to $108.04 billion.

Although money-market yields continued to ease moderately in the latest week, assets kept on building, said Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist of the institute.

"So far, neither rising stock and bond prices nor the anticipation of future declines in short-term interest rates had a discernible inhibiting effect on flows of assets into money-market funds," Dreyer said.

The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money-market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said that average seven-day simple yields were unchanged at 7.27 percent but that 30-day simple yields declined to 7.31 percent from 7.34 percent the previous week. The average maturity of fund portfolios rose to 52 days from 50.

The Bank Rate Monitor, North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money-market deposit accounts, 5.82 percent, down from 5.83 percent; Super-Now accounts, 4.95 percent, unchanged; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.31 percent, down from 7.33 percent; 1-year CDs, 7.37 percent, off from 7.39 percent; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.46 percent, down from 7.50 percent; and five-year CDs, 7.70 percent, down from 7.72 percent.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.04 percent, up from 8.03 percent the previous week.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.42 percent from 9.48 percent. The average rate for a 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage eased to 9.75 percent from 9.79 percent.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was at 12.25 percent, unchanged from the previous week.

ROANOKE, Va. (DEC. 6) UPI - Attorneys who claim Virginia's blanket policy of collecting DNA samples from convicted felons is unconstitutional take their case to federal court Friday in the first known challenge to DNA testing in the country.

Although 12 states across the nation take blood samples for a computerized DNA ''fingerprint'' bank, only Virginia tests all felons no matter what their crime. Eight of the 11 other states limit their testing to sex offenders.

The states are hoping that having the DNA characteristics of felons on file could help them solve future cases in the same way fingerprints are used now.

DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, is the basic genetic material found in each cell. Each person is believed to have a unique pattern, with the exception of identical twins.

The all-encompassing nature of Virginia's law is part of the constitutional challenge being mounted by law students and professors at the University of Virginia's Post-Conviction Assistance Program. But their arguments, scheduled for federal court in Lynchburg Friday, go beyond that.

The civil lawsuit was originally filed on behalf of six Tazewell Correctional Camp inmates but U.S. District Judge James Turk ordered its expansion into a class action suit.

In an October hearing at which he denied the plaintiffs a temporary restraining order, Turk said the lawsuit addressed important fundamental constitutional questions and was not ''a frivolous matter at all.''

The lawsuit claims the forced taking of blood constitutes unreasonable search and seizure and is an invasion of privacy.

The plaintiffs also argue the practice illegally changes the rules of parole for inmates convicted before July 1 - the date the law took effect - because it requires them to give a blood sample before they can be released.

The state contends giving the blood is a minor, routine matter that is little more bother than being fingerprinted. State attorneys also argue the high rescidivism rate of felons supports the potential usefulness of the practice.

The state also points out that the law was written to make sure officials would use the samples for nothing more than determining identifying characteristics of a person's DNA.

Harold Krent, the supervising law professor on the case, said Thursday that although judges rarely rule straight from the bench in this type of case, ''there is some reason to believe that might happen'' because Turk indicated he wanted to move the case as quickly as possible.

Turk also said in October he expected to see the case move up the ladder of appeals no matter what he rules.

HAYWARD, Calif. (DEC. 6) UPI - Medical equipment manufacturer Nellcor Inc. said Thursday it would lay off 160 employees at the end of the year and move manufacturing operations from its Hayward headquarter to Chula Vista, Calif.

The layoffs, which represent about 12 percent of Nellcor's workforce, will mostly affect workers at the Hayward, Calif., headquarters, Nellcor said.

The company will transfer production and factory service operations to its manufacturing facility in Chula Vista starting in January. The move is part of an overall restructuring required by tighter economic conditions, Nellcor said.

''U.S. hospitals, which make up Nellcor's primary customer group, are facing compelling pressures to control costs, and these pressures have increased in recent months in light of more difficult general economic conditions'' said C. Raymond Larkin, Jr., president and chief executive officer.

The layoffs and the move to Chula Vista will result in a $1.5 million charge against earnings in the quarter ending Jan. 6, Nellcor said. The company is building a new manufacturing plant in Chula Vista and will move all manufacturing operations there by April.

(DEC. 6) UPI - American Telephone & Telegraph Co. launched its $6 billion cash tender offer for NCR Corp. Thursday, saying NCR directors' rebuff of efforts to forge a friendly merger left no alternative but to appeal directly to shareholders.

The $90-a-share cash offer prompted two major debt-rating services - New York-based Moody's Investors Service and Chicago-based Duff & Phelps Inc. - to put AT&T debt on watch lists, warning of possible adverse affects of debt associated with the takeover. Moody's also put NCR debt instruments on its watch list.

But Bob Kavner, former AT&T chief financial officer and currently group executive in charge of the company's computer systems group, said both AT&T and NCR would be strengthened by the merger.

''I assure you that when you combine these two companies, the underlying equity is as solid as a company could be,'' Kavner told United Press International in a telephone interview.

''NCR's debt ratio is in the low 20s and, in combining the two businesses, the total debt ratio of AT&T is very manageable. The interest coverage, which is the key measurement here, is very manageable,'' he added.

''If we do the acquisition with cash, and we do borrow, these will not be long-term debt. They will not be subordinated debentures. They will be short term instruments that would then later be converted into the blended capital structure we are targeting - an appropriate blend between equity and long-term debt,'' he said.

AT&T began wooing Dayton, Ohio-based NCR - the nation's fifth largest computer maker - last month. It originally proposed a stock-for-stock merger deal at $85 a share. That offer was quickly rejected by NCR directors as ''grossly inadequate.''

AT&T responded with a $90 a share stock-for-stock offer, and turned up the heat on NCR by going public with the bid Sunday.

But NCR directors, meeting by telephone Wednesday, said that too was far short of the mark, and said they would consider further negotiation only if the AT&T upped its bid to $125.

The board also adopted amendments to NCR's shareholder rights plan, strengthening the anti-takeover provisions to make any hostile bid for the company costly for an unwelcome suitor such as AT&T.

But New York-based AT&T sidestepped the board and went directly to NCR stockholders with a tender offer of $90 a share - in cash rather than stock.

An NCR spokesman said directors would meet in the next 10 days to draft a recommendation to stockholders on the tender offer, but he said there was nothing to indicate the cash offer would be any more acceptable than the stock-for-stock proposal unanimously rejected at Wednesday's meeting.

But AT&T said NCR was being unreasonable.

''What (the NCR directors) have said, in effect, is that the company is for sale,'' Kavner said. ''What we have is a disagreement on the price. That $125 comes out of the blue, somewhere from the yonder, and it seems quite unrealistic and surprising.''

''We started out with an original offer of $85 a share in stock and they told us that wasn't enough,'' Kavner said. ''We asked how much they wanted and they wouldn't say. So we went on good faith and said we'll go to $90 (in stock) and they said, 'No, it's still the wrong number. Try again,''' Kavner said.

''And we said, 'We're not going to bid against ourselves,''' Kavner said. ''So yesterday they came up with a number for the first time - $125. Not negotiable. And then they wanted us to sign a three-year standstill agreement to see the supporting documents,'' he said.

He said he doubted that, if AT&T's financial advisers did review the documents they would find they supported the $125 price.

''And where would we be if we signed a three-year standstill agreement?'' Kavner asked. ''It was just an untenable situation.''

HOUSTON (DEC. 6) UPI - A federal judge has issued a temporary restraining order freezing the assets of FMF Corp. in response to a Securities and Exchange suit alleging the company violated federal securities laws when it lured investors by claiming it operated low-level nuclear waste disposal facilities in Africa.

The SEC suit marked the first time the government agency had exercised new powers by seeking $500,000 in fines for securities violations and had cooperated with the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in an enforcement action.

The SEC, which announced Thursday it had filed the suit in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Texas, said the matter was referred to the commission by the NCR.

U.S. District Judge Sim Lake Wedneseday scheduled a Dec. 17 hearing after SEC attorneys filed the lawsuit seeking to permanently bar FMF Corp. and its parent, BFMF Corp., from selling interests in what the company claims are waste disposal operations in Equatorial Guinea in west Africa.

The suit contends FMF raised more than $350,000 from investors by using false or misleading statements.

SEC attorneys requested that FMF pay a $500,000 penalty for the alleged violations of the Securities Act of 1933 and the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

''We believe (this company) was a sham to get money from these investors,'' said SEC attorney Catherine M. Shea.

In addition to BFMF Corp., the suit also named Abraham A. Greenspan, chairman, vice president and general counsel of FMF; B.F. Winborn, incorporator and president of FMF; and Charles W. Brandes, FMF's vice president of operations.

The SEC alleges in its suit the defendants told investors the United States and Guinea had a treaty under which Guinea agreed to accept low- level radioactive waste when no such treaty exists and that Guinea had awarded FMF a concession for dumping the waste even though the African nation has not allowed any party to dispose of radioactive waste within its borders.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Meetings orchestrated by S&L operator Charles Keating between the Keating Five senators and federal regulators triggered a ''completely unprecedented and grossly improper'' halt in a probe of Keating's troubled thrift, one of the regulators told a Senate panel Thursday.

William Black, general counsel of the western regional office of the Office of Thrift Supervision and a former official of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, said he believed April 1987 meetings between the regulators and senators chilled the bank board's later scrutiny of Keating's Lincoln Savings and Loan of Irvine, Calif.

Black made his statements during the 13th day of hearings before the ethics committee, which is trying to decide whether Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., John Glenn, D-Ohio, John McCain, R- Ariz., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich., improperly pressured regulators to benefit Keating.

Lincoln collapsed in April 1989 in the biggest failure in the nation's savings and loan scandal, costing taxpayers about $2 billion to bail out.

Black told the committee that pressure stemming from April 2 and April 9, 1987 meetings between the senators and regulators led to later orders under bank board Chairman M. Danny Wall to halt the examination of Lincoln by federal regulators from San Francisco, who on May 1 had recommended that the government seize the thrift. Black attended the April 9 meeting.

''This is the most likely explanation for this completely unprecedented and grossly improper action of halting the exam,'' Black testified.

Black said Keating set up the meetings to intimidate the regulators.

Black admitted he had no direct knowledge that specific actions taken by senators caused the light treatment of Lincoln, including the halting of the probe and reassigning the examination to new investigators.

Sen. Trent Lott, R-Miss., a committee member, added, ''I don't know if we could ever tie together political pressure to bank board decisions.''

Lawyers representing the senators sought to rough up Black during his second day of testimony. Thomas Green, Riegle's lawyer, questioned Black's ''guts'' at one point.

Following the pointed questioning from the senators' lawyers, committee special counsel Robert Bennett asked Black if he or any other bank board officials involved in ''a conspiracy of any kind to entrap five United States senators'' during the meetings. ''No,'' Black responded.

''I think we (the regulators in the meetings) were the best friends the senators had,'' Black said. ''We were trying to tell them, 'This is not the institution you want to be going to bat for ... this is not the place you want to touch, not with a 10-foot pole, not with a 20-foot pole.' We were trying to convince those senators so that instead of having them as opponents that they would, if anything, be with us.''

Keating, who has been indicted on state securities and fraud charges in California and is the target of a continuing federal grand jury investigation, contributed $1.3 million to the senators' political campaings and causes.

Meanwhile, in connection with its decision to grant limited immunity to James Grogan, a close Keating associate, Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the committee's vice chairman, said the panel had also issued subpoenas for ''very important'' documents from Grogan.

Those documents had been denied when Grogan became one of seven Keating associates to invoke their constitutional right against self- incrimination in refusing to testify before the panel.

Rudman said the committee will see the documents on Dec. 12, will question Grogan in a closed session on Dec. 17, then will decide whether to put Grogan on the witness stand during a public session.

AVON, Mass. (DEC. 6) UPI - Child World Inc.'s chairman, Dennis H. Barron, has resigned ''to pursue other interests,'' the majority stockholder of the troubled toy chain disclosed Thursday.

A spokesman for CNC Holding Corp., which owns 82 percent of the toy chain, declined to say when or why Barron left the post; but a source at Child World said the former chairman had been forced out at a CNC board of directors meeting on Monday.

Barron also gave up the position of president and chief operating officer of Cole National Corp., a Cleveland-based retail subsidiary of CNC Holding, the spokesman said.

The 182-store chain also has launched an aggressive discounting policy that threatens to dampen profits for all major sellers of toys, including K mart Inc. and Wal-Mart Inc. during the Christmas selling seasons when the overwhelming majority of toy sales are made.

Child World said earlier this week that it would stop paying its bills for six weeks to be able to pay cash for shipments of new toys to replenish its inventory for Christmas.

The company also acknowledged it may be forced to file for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the federal bankruptcy laws, which would allow the company to continue to operate while keeping creditors at bay.

(DEC. 6) UPI - One goal of the huge build-up in Operation Desert Shield appears to have been achieved with the word today that Iraq will release all foreign hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait. But there also is word that as that carrot is extended, Iraq is putting a bigger stick into place in the Persian Gulf.

Secretary of State Baker says the State Department was notified by acting U-S Ambassador Joseph Wilson in Baghdad that the Iraqi Foreign Ministry officially notified him that the hostages will be released. And the Iraqi ambassador to the United States said that officials in Baghdad were working to get the hostages home to their families in time for Christmas.

President Bush welcomed the decision to release the hostages but said- quoting here- ''it will NOT change my thinking'' on the need for Iraq to comply fully with U-N resolutions calling for an unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and restoration of the Kuwaiti government.

PARIS (DEC. 6) UPI - Automobiles Peugeot said Thursday it will sell 50 Peugeot J5 electric vans to the China Light and Power Co. in Hong Kong.

A letter of intent, which would make Peugeot the world's first exporter of electric vehicles, was co-signed Monday in Hong Kong during the 10th International Symposium on Electric Vehicles, the French carmaker said.

Peugeot has been involved in electric vehicle research and development for over 20 years. Earlier this year, the Electric Company of France took delivery of 55 electric-powered Peugeots, including 25 J5 vans.

The Peugeot J5 van is equipped with a 28-cell battery that last an average of 31,000 miles or through 600 charging cycles. It has a top speed of just over 43 mph and a range of 43 to 62 miles.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 6) UPI - Farmers will be paid $1.74 billion in crop support payments for this year's wheat, oat and barley crops with the lion's share - $1.7 billion - going to wheat growers, the government said Thursday.

This year's wheat crop of 2.74 billion bushels was the third largest on record and has contributed to a slump in market prices. The barley crop totaled 419 million bushels, up slightly from last year, while the oat harvest, at 358 million bushels, was down slightly.

The Agriculture Department said the payments, which will be made in cash, would cover the subsidies due for low prices and payments due under the so-called Zero-92 program. In it, farmers who idle all of the land normally devoted to a specific crop are guaranteed 92 percent of their projected subsidy payment.

Wheat growers will receive subsidies calculated at the rate of 92 cents a bushel - the amount due after subtracting advance payments made months ago and an additional reduction required by balanced-budget law from the five-month average price of $2.72 a bushel.

For barley, the payment rate is 11.6 cents a bushel and for oats, 31. 8 cents a bushel.

In all, barley farmers will receive about $35 million and oat farmers $8 million.

Additional payments will be made next summer if market prices are particularly low.

Producers who enrolled in the Zero-92 program were guaranteed a minimum payment rate of 90 cents a bushel on wheat and 26 cents a bushel for barley. There was no guaranteed payment for oats.

SOFIA, Bulgaria (DEC. 6) UPI - President Zhelyu Zhelev is expected to name Bulgaria's new prime minister on Friday, the president's spokesman, Valentin Stoyanov, said in a radio broadcast Thursday.

Among those considered most likely to be named prime minister are Ivan Pushkarov, an independent economist who is supported by the Union of Democratic Forces, the main opposition group, and Dimitar Ludjev, an adviser to Zhelev, sources in Sofia said.

Bulgaria's socialist-led government of Andrei Loukanov fell last Thursday after several days of strikes by independent trade unions who protested price hikes and the slow pace of democratic and free-market reform.

Representatives of the Bulgarian Socialist Party, the former communists, and UDF met again Thursday to try to agree on a political program for the new government, said Mikhail Nedelchev, UDF's spokesman. He said the agreement would set ''the conditions by which the BSP must abide so that it can prove its readiness for a peaceful transition.''

Sources said the agreement may outlaw some forms of public protest, such as the occupation of government and party offices, as well as strikes like the one that brought down Loukanov's government. The agreement may also provide for the archives of the former communist party to be handed over to the state and made available for public consultation.

Parliamentary deputies also circulated a petition Thursday calling for the resignation of the parliament's chairman, Nikolai Todorov.

Ginyo Ganev, the parliament's vice-chairman and leader of the National Union, had earlier declined his nomination as prime minister and seems likely to be elected as the parliamentary chairman.

Meanwhile, Petar Beron officially resigned Thursday as UDF's chairman and as chairman of UDF's parliamentary group following reports earlier this week that he had worked for Bulgaria's secret police since 1968.

In remarks reprinted in Thursday's edition of Duma, the socialist party newspaper, Beron admitted that he had been an informer for the Bulgarian secret police but he said he had only done the minimum amount of reporting required from him as a prominent scientist.

Asked whether the secret police had wanted information on Eco- Glasnost, the opposition group active before the ousting of Bugaria's former communist leader, Todor Zhivkov in November 1989, Beron said, ''Of course they did. They wanted it every day.''

Beron was a member of Eco-Glasnost.

''Our position is that this case is more an accusation against the communist totalitarian system than against UDF,'' Nedelchev said.

ATLANTIC CITY, NJ (DEC. 6) UPI - Mike Tyson, who has fought one round since losing the heavyweight title 10 months ago, pronounced himself in the best shape of his life for his non-title bout Saturday night against Alex Stewart.

The top-ranked heavyweight contender, Tyson will face Stewart after a 10-week postponement because of a cut the former champion suffered above his right eye requiring 48 stitches.

The cut appears fully healed and the more pressing issue is whether Tyson's psyche has recouped from the February title loss to James ''Buster'' Douglas in Tokyo that left his left eye and aura of invincibility battered.

''I'm just ready,'' Tyson, wearing a baggy grey sweatshirt, said Thursday at the final news conference for the 10-round bout at Atlantic City Convention Center. ''I want to pay my respect to my sparring partners to get me into the great shape I'm in.''

Tyson weighed in at 217 3-4 pounds. He weighed 220 1-2 when he lost the title to Douglas and his muscle definition approaches the from he had when he fought Michael Spinks in his most impressive display in June of 1988. Stewart weighed 218, five pounds less than when he fought Jamie Howe in his last bout. He also weighed 223 when he fought current champion Evander Holyfield. In one fight in between Holyfield and Howe, he weighed 228 against Mark Young.

Getting back in the ring has been no easy task for Tyson, who fought as often as three times a month before winning the title. Since winning his first title at age 20 against Trevor Berbick in 1986, Tyson fought four times in 1987 and three in 1988. He fourth twice in 1989 and twice in 1990.

In two years beginning with that fight, Tyson made $48 million. In two years since, which have featured splits with manager Bill Cayton and former wife Robin Givens, Tyson has made $18 million.

Since losing the title, Tyson knocked out Henry Tillman in the first round June 16 to put his record at 38-1 with 34 knockouts.

''I'm fighting as much as possible,'' Tyson said. ''Yeah, I miss it but what can you do?''

The latest lapse also derailed Stewart, who had been primed for a fight his deceased manager, Mike Jones, sought relentlessly. Jones died of complications from bone marrow cancer June 28, days after signing his prized fighter to a $535,000 payday. Tyson is believed to be making from $2.5 million to $5 million.

''The postponement hit him very badly,'' Stewart's manager, Jim Fennell, said. ''He sat there sobbing. I can tell you now he's completely refocused. It's a different type of focus.

''Initially, the reaction was gonna win this for Mike (Jones). Now, the dedication is not exclusive to Mike.''

Stewart, whose highest ranking has been fourth, is 26-1 with 26 knockouts. He took a lot of heat for not fighting credible opponents until he lost in eight rounds to current champion Holyfield.

''I thank Mike (Tyson) for the opportunity to beat him,'' Stewart said. ''I'm ready to take a major step, like Mike did.

''He used to go into each fight totally prepared. He was 100 percent, no distractions. But he does other things now. He's not focused just on boxing.''

Such as?

''Whatever he does at discos,'' Stewart said.

Tyson is the first to say ''I do other things now,'' always bringing up his infant son, D'Amato, named for his late trainer Cus D'Amato.

''It's just not fun right now because he's 7 months,'' Tyson said of fatherhood. ''I say come on, come on chase me. Nothing. I don't have patience for that. When he's 2 or 3 years old, we'll go hang out. Then you show him off and he says, 'Hi, daddy.' Other than just holding him, looking at him, you wonder 'God, will you hurry up and talk.'''

Tyson said he has no plans to remarry.

''Not anytime soon,'' he said. ''I'm content with myself. Being happy is just a feeling, like when you're hungry or thirsty. When people say you are happy, it's just a word someone gave you to describe a feeling. When I decided to accomplish my goals, I gave up all means of even thinking about being happy. You can no longer perform when you're in that state of mind. ... I just want to fight.''

Home Box Office will televise the fight, the last in a long exclusive deal between Tyson and the cable network.

Leading the eight-fight undercard is a bout between Julio Cesar Chavez, 72-0 with 59 knockouts, and top contender Kyung-Duk Ahn, 29-1, 13 KOs for Chavez's two 140-pound titles.

Also on the card: Donovan ''Razor'' Ruddock vs. Mike Rouse (heavyweights), Simon Brown vs. Ozzie O'Neal (welterweights) and former Olympic champion Tyrell Biggs vs. Rodolfo Marin (heavyweights).

MANAGUA, NICARAGUA (DEC. 6) UPI - Former Sandinista army officials Thursday threatened force against the government if the proposed military budget is not approved by the congress.

A statement released by the Carlos Nunez Tellez Association, a group of laid-off army officers named after a late Sandinista soldier, said they would defend ''the military budget ... and the institution of our glorious Popular Sandinista Army using all measures within our reach.''

The budget proposal sets aside $78.6 million for the armed forces, which ruling party legislators say is too much for a peace-time budget.

The size of the Nicaraguan army is being reduced to 28,000 members by the end of the year, from 80,000 in February.

Congressmen of the National Opposition Union say the new army is too small to justify the amount of money sought by Sandinistas. They say the money should be directed instead to health and education.

President Violeta Chamorro has embarked on an economic austerity program in the country to try to reduce the $13 million monthly deficit. Thousands of public employees have been laid off since Chamorro assumed power last April.

The layoffs and army reductions resulted in two major Sandinista strikes and caused conflicts over land claims between Sandinistas and former Contra rebels on the northern and southern borders.

Reductions in the Sandinista army were among the major demands by the Contras before they disarmed in June.

''We have patriotically accepted our discharge as a way to contribute to the economic improvement and democratic process of our nation,'' the association's statement said.

The group said UNO legislators want to destroy an army that ''has defended national soverignty and guaranteed constitutional order.''

Sandinista legislators have backed army demands that the National Assembly approve the $78.6 million for the military.

''We will not tolerate any reduction in the military budget,'' said Sergio Ramirez, leader of Sandinista legislators in the National Assembly.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 6) UPI - Hughes Communications International Inc. said Thursday that it has been named to build two television and radio broadcast spacecraft on behalf of a western European group.

Hughes Communications, a unit of General Motors Corp.'s Hughes Aircraft Co. subsidiary, said that Societe Europeenne des Satellites of Luxembourg had selected it to build the spacecraft, dubbed Astra 1C and 1D.

The value of the contract, which does not include launch services, was not disclosed. But Hughes won a similar Australian contract worth about $500 million two years ago to build two satellites, although that pact included launching, a Hughes spokesman said.

Astra 1C will be built in El Segundo, Calif., by Hughes' space and communications group, the company said.

Hughes said the Astra satellites are similar in appearance to its 11 other HS 601 satellites, with a cube-shaped body and two horizontal, three-panel solar array wings.

Astra 1C will be launched aboard an Ariane 4 rocket during the first quarter of 1993, while Astra 1D is scheduled for a 1994 launch.

KANSAS CITY, MO (DEC. 6) UPI - Farmland Industries, a producer-owned cooperative, is becoming a fully integrated food production system and should derive half its sales from food marketing by 1995, President James L. Rainey said Thursday.

Also Thursday, Farmland said 1990 net income fell to $58 million from $110 million in 1989. Sales were $3.4 billion, up nearly $400 million.

Rainey spoke at the cooperative's annual meeting, which attracted about 4,000 delegates from 19 states.

''Clearly, the profits are on the marketing side of the food chain,'' Rainey said, citing statistics that showed the foodbasket value increased 65 percent from 1972 to 1988, while the value of farm products decreased 4 percent.

''We must move faster in seizing opportunities on the food side of the chain '' Rainey said, noting an increased role as a food company would require considerable time and money.

''In the process, we will continue to be carried by our fertilizer and other core businesses,'' he said. ''It is essential that we continue to grow our input businesses as we make the transition to a food company.''

Farmland's potential cannot be realized until the co-op eliminates internal competition for increasingly narrow margins, he said.

The answer, Rainey continued, lies in encouraging the consolidation of member associations to reduce redundancy and competition that ultimately hurts Farmland's farmer-owners.

''We must convince these skeptical producers that our system has the strategy and skills to become a major force in the food chain,'' he said.

In 1990, Farmland's food marketing division reported a $5.5 million loss. The co-op said the loss reflected the inability to pass along the high cost of hogs to finished products.

CAIRO (DEC. 6) UPI - Kuwaiti Oil Minister Rashid Salim Al Ameeri said Thursday the Iraqi invasion of his country led to the collapse of the emirate's economic infrastructure, particularly in the oil sector.

The Kuwaiti minister, speaking to reporters in Cairo, also said his exiled government would demand compensation for the losses it suffered as a result of the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion.

''It is clear the economic infrastructure of Kuwait has completely collapsed as a result of the (Iraqi) aggression, especially the oil sector,'' Ameeri said.

He did not say how much compensation would be demanded from Iraq.

''It is difficult to estimate the amount of damages inflicted to Kuwait, but no doubt we will demand compensation according to U.N. resolutions,'' the Kuwaiti oil minister said.

Ameeri arrived in the Egptian capital Thursday evening to take part in the ministerial meeting of the Kuwait-based Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries scheduled for Saturday.

Ameeri said his government had managed to cope with shortages in oil supplies to its overseas refineries after Iraq invaded the emirate and halted oil exports.

Kuwait has three major oil refineries in Europe in addition to some 5,000 gasoline stations.

He said the Kuwaiti oil sector was fortunate that many oil officials were abroad when the emirate was invaded and were able to find alternative sources of oil for the refineries from Saudi Arabia and other Arab states belonging to the Gulf Cooperation Council.

CARACAS, Venezuela (DEC. 6) UPI - President Carlos Andres Perez called for U.S. support Thursday for the creation of a strategic oil reserve and other measures to make the Western Hemisphere energy independent.

''We cannot just lay down and dream and watch the events under our eyes,'' said Perez, who is expected to discuss the issue on Friday when he meets with President Bush in Caracas.

Citing the dramatic impact Iraq's invasion of Kuwait has had on the price of oil and the world's economy, Perez said that ''we cannot just sleep with our oil, waiting for events we are not prepared for.''

Caracas is the fifth and final stop of Bush's tour of South America to promote free trade and a larger role for Latin America in U.S. foreign policy.

Venezuela has the largest oil reserves in the Americas and has asked the United States for increased investment to help boost its production capabilities. Perez also has proposed that the hemispheric reserve be created in Venezuela with financial support from the United States.

Venezuela maintains that its oil is the safest, most reliable in the world and that the United States would best serve its own interests by placing more reliance in its own neighbors rather than relying on Persian Gulf oil.

After the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, Venezuela quickly responded to U. S. requests for boosts in oil production to cover the loss of supplies from the Middle East.

Washington has expressed limited interest in a strategic oil reserve in Venezuela and has refused to consider funding the project.

Perez left no doubt that he intended to press the point with Bush.

Asked what would top the agenda of his meetings with Bush, he replied, ''Oil, of course; (President Bush's) 'initiative for the Americas,' the Gulf crisis, Central America, a number of things.''

Perez, in a speech to an oil symposium at the Caracas Hilton hotel, also promoted new measures within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to stabilize the price of world oil.

''Clearly (as a member of OPEC) it is our first obligation to maintain the price of oil, but it is also in our best interest to stabilize the price of oil,'' Perez said. ''Unfortunately, nothing has come of this proposal.''

Perez, a long-time backer of Venezuela's membership in OPEC, repeated his praise for the organization, saying, ''Those who think the violent crisis in the Gulf will destroy OPEC are wrong.''

He also advised against U.S. aggression against Iraq. ''An act of force would be a mistake, especially at this time of detente,'' he said.

Earlier Thursday, thousands of students staged an anti-U.S. rally at the Central University of Venezuela that ended in a violent clash with police.

Witnesses said at least 20 students were injured, many of them suffering gunshot wounds. Some reports said police were shooting from helicopters.

A spokesman for the Metropolitan Police said two police were wounded but would not acknowledge that any students were shot.

Witnesses told United Press International the protesters were led by leftist student groups protesting U.S. imperialism. Signs reading ''Bush go home'' were hung from points around the university and other locations in the capital.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 6) UPI - Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan said Thursday law enforcement authorities have warned him to beef up his personal security in the face of recent death threats.

Farrakhan, the controversial head of the U.S. black Muslim community, also disclosed that his scheduled appearance Saturday at a rally at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum ''will probably be the last time I will be in Los Angeles for quite a few years.''

He refused to say more, but promised to explain his announcement during the rally.

Farrakhan also refused to provide details about the alleged death threats, but said his staff received warnings from police and the FBI. He did not disclose which police agency had contacted his staff.

''There have been so many inconsistencies in the police and the FBI reports to us we cannot make a definitive statement on these alleged threats,'' he told reporters.

However, earlier this week it was reported that the names of Farrakhan and nine other prominent Islamic leaders and supporters of Palestinian rights were on a list of potential assassination targets of radicals out to avenge the slaying of ultraconservative Jewish leader Meir Kahane.

Kahane, leader of the militant Kach Party and founder of the Jewish Defense League, was slain Nov. 5 while attending a Zionist organization meeting in New York.

Farrakhan said he personally did not receive any of the threats but said law enforcement authorities have ''intercepted a communication'' that allegedly contained a threat against him.

''They wanted us to beef up our security,'' he said. ''We are taking this seriously.''

The FBI was not available for comment.

The fiery preacher, whose primary message is one urging black Americans to be be self reliant, always travels under heavy protection.

On Thursday, the belongings of reporters and camera crews were searched before entering they were allowed into Farrakhan's news conference. Farrakhan arrived surrounded by eight bodyguards who stood by him throughout his meeting with reporters.

''We are not foolish. We have lived long enough in this society to know our words are not loved by all,'' he said. ''So we are taking adequate precautions.''

Farrakhan's speech Saturday has been billed as ''Save the Family Day. '' He said the high rate of divorce in the United States is an indication of ''a society in decline'' and encouraged a return to the traditional family unit in which men are the providers and women are the homemakers.

(DEC. 6) UPI - The Voice of America is telling U-S citizens in Iraq and Kuwait to stay put, and sit tight... that preparations are under way to evacuate them as soon as possible. Iraq says it is releasing all foreign nationals.

President Bush and Secretary of State Baker welcomed the news but said it should NOT draw attention from the fact that Iraq still must withdraw from Kuwait and restore the Kuwaiti government.

The Iraqi ambassador to the United States says the only thing that can delay the departure of the hostages is the availability of flights. He says Iraq officials are working to ensure that the hostages are back home for Christmas.

The U-N Security Council postponed a session that had been scheduled for today to discuss a resolution for a Mideast peace conference.

The B-B-C reported earlier today that the United States had made a major change in its policy and was calling for a Mideast peace conference. U-S officials immediately denied the report.

(DEC. 6) UPI - The Pentagon says Iraq is moving another 30-thousand troops into the Persian Gulf region, most of them from the Iranian border area. At the same time, it appears as if the foreign nationals held hostage in Iraq and Kuwait will be allowed to return home. Iraq formally notified the United States of the decision to release the hostage, and President Bush and Secretary of State Baker both welcomed the move.

The Iraqi ambassador to the United States says the hostages could leave Iraq within three days, if there are enough flights out of Baghdad to handle them. The State Department revised its estimate of how many hostages there are today saying about six-thousand Western and Japanese citizens are in Iraq and Kuwait. That's up from about two-thousand in the earlier estimate.

President Bush and Secretary of State Baker both underscored the U-S position that the hostage release is NOT enough... that Iraq still must honor the U-N Security Council resolutions that demand a withdrawal from Kuwait and restoration of the Kuwaiti government.

A former Panamanian military leader and co-defendant of Manuel Noriega pleaded guilty to a conspiracy charge today. And Lieutenant Colonel Luis del Cid admitted today that he delivered hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of cocaine bribes to Noriega, the deposed strongman who faces federal charges at a trial that is set for January 28th. In exchange for del Cid's testimony, the government dropped five counts against him in a 1988 indictment.

More problems for Milli Vanilli. David Clayton-Thomas... lead singer of Blood, Sweat and Tears... filed a 120-Million-dollar lawsuit in New York City today against the lip-synching pop duo. Clayton-Thomas alleges that Milli Vanilli stole the melody of his 1960's hit ''Spinning Wheel'' and turned it into their rap-infused song ''All or Nothing.'' A lawyer for Clayton-Thomas says the case is ''about the song they never wrote on the album they never sang.''

(DEC. 6) UPI - The United States welcomes Iraq's announced intention to release all hostages in Iraq and Kuwait. But President Bush and Secretary of State Baker both say the move will NOT soften U-S insistance that Iraq withdraw unconditionally from Kuwait. As expected, the nation's major retailers today reported weak November sales. The report continues the pattern of recent months and raises fears the all-important Christmas shopping season could be the worst in more than a decade. A New York jury deliberated for a seventh day today without reaching a verdict in the Central Park rape trial of two teen-agers. It came in the trial of 16-year-old Kevin Richardson and 18-year-old Kharey Wise, accused of gang raping and beating into a coma a woman jogger in the park on April 19th, 1989.

(DEC. 6) UPI - World leaders today expressed cautious optimism over Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's decision to release foreign hostages. President Bush welcomed it but said he still wants Saddam out of Kuwait. British Prime Minister John Major said- quoting- ''It would be tremendous if all the hostages were home with their families by Christmas.'' However, Major was quick to add- ''They shouldn't be hostages in the first place and Saddam Hussein has a good deal more to do than just release the hostages.'' France called the announcement ''a good sign.''

Baghdad Radio reports that Saddam decided to release the hostages in Iraq and Kuwait after an appeal from his few Arab supporters and Democratic members of Congress in the United States. Saddam had earlier promised to free all foreign hostages in batches between Christmas Day and March 25th, if he was NOT attacked by the U-S-led multi-national forces in the Persian Gulf region.

WEST LAFAYETTE, IN (DEC. 6) UPI - Jim Colletto, offensive coordinator at Ohio State, was named the new football coach at Purdue on Thursday, just one week after Fred Akers quit the job under pressure.

Colletto interviewed for the job Wednesday with a Purdue search committee and was a unanimous choice. Colletto and Ball State Coach Paul Schudel were the only two candidates to meet with the panel.

''Jim Colletto is an excellent coach. The time is right for his second opportunity at a head coaching position,'' said George King, Purdue's athletic director. ''I've made dozens of phone calls to some of the top football people in the country. Above and beyond everyone else, he has the ability to get the job done.''

Colletto, a former fullback at UCLA, leading the Bruins in rushing in 1963 and serving as team captain two years later. He served as an assistant coach at UCLA, Brown, Xavier and Pacific before being named coach at California State-Fullerton in 1975. He compiled a 17-38-1 record in four seasons there.

Colletto returned to UCLA for 1980 and 1981, then served three years as Purdue's offensive coordinator under Leon Burtnett. Since his departure in 1984 after a Peach Bowl appearance, the Boilermakers have not had six straight losing seasons.

Since leaving Purdue, Colletto has spent six years as an assistant to John Cooper, serving under him on three bowl teams at Arizona State and for the past three years at Ohio State. Colletto, 46, interviewed for the Purdue job after Burtnett was fired in 1986 and was a finalist for the Arizona State job when Cooper departed, a position that went instead to defensive coordinator Larry Marmie.

King assembled a search committee last week following Akers' decision to leave

Purdue. The group was charged to find a new coach with a Purdue background that could rebuild the Boilermakers, who were 12-31-1 under Akers. The program was also beset the past four years by poor academics, off-field discipline problems and declining attendance.

''Jim has a real feel about the academic welfare of our players,'' King said. ''We need to have a person who will recruit to the strengths of Purdue. If that means recruiting engineering students, that means recruiting engineering students. Jim Colletto's philosophy will help us in that direction.''

MOVIES

''Henry V'' - Kenneth Branagh takes us ''once more unto the breach'' in an excellent rendition of Shakespeare's classic tale of the young 15th century soldier-king struggling to win his subjects' loyalty and in so doing, conquers France against overwhelming odds. Whether Shakespeare is your cup of tea or not, this is heady brew for anyone savoring fine acting, topped, of course, by Branagh's bravura performance that inevitably compares the 28-year-old newcomer with Laurence Olivier. Branagh also directed (he won Oscar nominations for acting and directing) and adapted the play for the screen, departing considerably from Olivier's famed 1945 portrayal. This Henry is a different Henry, a boyish almost anti-hero Henry, thoughtful, often moody as Hamlet, less patriotic than usually depicted, maybe a little unscrupulous, at times unsure but when he goes to war certain he's on God's quest. With a strong company of actors including Derek Jacobi, Paul Scofield and Ian Holm and acutely atmospheric staging, especially the mud-slogged battle at Agincourt, it's a worthy challenge for the senses. 1989. 138 minutes. CBS/Fox Video. Rated PG. $89.98.

"Ghost Dad" - On his way home, widower Elliott Hopper (Bill Cosby) gets taken on a wild taxi ride that winds up at the bottom of the river. Now, he's among the dearly departed, but he refuses to depart, dearly or otherwise, until he can help the three children he must leave behind. So, caught somewhere between the here and the hereafter, Elliott gets a ghost of a chance to tie up some loose ends and if he concentrates hard enough, he can be seen as well as heard. The kids seem to take it all in stride. After watching him disappear, reappear and walk through walls, his younger daughter asks, ''Can I take you to show-and-tell?'' Director Sidney Poitier's farce is strictly a Cosby show, transparent as ol' dad in the daylight but likely in the right spirit for Cosby fans. 1990. 84 minutes. MCA/Universal Home Video. Rated PG. No suggested retail price.

''Gremlins 2: The New Batch'' - Those pesky pranksters are back, this time taking over a Manhattan skycraper in a generally clever, witty sequel to the 1984 hit about adorable furballs that turn into devilish slimeballs. Gizmo, the utterly cute Mogwai that caused so much havoc in the original, lands in a corporate monolith run by a Donald Trump-like tycoon and eventually is joined by a whole band of floppy-eared demons that lay waste to everything in a frenetic, comical assault. It's like a live-action cartoon, a ''Die Hard'' with puppets, played for laughs, entertainment aimed at kids but which the whole family can appreciate. 1990. 107 minutes. Warner Home Video. Rated PG-13. $92.95

''High Desert Kill'' - Three friends go on a hunting expedition in the New Mexico high country only to discover that they are the ones being hunted, stalked by a sinister, alien force. Eventually, as the grim purpose becomes evident, they have to make a stand. No ''Predator'' but an engaging if uneven little film with some surprises. Marc Singer, Anthony Geary and Micah Grant play the menaced trio, joined by Chuck Connors as a grizzled mountain man. 1990. 93 minutes. MCA/Universal Home Video. Rated PG-13. $79.95

''El Diablo'' - When one of his students is kidnapped by a notorious outlaw called El Diablo, school teacher Billy Ray Smith (Anthony Edwards) sets out to track down the bandits and rescue the youngster. Since he can't ride or shoot very well, Billy Ray hires a gunslinger (Louis Gossett Jr.) and his motley gang to even things up. A tall tale of a Western, made for cable. 1990. 107 minutes. HBO Video. $89.99

''Too Hot To Handle'' - Clark Gable and Walter Pidgeon are rival newsreel photographers competing for the hand of pilot Myrna Loy in this fast-paced action-comedy, reminiscent at times of the old Saturday afternoon cliffhanger serials. Another jewel of the past making its home video debut. 1938. 108 minutes. MGM/UA Home Video. $19.98.

''Kiss Of Death'' - A taut crime drama from the '40s that may have aged a bit, but is still a humdinger in its home video debut. Richard Widmark totally steals the show in his Oscar-nominated film debut as Tommy Udo, a giggling, psychopathic killer, so mean he shoves an old lady in a wheelchair down a flight of stairs. Victor Mature is the ex-con who gets in a load of trouble when he squeals on Tommy. 1947. 99 minutes. CBS/Fox Video. $39.98.

''Panic In The Streets'' - A slain man is found to be infected with bubonic plague, touching off an all-out search for the killer to thwart a deadly epidemic in Elia Kazan's keen atmospheric thriller. Richard Widmark plays the New Orleans medical examiner who's heading the manhunt for Jack Palance, in one of his first screen roles, and partner Zero Mostel. 1950. 96 minutes. CBS/Fox Video. $39.98.

PARIS (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Pasquale Pistorio, president and chief executive officer of SGS-Thomson Microelectronics, has announced his decision to make a significant change in the group's management structure.

He has created an "Office of the General Manager" in order to better respond to the demands of a corporation which has almost doubled its sales since it was formed in 1987, while providing SGS-Thomson with greater management depth, flexibility and continuity in a period when the market is becoming even more complex and competitive.

Concurrently, the internal organization has been reshaped to conform better to current market realities. Five divisional P&L organizations cover all the major sectors of microelectronics: Dedicated Products, Discrete and Standard Circuits, Memories, Programmable Products and Subsystems & RF Devices.

Daniel Queyssac has been appointed by Pistorio to the newly created post of chief operating officer, reporting to him and sharing with him the responsibilities of the Office of the General Manager.

Queyssac, who returns to his native France after 12 years in the United States brings with him a proven record of success firstly with Motorola, where he held several top managerial positions and, for the last 10 years, as president of the U.S. subsidiaries of SGS and then SGS-Thomson Microelectronics.

Under his direction the American company grew from a $13 million sales entity to become a complete operating unit with state-of-the-art production facilities, advanced R&D and a nationwide marketing and sales network. During the same period sales and market penetration consistently increased to well over $300 million in 1989.

Commenting on the appointment, Pasquale Pistorio said: "Daniel, with his long experience in the American market, coupled with his European background, was the natural choice for the new appointment.

"I look forward to working more closely with him at a central corporate level where his knowledge of the United States will undoubtedly give extra breadth and vision to our traditionally international outlook."

SGS-Thomson Microelectronics designs and manufactures a wide range of semiconductor components including discretes: power transistors (LF and RF), SCRs/triacs, protection devices; MOS LSI: microprocessor, semicustom, graphic and memory devices; standard logic; linear and dedicated analog/digital ICs for automotive, telecommunications, datacommunication, computer, and military applications. SAN JOSE, CA (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Water conservation results for November 1990 show a 4.85 percent increase in overall usage as compared with 1987 levels, reports San Jose Water Co.

This is the first time this year that conservation results showed an increase over 1987 levels. The goal for mandatory water rationing is to reduce water usage by 20 percent from 1987 levels.

''The weather has been the major contributor to the disappointing conservation results,'' stated Sharon Whaley, public relations specialist. ''With very little rain and continued warm weather, outdoor irrigation has continued.''

In November 1987, there was 1.6 inches of rain as compared with 0.24 inches and warm weather this November. During most winter months, the rain replaces the need for outdoor irrigation. Unfortunately, most irrigation systems remain on due to lack of rainfall and water use remains relatively high.

San Jose Water Co. serves 202,000 customers in San Jose, Campbell, Cupertino, Los Gatos, Monte Sereno and Saratoga.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, CA (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Genentech Inc. (NYSE: GNE) Friday reached an agreement to settle all stockholder suits brought against the company in 1988 as federal securities class actions which were consolidated under the jurisdiction of the U.S. District Court for Northern California.

Under the agreement, the claims against Genentech and the other defendants will be dismissed without any admission or presumption of any liability or wrongdoing.

The total settlement will be $29.0 million, with Genentech's insurance carrier contributing a substantial portion of that amount. Genentech previously established adequate reserves to cover its portion of the settlement and, therefore, it will have no material impact on fourth quarter earnings.

The complaint was brought against the company, certain of its officers and directors. The complaint contains allegations of violations of securities laws that purportedly artificially inflated the price of Genentech's stock during a portion of the years 1987 and 1988.

SAN MATEO, CALIF. (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - The board of directors of California Jockey Club (ASE:CJ) has declared a semi-annual cash dividend of 40 cents per share for the second half of the year, payable Dec. 27, 1990, to shareholders of record on Dec. 17, 1990.

The dividend represents a 5-cents-per-share increase over the 35-cent dividend per share paid in the second half of 1989. The dividend for the full year 1990 will amount to 75 cents per share, an increase of 15 cents per share, or 25 percent.

''Our increased dividend reflects the improving financial performance of California Jockey Club and Bay Meadows Operating Co.,'' said James P. Conn, president of Bay Meadows.

Conn noted that average daily handle for the 1990-1991 meet continued to reflect a strong increase over last year's meet. ''Through Dec. 2, or for the first 75 days of our racing meet, total average Northern California daily handle was up 10 percent over the same period of last year's meet,'' he noted.

California Jockey Club is one of the nation's three publicly traded real estate investment trusts whose primary asset is a horse racing track. Its shares are traded on a paired basis with Bay Meadows Operating Co., which operates Bay Meadows Racetrack on the San Francisco peninsula.

As a real estate investment trust, California Jockey is required to pay at least 95 percent of its taxable income to shareholders in the form of a dividend.

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Apple Computer Inc. introduced Friday HyperCard IIGS, a user-focused toolkit of information management software for the Apple IIGS personal computer.

The new product will allow Apple IIGS users to create their own custom software and personalize the way they store, explore and present information. The announcement was made at the AppleFest Conference and Exposition being held Friday and Saturday at the Long Beach Convention Center.

''We're very excited about HyperCard IIGS,'' said Ralph Russo, director of the Apple II Business Unit at Apple. ''Because our Apple II customers are extremely important to us, we continue to look for ways to provide product enhancements that increase the value of their investment in our technology. We believe HyperCard IIGS does just that.'' Features and Benefits

Like the original HyperCard for the Macintosh personal computer, HyperCard IIGS functions much like a set of index cards. Users store information in documents called stacks, which are made up of individual units called cards. Cards can contain text, graphics, scanned images, and even sound. Buttons on the cards can be used to link cards and stacks, and much more.

HyperCard IIGS supports multiple media by letting users work with information in virtually any form, including text, graphics, video, sound and animation. It also takes full advantage of the advanced 16-color graphics capabilities of the Apple IIGS.

To allow customers to begin immediately using the software, the program comes with a large collection of ready-to-use stacks -- plus templates and card designs to help individuals create their own stacks.

The program's scripting language, HyperTalk, provides buttons, cards, stacks and utilities such as debugging tools to facilitate creation of sophisticated programs and speed the preparation and performance of user-designed HyperCard stacks.

With HyperCard IIGS, Apple IIGS customers have the full functionality of Macintosh HyperCard version 1.2.5 -- plus specific enhancements to improve performance and take advantage of the color capabilities built into the Apple IIGS. They can also enjoy the additional benefit of accessing the many stacks that already exist for the Macintosh once developers convert them for the Apple IIGS.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - With its strong international presence and strategic financial and marketing plans in place, Alcan is well equipped to weather the turbulence of the coming year, enroute to further growth in the '90s.

That was the message David Morton, Alcan Aluminium Limited chairman and chief executive officer, shared with reporters this morning at the company's annual press briefing in New York.

He briefed the media on the outlook for the world aluminum industry and the steps Alcan is taking to sustain growth and financial performance in the face of global economic uncertainties.

To respond to the expected short term economic difficulties, Alcan is reducing capital expenditures from a level of $1.2 billion in 1990 to under $900 million in 1991 without sacrificing the key strategic investments such as rolling mill expansions in the United States and Europe, as well as a hydroelectric construction project in British Columbia.

Alcan's working capital has been lowered substantially through inventory reductions. Current inventories of about 10 weeks supply are at the lowest level ever.

As business conditions tighten, Alcan will also benefit from the effects of its cost reduction programs, Morton commented. ''These efforts are ongoing, with a goal next year of taking an additional $200 million out of the total cost stream from raw materials to fabricating and shipping,'' he said. ''No stones are being left unturned as we attack our operating and overhead costs '' he added.

In the United States, the second and third quarters produced good growth, following a weak period in the first three months of the year. In the final quarter, business is still holding up reasonably well, although there are some soft spots.''

Alcan Rolled Products Co. operates eight plants in North America (six in the United States and two in Canada), including its 40 percent share in Logan Aluminum in Russelville, Ky. The company ships about 600,000 metric tons and accounts for approximately 40 percent of Alcan's worldwide shipments of fabricated products.

With its $1.7 billion in sales, Alcan Rolled Products ranks the equivalent of a Fortune 300 Industrial Company. The Cleveland-based unit has approximately 15 percent to 16 percent of the North American aluminum flat rolled market. Aluminum sheet and foil from Alcan serve the beverage can, building and construction, automotive and other varied markets.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Niagara Mohawk Power Corp. Friday reported earnings of $152.9 million, or $1.12 per share, for the ten months ended Oct. 31.

Earnings for the same period one year ago were $105.6 million, or 78 cents per share.

For the 12 months ended Oct. 31, earnings were $152.9 million, or $1.12 per share. For the 12 months one year ago, earnings were $89 million, or 66 cents per share.

Earnings for both 1990 reporting periods were higher due to the effect of an August 1989 regulatory agreement that provides both for expense deferrals tied to the company's self-assessment program, and for recovery of replacement power costs incurred because of the Nine Mile Unit One outage.

These recoveries are subject to full or partial refundings pending the outcome of the current Public Service Commission (PSC) Unit One prudence investigation. On Nov. 8, the company reached an agreement, subject to approval by the PSC, on a temporary annual rate increase to become effective Jan. 1, 1991.

For the purpose of establishing these temporary rates, an assumption was made to include a liability to customers of approximately $136 million for Nine Mile Unit One and Unit Two replacement power costs. This assumption is subject to the results of permanent rate negotiations and the resolution of replacement power cost issues associated with Unit One.

The company is unable to predict the magnitude of any disallowance which may ultimately be imposed as part of the permanent rate negotiations.

Included in earnings for the first ten months of 1990 are $113.1 million, or 55 cents per share, of expense deferrals permitted by the agreement. Earnings for the 12 months ended Oct. 31, include $115.8 million, or 56 cents per share of deferrals.

These and future deferrals in connection with the August 1989 agreement, net of cash surcharges equivalent to available transmission and resale gross margin, are expected to be recovered from ratepayers over a three-year period beginning January 1991.

DAYTON, OH (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - In a December 5 letter to AT&T Chairman Robert E. Allen, NCR Chairman Chuck Exley said, "NCR is prepared to commence negotiations if AT&T offers to pay not less than $125 per NCR share." Exley has responded to questions regarding that statement.

Q. Does the fact that the Board set $125 per share as the "full and fair value" for NCR shares mean that NCR is for sale?

A. No. In the name of rationality and in recognition of its fiduciary responsibility to NCR shareholders, the Board felt obligated to set a "full value" price for shares. It would be preposterous for us to say there is no price we would accept.

The fact that the Board set a price does not mean that we want to sell the company - the company is not for sale. We want AT&T to go away and leave us alone so that we can get on with our new product programs, which represent a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize the computer industry. If we are to realize NCR's extraordinary potential, we must be free to dedicate all our energies and resources to the task at hand.

Q. Some analysts are saying that this is part of the negotiation process.

A. This is not a negotiating tactic. The "full and fair value" has been set by the Board at $125 per share - not $124.50 or anything less.

At the same time the Board has said that if AT&T cannot offer NCR shareholders this fair value, NCR will use every means at its disposal to protect NCR shareholders and other stakeholders against this hostile takeover attempt.

Q. AT&T has called NCR's full value price "outrageous."

A. In my letter of December 5, I told Mr. Allen that we will provide AT&T with non-public information concerning NCR to support that price if, and only if, AT&T enters into a customary confidentiality and standstill agreement providing appropriate assurance that if AT&T refuses to go forward at that price level, it would immediately terminate its effort to acquire NCR.

If AT&T finds $125 per share outrageous, that's fine with us. We want them to go away and leave us alone.

BURLINGTON, VERMONT (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - John A. Cobb, chief executive officer of Eastern Bancorp (NASDAQ:VFBK) Friday announced earnings for the year ended Sept. 30, 1990 of $1.7 million, or 70 cents per share, as compared to last year's results of $655,000, or 25 cents per share.

Cobb stated, ''We are pleased, especially in the economic environment that New England financial institutions are in today, to be able to achieve these results.''

The company provided $3.7 million in loan loss provisions during fiscal 1990, of which $2.9 million were provided during the company's fourth quarter. The company had announced on Oct. 3, 1990 that it expected to provide $1.7 million in loan loss reserves in the fourth quarter.

Cobb stated, ''Since then we have concluded that, in light of the company's level of non-performing assets, and the continuing deterioration of the New England economy and its effects in the state of Vermont and New Hampshire, it would be prudent to provide another $1.2 million in loan loss reserves.'' During fiscal 1989 and the fiscal 1989 fourth quarter, the company provided $2.1 million and $131,000 in loan loss reserves, respectively.

The company had $12.9 million, or 2.05 percent of assets, in total non-performing assets at Sept. 30, 1990, of which $7.2 million were non-performing loans. This is compared to $11.4 million, or 1.85 percent of assets, in total non-performing assets at Sept. 30, 1989. The company's loan loss reserves now represent 37.1 percent of its non-performing assets and 66.6 percent of its non-performing loans.

As a result of the additional fourth quarter loan loss provision, the company incurred a fourth quarter loss of $803,000, or 34 cents per share. This compares to net income of $572,000, or 22 cents per share, for 1989's fiscal fourth quarter. Net interest income was $5.3 million as compared to $4.2 million for the fiscal 1990 and 1989 fourth quarters, respectively.

Non-interest income during the fiscal 1990 fourth quarter was $2.3 million as compared to $957,000 for fiscal 1989's fourth quarter. As announced on Oct. 3 1990, Vermont Federal Bank realized a $1.3 million pre-tax gain from the sale of mortgage-backed securities during the fiscal 1990 fourth quarter.

The company's two financial institution subsidiaries, Vermont Federal Bank and First Savings of New Hampshire, have both substantially completed their Office of Thrift Supervision (''OTS'') and Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (''FDIC'') examinations. Cobb stated, ''We are extremely pleased to have essentially completed these examinations and are satisfied with their outcome.''

Net interest income was $20.2 million, or 3.51 percent of average earning assets, for fiscal 1990 as compared to $15.2 million, or 3.23 percent of average earning assets, for fiscal 1989. During fiscal 1990 total non interest income was $6.0 million compared to $2.7 million in fiscal 1989. Total non interest expense during fiscal 1990 was $18.8 million as compared to $14.0 million in fiscal 1989.

Eastern's New Hampshire subsidiary, Rockingham Bancorp, the parent company of First Savings, was acquired on Aug. 31, 1989. Therefore, the results of operations for fiscal 1989 include only one month of Rockingham's earnings.

Total assets for the company at Sept. 30, 1990 were $628.8 million, an increase of $15.3 million over Sept. 30, 1989. The shareholders' equity at Sept. 30, 1990 was $52.3 million, or $22.01 per share. During fiscal 1990, the company paid 51 cents in dividends to shareholders, or 73.9 percent of earnings. As of Sept. 30, 1990, First Savings and Vermont Federal exceed the current regulatory capital requirements as required by the OTS.

Eastern Bancorp will hold its annual meeting on Jan. 30, 1991 at 10:30 a.m. at the Radisson Hotel, Battery Street, Burlington, Vt.

NATICK, MA (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Prime Computer Friday issued the following statement concerning its lawsuit with Virtual Maintenance Inc.

On Dec. 3, 1990 the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit vacated an emergency stay of an injunction issued on Nov. 15, 1990 by the United States District Court in Detroit in connection with a lawsuit under the federal antitrust laws. While the Sixth Circuit also denied Prime's motion for a stay of the injunction pending appeal, it ordered that Prime's appeal of the injunction issued by the District Court be placed on an expedited briefing schedule.

Prime anticipates a hearing before The Sixth Circuit in January 1991.

The injunction arose out of a lawsuit commenced in 1989 by Virtual Maintenance Inc. (''VMI'') which alleged that certain of Prime's maintenance policies as applied to certain of its 50 Series minicomputer customers violated federal antitrust laws.

The District Court's injunction affects Prime's maintenance policies for a limited number of 50 Series minicomputer customers using Product Design Graphics System (PDGS), a software product developed by Ford Motor Co. that Prime has been licensed to market and support. The affected customers, who are Ford suppliers, provide design services to Ford Motor Co. and use the most current revisions of PDGS that are compatible with Ford's internal systems.

The injunction prohibits Prime from using or enforcing with those customers contractual language in its software service contracts that requires the purchase of hardware maintenance from Prime. The District Court's injunction would affect Prime's contracts with those customers with respect to providing them the most current revision of PDGS.

Prime continues to believe that all of its policies and practices are legal and not in violation of antitrust laws, and it intends to vigorously defend those policies.

Prime intends to post security in the amount of $25 million in a form acceptable to the District Court by Tuesday, Dec. 11, 1990 to stay execution of the judgment for damages pending Prime's appeal to the Sixth Circuit.

MIAMI (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - AmeriFirst Bank (NASDAQ:AMRI) said that losses in the fiscal fourth quarter ended Sept. 30 will eliminate shareholders' equity.

The losses are primarily attributable to additional reserves required on foreclosed and development real estate and on loans secured by commercial real estate properties. Final results for the quarter and fiscal year will be released at a later date, following completion of the year-end audit.

As previously announced, AmeriFirst has made an application to the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC) and other federal agencies for ''Open Bank Assistance.'' This assistance, to strengthen the company's financial position is dependent upon a critical evaluation of the company's assets and the ability to attract investment capital from the private sector.

Both the FDIC and private investors require that the company's assets be priced on a private market value basis, including valuation adjustments for yield, risk and other factors. Valuation of the company's assets are now being determined. Regulators are presently reviewing the application.

A combination of federal financial assistance and private investor capital would enable AmeriFirst to meet capital requirements under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act.

AmeriFirst offers a wide range of financial products and services through a network of 54 banking centers in southeast Florida and on Florida's west coast. Deposits up to $100,000 are federally insured and backed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Government.

SCOTTSDALE, AZ (DEC. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Go-Video Inc. (AMEX:VCR) Friday announced sales of $6,908,313 with a net loss of $294,433 or 4 cents per share for the first quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990.

This compares to no sales with a loss of $593,442, or 9 cents per share, for the first quarter ended Oct. 31, 1989. The average number of shares outstanding was 8,373,000 in the first quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, compared to 6,833,944 in the prior first quarter.

Operating results for the first fiscal quarter ended Oct. 31, 1990, reflect the first significant operations and sales of the revolutionary VCR-2 sales necessary to create inventories of the VCR-2 within distribution channels.

This beneficial inmpact is not expected to re-occur in the second quarter, which will also experience an increase in expenditures for research and new product development and prosecution of the company's antitrust claims.

As a consequence, the company may continue to incur operating losses as it moves from a development company to an operating company. The company has revised its second quarter estimates and now projects a loss that may be in excess of that incurred in the first quarter.

The company is taking steps to assure adequate financing for its business plan. ''Go-Video, has arranged with U.S. World Trade Corporation, a U.S. Bancorp company of Portland, Ore., for a multi-million dollar trade finance facility for the importation and sale of its VCR-2,'' noted R. Terren Dunlap, CEO.

''This will allow Go-Video to move forward with our market penetration. We are excited to be going to the Las Vegas January Consumer Electronics Show with product available to satisfy new orders,'' Dunlap commented.

Go-Video introduced its dual-deck videocassette recorder, the VCR-2, to consumers this past summer. One of Popular Science Magazine's 100 best new products of the year, the VCR-2 can play one tape while recording another, duplicate tapes with outstanding quality, edit from tape to tape, and record two different TV programs simultaneously. Other features include the exclusive HQ copy circuitry, a 155-channel cable-ready tuner, multi-channel TV sound, an advanced remote control and on-screen programming.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) COMTEX - The 6-K report filed at the SEC shows on Nov. 19 1990, Teva Pharmaceutical Industries Ltd.(TICKER: TEVIVY), told the New York Society of Security Analysts that significant growth will result from its expansion into both western and eastern Europe.

The introduction of two new drugs aimed at U.S. markets also will affect its growth, the company stated.

Currently, COP-1, an orphan drug to treat multiple schlerosis, and OSTEO-D, an orphan drug to treat renal osteodystrophy, are in advanced Food and Drug Administration clinical trials, with availability possible in 1994 and 1993, respectively.

Teva reported that net income rose nine percent for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1990, to US $3.9 million on an eight percent increase in sales to US $69.6 million.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) COMTEX - The 8-K report filed at the SEC shows on Nov. 23 1990, a decision was rendered in the case of New Crawford Valley Ltd. v. Benedict Nuclear Pharmaceuticals Inc.(TICKER: BENE) and Golden Research Corp. (GRC), awarding the plaintiff $1.24 million plus interest and attorneys' fees, and finding that Benedict had defaulted on a promissory note and second deed of trust in the principal amount of $820,000 given by Benedict towards the purchase of land in Golden, Colorado.

Golden Research, a subsidiary of Benedict, had filed a counterclaim against New Crawford Valley for a deficiency resulting from a foreclosure by GRC of the land.

GRC had acquired the note and first deed of trust, encumbering the land, for which New Crawford Valley was primarily liable.

The court determined the land at the time of foreclosure was worth $3.50 million, and denied GRC its claim for a deficiency judgement.

As a result of the foreclosure, GRC had acquired four additional lots belonging to New Crawford, and the court ordered they be returned to New Crawford or that GRC pay $434,000 for them.

Benedict and GRC stated they plan to appeal the judgement and will file motions for a new trial and to stay execution within 15 days.

TOKYO (DEC. 7) - Japan's retail giant Daiei Inc. Friday pledged to give all-out financial support to Shuwa Corp., a Tokyo-based real estate company hit by credit squeeze due to excessive stock purchases and aggressive real estate investments in the U.S. and Europe.

The pledge was announced at a joint press conference here by the presidents of the two companies -- Daiei's Isao Nakauchi and Shigeru Kobayashi of Shuwa -- who said they have reached a basic agreement on the deal.

Mr. Kobayashi said, "I came to realize it is impossble for me to complete my wish to restructure the retail industry on my own. That's why I asked for help from Mr. Nakauchi."

Shuwa's borrowing for purchase of stocks in Japanese supermarket chain operators and department stores had swollen to 1.08 trillion yen (8.3 billion dollars) by the end of March, from 700 billion yen (5.4 billion dollars) in early 1989, industry sources said.

The huge loans, combined with higher interest rates and the sharp fall in Japan's stock and real estate market since the beginning of the year, have apparently forced Shuwa to seek assistance from Daiei, they said.

Mr. Nakauchi said: "I decided to help Shuwa because I feared that it would cause devastating damage to the Japanese economy if Shuwa went under."

He said Daiei has so far provided loans totaling 70 billion yen (538 million dollars) to Shuwa, with the Shuwa-held retailers' stocks as a collateral.

But Mr. Nakauchi denied speculation that Daiei will buy Shuwa's stake in the retailers and said that Daiei was only keeping the shares.

Rumors circulated earlier in the United States and Japan that Shuwa checks had bounced, the sources said.

ABU DHABI (DEC. 7) - Gulf states plan to boost joint investment and encourage the private sector, United Arab Emirates (UAE) finance and industry ministry sources said Friday.

They said that the ministry had received a draft law from the Riyadh-based Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) secretariat outlining new rules for investment in the region.

"The law will be presented to the December 22 GCC summit in Qatar for approval " a source said. "It's intended to boost joint ventures among GCC countries, encourage the private sector and gradually sell government ownership in projects."

The GCC -- grouping Bahrain, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Saudi Arabia and the UAE -- have frequently called for joint ventures to bolster economic links within their nine-year-old group.

Such projects are now worth around five billion dollars but inter-GCC trade remained as low as 10 per cent of their overall trade of 90 billion dollars in 1989.

The new law ensures soft-term loans to joint projects from GCC government funds provided the venture is owned by more than two GCC members, the sources said.

It stipulates the project's cost should not be less than 50 million Saudi riyals (14 million dollars) and it will enjoy all rights of a national venture and protection against foreign imports.

"The focus will be on the private sector, which accounts for less than 35 per cent of the GCC gross domestic product," said one source. The law urges more investment in less developed Gulf areas even if the return is low.

JAKARTA (DEC. 7) - Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas warned Friday that the failure of world trade talks that have bogged down in Brussels would have serious consequences for developing countries.

"We are following with a feeling of very deep concern, the negotiations of the Uruguay Round which are now entering the final stage," Mr. Alatas told a weekly press briefing here.

He said that although the current ministerial meeting of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) in Brussels was still far from agreement,

"We hope that there would still be compromises reached in the last hours.

"If not we should foresee a failure of the talks with all its serious consequences, especially for developing countries," he said.

A ministerial working party of the multilateral trade talks in Brussels adjourned Thursday night without setting a time for a new meeting following continuing discord over farm subsidies.

The United States and the Australian-led Cairns Group were demanding a 75 per cent cut in EC farm subsidies, while the EC was prepared to offer only a gradual 30 per cent reduction.

"We are especially concerned over the continuing wide differences over the problem of farm subsidies," Mr. Alatas said. "This problem or the differences of opinion or position on this issue may endanger agreements in other fields."

Cairns Group members, who include Argentina, Brazil, Canada, Indonesia, New Zealand and other developing food exporters, have already walked out of a separate meeting of a negotiating panel on trade-related investment measures in Brussels.

Mr. Alatas said, however, that Indonesia and its neighbours grouped under the Association of South East Asian Nations (ASEAN) would not consider forming their own trade block with other Asia-Pacific countries to counter the EC.

"Protectionism should not be fought with protectionism, it would be the wrong medicine," Mr. Alatas said.

Australian and Malaysian officials warned separately Thursday that Asian and Pacific nations including ASEAN -- Brunei, Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- could consider forming their own trade bloc with the United States if the trade talks fail.

CAIRO (DEC. 7) - Oil ministers from the Organisation of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries (Oapec) are to consider moving the group's headquarters from Kuwait to Cairo until Iraq's occupation of the Gulf emirate ends, it was reported Friday.

Sources told the United Arab Emirates (Uae) news agency Wam that the move had been proposed by the executive bureau of the organisation, which met in Cairo this week.

Egyptian Oil Minister Abdul Hadi Kandeel will preside over the ministers' meeting on Saturday. Oapec groups Saudi Arabia, the Uae, Bahrain, Kuwait, Qatar, Iraq, Algeria, Libya, Egypt and Syria.

The sources said the ministers were expected to agree on an increase in the organisation's budget for 1991 by four to five per cent from the 1990 outlay of 4.45 million dollars.

The meeting would also discuss ways to booster cooperation among Oapec's 10 members as well as proposals for postponing the fifth Arab Energy Conference, which was due to be held in Jordan in 1992.

BERLIN (DEC. 7) - The sale of about 400 of the 8,000 former East German state companies has raised a total of about three billion Deutschemarks (two billion dollars), the ADN news agency reported on Friday.

The state Treuhandanstalt organisation which is responsible for privatisation, has received 1,500 requests to purchase assets, and 15 per cent of these are from foreign interests, an official at the organisation Dieter von Burkersroda said, ADN reported.

The Teuhand, in order to facilitate privatisation, was ready to bear most of the cost caused by companies for sale of damage to the environment provided that buyers bore 20 per cent, he said.

It was particularly difficult to sell chemical activities which were one of the mainstays of the East German economy. But buyers were keen to acquire assets in the hotel business, media and construction.

Meanwhile Justice Minister Hans Engelhard said in Bonn that the government had received more than a million recovery claims from people who had their property expropriated by the communists.

He said many of the properties now belonged to the administraton.

At the end of November, Social Democrat vice-president Wolfgang Thierse said that more than 150,000 people had already made claims concerning property in East Berlin.

In most cases the authorities prefer to pay compensation to the real owners rather than evict the present occupants.

BEIRUT (DEC. 7) - Four days after government troops were deployed in the Lebanese capital and began opening roads that were off limits for a decade and half, the euphoria of peace seemed to give way to dismay at the scars left by war.

In the wake of a government plan to free the city of all militias and weapons, residents and reporters were allowed onto the cooling battlefield for the first time in eight years.

Although familiar with destruction, many Lebanese who rushed to check on their homes and shops in the frontline district in central Beirut were shocked by the extent of devastation. Huge estates once worth billions of dollars have been reduced to ruins.

The once-thriving city centre and the neighbourhoods forming the demarcation line between the Moslem and Christian sectors are now pocked by the thousands of shells and millions of bullets fired by the warring factions since 1975.

Developers say it will take about 20 billion dollars and 10 years to rebuild the city.

''That is unthinkable right now with a bankrupt government struggling to secure enough funds for water and electricity,'' said Rami Zreik, head of a British relief organisation. ''Maybe Beirut is doomed to remain a city of ruins and devastation.''

Muhsen Hakim, 40, vowed not to rebuild his home again. ''I have restored it four times,'' he said, ''the last time in 1983, when I was fooled that the war has ended. It only took three hours for the militiamen to come back and start shooting again.''

PARIS (DEC. 7) - More Chadian opposition leaders, grouped in the Revolutionary Forces for Democracy (FDR), expressed "satisfaction" on Friday with the multi-party promises of new President Idriss Deby and said they would send a delegation to Ndjamena.

In a statement released here, the FDR, led by Adoum Togoi, noted that it was "satisfied" that Mr. Deby, a former rebel leader who entered Chad's capital in triumph on Sunday after ex-president Hissein Habre fled, planned to introduce democracy and a multi-party system.

The FDR was formed in October by the First Army, the Western Armed Forces, the Democratic Revolutionary Council, the Chadian People's Revolution and Basic FROLINAT ('Frolinat fondamentale'), which presents itself as the mainstream of the FROLINAT national liberation front formed in 1965, which later broke up into several factions.

The statement recalled that the FDR last month put forward a Chadian peace plan, providing for an immediate ceasefire, the rallying of the opposition in an umbrella General Opposition Congress, the release of all political prisoners and an end to arbitrary arrests, and the convening of a "national democratic forum" to work out means of bringing in political pluralism.

Mr. Deby, formerly one of Mr. Habre's top military aides in Chad's long history of power struggles and civil war, was named head of state by members of his Patriotic Salvation Movement (MPS) on Tuesday, less than a month after launching a Libyan-backed offensive from western Sudan.

He has called for national reconciliation, sought to improve Chad's tricky relations with Tripoli - the two nations have an old territorial dispute over the Libyan-occupied Aouzou Strip on their border - and pledged to introduce "pluralist politics".

Two other Chadian warlords, former president Goukouni Weddeye and Acheikh Ibn Oumar, who fought Mr. Habre before becoming his defence minister, have said they want to return home.

HONG KONG, (DEC. 7) - After loosing a high court case in which 111 Vietnamese boat people were granted a writ of habeas corpus, the Hong Kong government announced Friday that it was dropping all further legal action and would treat this group of boat people as refugees.

The Vietnamese arrived in Hong Kong in May 1989 while making their way to Japan. They successfully persuaded the court that they had been unlawfully detained by the colony's authorities after seeking repairs to their boat.

The Vietnamese were freed, only to be immediately rearrested under another section of the immigration laws.

A major row followed the arrests, which directly contradicted an instruction of the court. The group were released the following day although the government said it would appeal against the granting of the habeas corpus writ.

Friday's announcement followed negotiations with the local office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees which, in a joint statement with the government, said it had secured a 'speedy and humanitarian solution' to the problem of the group of 111 people.

However, both sides stressed that this decision would not affect other people arriving in the colony who would be screened to determine their status as asylum seekers.

HANOI (DEC. 7) - The growth in Vietnam's national income has declined and the country has failed to achieve key goals of its 1986-90 Five Year Plan, the official armed forces daily Quan Doi Nhan Dan newspaper said.

It quoted State Planning Commission chairman Phan Van Khai as telling the National Assembly Thursday that Vietnam failed to reach targets for increases in gross national income, production of food and consumer goods.

Vietnam's population of 65 million is also still growing by 2.2 per cent annually, instead of the 1.7 per cent rate set in the Five Year Plan, he said.

The plan aimed for between six per cent and seven per cent growth in gross national income, which only grew by 2.7 per cent in 1989 and 2.4 per cent in 1990, Mr. Khai said.

Gross national income growth for the three previous years averaged 4.8 per cent and 3.9 per cent for the five years ending 1990, he said.

Wages averaged 200 to 210 dollars in 1990, according to official statistics.

Rice production in 1990 only reached the equivalent of 21.5 million tonnes, compared to a target of 22 to 23 million tonnes, Mr. Khai said.

Growth in consumer goods output only grew 7.3 per cent in the three years from 1986 to 1988, declined in 1989 and 1990 and failed to reach the target of 13 to 15 per cent annually, he said.

However, the export programme grew by 100 per cent in value, outstripping the Five Year Plan's target of 70 per cent growth, Mr. Khai said.

DOHA (DEC. 7) - Foreign nationals will be able to invest in Qatar in future provided they have a Qatari partner, according to a decree issued by the Gulf state's ruler, Sheikh Khalifa bin Hamad al-Thani.

Non-Qataris would be allowed to operate in the commercial, industrial, agricultural and services sectors provided their partners have a minimum shareholding of 51 per cent, the Qatar News Agency reported.

The decree, issued Thursday night, stipulated that business associations (companies) would have to be properly registered under the country's company registration law.

The news agency said non-Qataris may engage in contracting work but would not allowed to work as trade agents or to undertake import activities.

The decree, which goes in effect within 30 days of publication in the official gazette, said Qatar's partners in the Gulf Cooperation Council (Gcc) would be treated equally with Qataris in line with the Unified Economic Agreement signed by the six Gcc states.

The Gcc links Qatar with Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Bahrain, Oman and the United Arab Emirates. The alliance was set up in 1981 with the aim of coordinating JERUSALEM, (DEC. 7) - Israeli officials expressed concern over the possibility of U.S. agreement to a U.N.-sponsored conference on the Middle East as the U.N. Security Council was scheduled to take up the issue in New York on Friday.

In London, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir repeated Israel's long-standing objection to any such conference, saying there was "a reason for worry because Israel never accepted this idea and will never accept it."

Mr. Shamir, who was to leave for Washington Friday for talks with President George Bush, insisted that "an international conference is no the way to solve our conflict with the Arab world. It would be rather a dictate to us by the majority of international countries," in an interview on British radio.

He told British Prime Minister John Major Thursday that Israel would never take part in any such conference.

Israeli officials have been equally concerned about linkage of the Gulf crisis triggered by Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait, to calls for an international conference to resolve the Arab-Israeli dispute.

A commentator for Israeli radio said the idea for such a conference "emerges just when (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein makes a goodwill gesture about the Western hostages in Iraq, by suggesting there's hope for resolution of the Gulf crisis, and as Mr. Shamir is travelling to Washington."

Mr. Shamir also warned about this Friday, urging the United Nations against easing its stand against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein as a reward for his decision to release the foreign hostages in Iraq.

"The taking of hostages was an outrageous act by a dictaorial power, and now he is maybe going to release them and he wants to be paid for it," he said.

Housing Minister Ariel Sharon, meanwhile, said Israel "has never accepted, and would never accept, that an international conference determine its future."

The concern here over a possible shift in U.S. policy on the conference has prompted U.S. officials to deny that the Bush administration was supporting such a conference now.

But the daily Yediot Aharonot here said the "Bush administration will, in the final analysis, adopt the idea of an international conference, in a bid to hammer out an agreement between Israel and its neighbors."

JOHANNESBURG (DEC. 7) - Six miners were killed at two mines on Thursday, mining houses Gold Fields of South Africa and the Anglo American Corporation (AAC) announced Friday.

Three men died in a pressure burst some 2,000 metres below surface at the Kloof goldmine near Westonaria, some 45 kilometres (27 miles) south-west of here on Thursday, Gold Fields said.

AAC had earlier announced that three men had been killed in a tremor Thursday in the Vaal Reefs East gold mine near Orkney some 180 kilometres (111 miles) south-west of here.

BEIJING (DEC. 7) - Rural unemployment in China has worsened and is at potentially explosive levels, the People's Daily said Friday.

The countryside -- home to 80 per cent of China's population -- has between 130 million and 150 million too many workers, according to official figures published recently.

In the short term, 10 million people per year are expected to add their number to the swelling ranks of the rural unemployed, the official Communist Party newspaper said.

"We urgently need to create a large number of jobs," the newspaper said, while China Daily hinted Wednesday that Beijing might revise its policy of barring unemployed peasants from already overpopulated cities.

China's floating population is an estimated 50 million, according to one Western source.

It consists mainly of unemployed peasants who have spent more than a year away from the community where they are legally registered in search of work in the cities.

The authorities have worked to keep rural workers happy over the past decade and their wages have risen faster than urban workers, mainly because they can sell part of their crops on the free market.

The rural labour market changed substantially under the policy of reform and tens of millions of peasants quit farm work for rural businesses, which have ballooned by 25 per cent annually since 1985, according to official statistics.

However, an estimated three million small businesses have closed down since China's austerity programme was imposed in late 1988.

China does not count rural unemployed in jobless statistics and its official unemployment rate is from three per cent to four per cent.

BONN (DEC. 7) - Germany's massive campaign to supply the Soviet Union is pushing the "far more serious problem of famine in Africa" into the background a leading charity combating world hunger warned here Friday.

Spokesman Holger Baum said receipts for the German Organisation Against Hunger in the World, which sends nearly half its aid to Africa, would be down eight per cent this year compared with 1989.

It had collected 30 million Deutsche marks (20 million dollars) for 1990 compared to 42 million Deutsche marks for last year -- while the campaign launched just two weeks ago by Chancellor Helmut Kohl for humanitarian help for the Soviet people facing shortages as winter sets in had already raised more than 20 million Deutsche marks, Mr. Baum said.

"But nobody is dying of hunger in the Soviet Union, unlike in Africa," he noted.

At the start of the year, Germans were spending more on the Third World than in 1989, but that trend was abruptly halted by a switch to solidarity with the Soviets, Mr. Baum said.

That was a welcome development as a way of effecting reconciliation among people still haunted by memories of World War II, "but Africa should not be forgotten."

BELGRADE (DEC. 7) - Yugoslavia's federal government and the army are facing financial collapse because of a lack of money, the cabinet said here Friday.

It said the country's eight republics had sent the Federal Executive Council only 46 per cent of the expected November taxes and withheld about 4.2 billion dinars (400 million dolars).

This ''embezzlement'' would cripple ''vital public and economic mechanisms'', the government said.

It said the republics of Slovenia, Serbia and Vojvodina had withheld the lion's share, but the other republics were increasingly using taxpayers money for their own purposes.

The budget of Yugoslavia's federal government, which is traditionally small due to the autonomy of the republics, is mainly used to finance the federal cabinet, the army and military pensions.

Many republics are at odds with the government in Belgrade because of differences over the country's democratisation process and the transition from a state-controlled to a free market economy.

HARARE (DEC. 7) - Zimbabwe will honour the partial ceasefire signed between the Mozambican government and the Mozambique National Resistance (RENAMO), and will shortly begin redeployment its estimated 10,000 troops stationed in Mozambique, Foreign Minister Nathan Shamuyarira said Friday.

In an interview with the local daily, The Herald, Mr. Shamuyarira said Zimbabwe welcomed the partial ceasefire and hoped that the government of the Mozambique Liberation Front (FRELIMO) and RENAMO would agree on a general ceasefire.

This is the first official reaction from the Zimbabwean government to the partial ceasefire signed in Rome on December 1 between the Mozambican government and RENAMO.

Under the agreement, Zimbabwean troops will be restricted to the rail corridors from the capital Maputo and Beira port into the southern African interior. The redeployment to the corridors should be completed by January 5.

The partial ceasefire does not cover the other transport corridors of Tete and Nacala. These will only be covered when a general ceasefire is reached. Mr. Shamuyarira said it was not immediately clear as to what would happen in the other corridors which are not covered by the partial ceasefire.

Zimbabwean troops guard the Tete route to Malawi where they provide convoy protection to road transport.

The ceasefire monitering group, which is expected to meet shortly, will be made up of eight nations including Zimbabwe, the United States and the Soviet Union.

Zimbabweans have also been affected by RENAMO's 15-year bush campaign against the socialist FRELIMO government. Zimbabwe's President Robert Mugabe vowed never to allow the rebels to take power Mozambique and stationed 10,000 troops in the country.

In response, RENAMO, whose war has been described by the U.S. State Department as particularly brutal -- "declared war" on Zimbabwe in 1987.

Since then they have launched raids across much of Zimbabwe's 1,000-kilometre (625 miles) border with Mozambique, bringing development projects to a halt in the north-east and forcing the closure of the Gonarezhou game reserve in the south-east.

Although a few of the attacks have been against economic targets, many have been attributed to pure banditry, with border villages being pillaged for food and the residents' meagre possessions.

According to official government statistics released in April this year, since 1987, around 400 Zimbabweans have been killed in cross-border raids, 300 wounded and 250 kidnapped.

On Friday, Zimbabwe's Home Affairs Minister Movem Mahachi appealed to RENAMO to stop brutalising innocent Zimbabweans. He told journalists here that Zimbabwe's border with Mozambique was too long to guard fully but added that Zimbabwe had no intention of following South Africa's example and erecting an electric fence.

"There are not enough forces to be deployed along the eastern border and we do not have the guts or morale South Africa has to erect an electric fence to stop the infiltration of RENAMO who are brutally killing our people," Mr. Mahachi said.

BEIJING (DEC. 7) - East European dealers posing as tourists are plying a new Silk Road, taking cheap Chinese goods back home to sell at enormous profit.

The famous caravan trail that linked Europe and China for 1,500 years allowed a rich East-West trade to flourish until the 13th century, but in 1990 the dealing is shady, and warnings in the official Chinese press suggest it will not go unregulated much longer.

The first new dealers, mostly young people from Poland, Yugoslavia and the Soviet Union, arrived at the end of 1989 after a wave of liberalizing reform in socialist Eastern Europe.

Under the pretext of collecting souvenirs, they buy loads of clothing, toys, cultured pearls and anything else manufactured cheaply in China, which levies no export tariffs.

The best of them can expect to pocket the equivalent of 6,000 to 9,000 dollars profit from a single trip, the Women's Daily reported in October.

A single bag stuffed with T-shirts, bought for five yuan (about one dollar) in China and sold in East European cities for five dollars, about pays the train fare between Moscow and Beijing, via the Mongolian capital Ulan Bator.

Thanks to preferential arrangements during Eastern Europe's hard-line socialist days, train tickets to and from China are still dirt cheap.

The number of Yugoslavian dealers posing as tourists rose five-fold during the first nine months of this year, to about 7,500, the Economic Information Daily said this week, quoting a Yugoslavian newspaper.

Nine in 10 travelled to the Chinese capital specifically to make lucrative deals, the paper said.

They spent the equivalent of 34 million dollars here but raked in profits of between 100 million and 150 million dollars, it said, or more than the total value of Sino-Yugoslavian trade.

One such dealer, a Belgrade store manager, left China with 10,000 ties in his luggage, the paper said.

BANGKOK (DEC. 7) - Cambodian guerrillas suffered heavy casualities after government troops used artillery barrages to repulse a massive assault on a strategic road in northwestern Cambodia, Thai military officers stationed on the border said Friday.

"The guerrillas belonging to the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) have taken a serious beating and their ground assault against Route 69 has been repulsed by heavy artillery and rocket bombardment from the Phnom Penh troops," a Thai officer based at Aranyapathet said.

Guerrilla officers told Agence France-Presse that KPNLF commander General Sak Sutsakarn this week threw 1,700 troops from five Special Forces Battalions into the fight for Route 69, which runs parallel to the Thai border some 30 kilometres (18 miles) inside Cambodia.

But Cambodian government troops "decimated" the KPNLF force with massive artillery and rocket bombardments from Phum Nimit and Phum Sarok, both straddling strategic Highway Five, and artillery bases around Sisophon, the capital of northwestern Banteay Meanchey province, the Thai officers said.

Phum Nimit and Phum Sarok, part of a strategic network of some half-a-dozen artillery bases set up by Vietnamese troops during their nearly 10-year occupation of Cambodia, still provide the most effective deterrent against guerrilla attacks, analysts said.

KPNLF sources said casualty figures were not immediately available.

The Khmer Rouge -- the strongest faction in a tripartite coalition trying to topple the Phnom Penh government -- last year suffered its heaviest battlefield setback since the Vietnamese troop withdrawal in September 1989 when it tried to seize Phum Nimit firebase.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 7) - Masked gunmen on Friday shot and seriously wounded a Palestinian official suspected of collaborating with Israelis, while the army slapped curfews on the occupied territories ahead of the intifada's third anniversary, military and Arab sources said.

Zaki el Nahas, deputy mayor of El Bireh, was shot in the stomach and shoulder at his office. He was rushed to an Arab hospital in nearby Ramallah but later transferred to an Israeli medical center "for security reasons," the sources said.

The army bolstered its presence in the area after the attack, they added.

In Jerusalem's Old City, security forces were heavily deployed to prevent demonstrations at the Temple Mount following Friday's Moslem prayers which drew 14,000 worshippers, police said, adding that there were no incidents.

In another development, the clandestine Unified Leadership of the Uprising in the territories and Hamas, the Islamic resistance movement, called for a general strike on Saturday.

The strike is to commemorate both the intifada, or uprising, and the killing by Israeli security forces two months ago of 17 Palestinians at the Temple Mount.

Israeli authorities Friday imposed curfews on a large part of the occupied territories, affecting about a million people, to contain violence and prevent demonstrations ahead of the Palestinian uprising's third anniversary on December 9, military sources said.

The army has beefed up its forces at all "hot spots" in the territories and erected barricades at major road intersections. Soldiers have also stepped up search operations.

The measure was imposed on the major towns of the West Bank, several refugee camps, notably in the Nablus and Hebron regions, and large sectors of the Gaza Strip, the sources said.

Military authorities fear renewed Palestinian attacks. Defense Minister Moshe Arens has warned that the army would "respond to firearms with firearms."

Three Israelis from the Elon Moreh settlement who rode a bus near Ramallah were shot and wounded Wednesday by unknown assailants while in the Gaza Strip gunmen seriously wounded a border guard in the head.

Israeli forces arrested three Palestinians in the West Bank refugee camp of Tulkarm after assailants lobbed a petrol bomb at an army jeep. A Palestinian was shot and wounded during clashes in a village near Tulkarm, Arab sources said.

Police arrested two Palestinians from Ramallah found in possession of "large kitchen knives," which police said were to be used against soldiers or policemen.

For its part, the daily Yediot Aharonot asked whether Israel really needed the Gaza Strip, and reported that 30 reserve officers had last week signed a petition calling for a military withdrawal from that region.

The left-wing opposition paper, Al Hamishmar, said "the intifada refuses to die" and asked how long the Israeli army could continue to hold the occupied territories.

Ze'ev Schiff, military commentator for the daily Ha'aretz, wrote that the uprising's leadership had passed into the hands of Moslem extremists.

"The use of weapons in the occupied territories is prompted by Hamas and Islamic Jihad, against the wishes of most Palestinian leaders and officials of the Palestine Liberation Organizaion abroad," he said.

BERLIN (DEC. 7) - Food from Berlin's Cold War stockpiles began the journey to Moscow Friday, at the start of a massive air-land-sea operation to help feed the Soviet public during a long and bitter winter.

Thirty-six Red Army trucks were loaded with 100 tonnes of dried milk and bandages at West Berlin warehouses, and driven to the Soviet air base at Sperenberg, south of the city, where they were loaded aboard four gigantic Antonov-22 air transporters.

In Bonn, government spokesman Hans Klein said "around 250,000 tonnes" of Berlin stockpiles and army rations would be sent, with a value of around 580 million Deutsche marks (386 million dollars).

Three thousand tonnes of the total will be airlifted, at the rate of 150 to 200 tonnes per day over the next two weeks, and the rest will be sent by road, rail and sea, using Soviet and German transport, over the next two to three months, he said.

"It is one of the paradoxes of world history," Berlin Transport Minister Horst Wagner commented, as he prepared the first shipment to the city's former antagonist.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl announced the gift on November 29, after his foreign affairs counsellor, Horst Teltschik, went to Moscow, where Soviet officials handed over a list of urgent food priorities.

Even though the country had a bumper Soviet harvest, shops are bare and rationing is widely in force. Moscow reportedly has only a few days' reserves of meat and milk supplies are sporadic and far below required levels.

The Berlin food mountain was built after the 1948-9 airlift to enable West Berliners to survive several months in the event of a second Soviet siege.

Regularly rotated with commercial supplies in order to stay fresh, the stores include 66,000 tonnes of grain, 29,000 tonnes of canned meat, 12,200 tonnes of powdered milk, 7,500 tonnes of butter, 20,000 tonnes of sugar and 32,000 tonnes of canned fruit and vegetables.

Added to that are millions of army rations that are no longer needed, as the Bundeswehr, the federal army, is to be slimmed down because of the end of military tension in Europe. The food stocks of the National People's Army, the now-disbanded armed forces of East Germany, will also be sent.

At the same time, Germans have been digging into their pockets for a "Help Russia" appeal, that kicked off last week with a telethon which raised four million marks (2.6 million dollars) in just two hours.

The fund focuses on the popularity of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, acclaimed in Germany for having allowed the country to overcome its 45-year division.

Even so, the aid still falls far short of Soviet needs, and Mr. Kohl has been instrumental in organising European Community (EC) aid that, according to EC officials, could be up to two billion dollars.

German agriculture official Rudolf Genske says the Gorbachev request includes half a million tonnes of meat, half a million tonnes of vegetable oils, 100,000 tonnes of baby food and 100,000 tonnes of pasta.

Soviet officials said the worst hardship was in cities, the disaster-struck Ukrainian region of Chernobyl and the southeastern republics opf Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan, Mr. Teltschik said.

TOKYO (DEC. 7) - A Japanese group won a contract Friday for an automated guideway transit (AGT) system at Japan's planned Kansai International Airport despite a protest from a U.S. bidder, AEG Westinghouse Transportation Systems Inc.

Kansai International Airport Co. (KIAC) said it signed the 4.97 billion yen (38 million dollar) contract with the Niigata Engineering Co.-Sumitomo Corp. consortium for design, manufacture, installation and technical assistance on the so-called "people mover."

AGT systems are used to transport people between aircraft and air terminals.

The Niigata-Sumitomo group outbid 12 domestic and foreign bidders in July, but a formal contract was delayed because of a protest from AEG Westinghouse, which had offered to do the job for eight billion yen (62 million dollars).

AEG Westinghouse and the U.S. Commerce Department claimed the U.S. firm had ample experience in building AGT systems and superior AGT technology.

KIAC officials said the Niigata group is technically equal to AEG Westinghouse as it has developed similar systems.

"They (the Iraqis) are very confident and they are definitly committed to the cause of a just and peaceful solution to their problem and all problems in the region, not just their own," he said in an interview.

Baghdad's decision to release all foreign hostages held in Iraq was "an act of cold pragmatism" and not "a sign of weakness".

SEOUL (DEC. 7) - South Korea and China will join hands to conduct a five-year environmental study of the Yellow Sea, a cradle of Asian civilization that is becoming increasingly polluted.

Chung Yong-Seung, an environmental scientist with Korea National University of Education, will coordinate the study along with Tang Xiaoyan of Beijing University, Mr. Chung said.

He said he signed the agreement for the study with Ms. Tang in China in October and the project would get under way in March, to last five years "and perhaps longer."

Mr. Chung said the study would be the first joint Sino-South Korean study and the first prolonged probe of the large body of water nestled between the Korean Peninsula and China's Shandong Peninsula.

"World culture was originated in the Yellow Sea," he said by telephone from Chongju, where his college is located about 200 kilometers (125 miles) south of Seoul.

"Korea and China have been living together around the Yellow Sea for four or five thousand years," Mr. Chung said. "It is one of the first places where culture originated, the others being around Egypt and Persia."

But the past 20 or 30 years of fast growth have been hard on the Yellow Sea, the receptor of pollution from some 200 million people from three countries living around it, he said.

Major rivers such as the Yellow River, which ends in a delta north of the Shandong Peninsula after snaking through much of northern China; the Yalu, the natural border between North Korea and China, and the Han, which flows through Seoul and part of South Korea's industrial heartland, empty on the Yellow Sea.

Industry is one of the main causes of the sea's pollution, but agricultural waste may also be flowing out, he said.

LONDON (DEC. 7) - British Prime Minister John Major on Friday warned Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that the international community would not tolerate the "dismantling" of Kuwait.

In an interview with BBC Radio, he welcomed Iraq's decision to free all of its foreign hostages, but added that "they should never have been hostages in the first place."

He said he hoped they would now be released "without let, without hindrance and without delay."

"I don't think the world is going to stand by and watch Kuwait be invaded and dismantled in the way it is, the prime minister said. "Nobody wants to go to war if it is avoidable, but you have to realize what has happened there."

He demanded that the Iraqi leader "disgorge Kuwait, release hostages and make reparations for what he has done. There can be no compromise from that point."

OTTAWA (DEC. 7) - Canada's unemployment rate rose 0.3 per cent to 9.1 per cent in November, its highest rate since May 1987, the government agency Statistics Canada Friday.

During the last six months alone, the number of unemployed has jumped by 271,000. The jobless rate in October was 8.8 per cent, according to the government.

Canada is officially in a recession after its economic growth dropped for two consecutive quarters and the unemployment rate has risen steadily since last April when it was 7.2 per cent.

PARIS (DEC. 7) - French air traffic is expected to be disturbed next Tuesday and Wednesday by a strike by air traffic controllers and technical staff at the Athis-Mons control center, south of here, sources said Friday afternoon at the Transport Ministry's Air Traffic Control Department.

Athis-Mons is the country's most important center, handling Charles de Gaulle, Orly and Le Bourget Airports in Paris, as well as Lille.

The sources said some overflights (such as between London and Geneva) might be dropped, while route changes could affect half of the flights on those two days.

The strikers are demanding additional allowances reflecting the specific nature of their work and more staff.

Meanwhile, the technical staff struck on Friday for the same reasons, but flights were not affected. Those employees are responsible for maintenance of control tower equipment.

KHOBAR, Saudi Arabia (DEC. 7) - Christmas cards are on sale early in bustling Western-style stores here, but none of them show nativity scenes, the virgin Mary or the cross.

One shows a camel with a sack of gifts and two robins with woolly caps holding out their socks. Another shows Father Christmas with a reindeer parked under a palm tree and in another he is bearing gifts to two Saudis wearing their traditional keffir headgear.

The cards are printed in liberal Bahrein.

The Saudi authorities have relaxed a one-time ban on Christmas trees, holly and other paraphernalia of the Western festival, but their ban on all religious symbols except those of Islam and public practice of non-Islamic religion remains.

The only place where Christmas cards with a religious theme can be obtained in Saudi Arabia is from the chaplain's office or the PX store at King Abdul Aziz air base near here.

There, incoming Christmas mail for the U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia, soon to total more than 400,000 men, has tripled in recent days to reach 100,000 lbs. (about 50,000 kilograms) a day for each of the six Army Post Offices operating on the base.

The post offices each handle about 50,000 lbs. of outgoing soldiers' mail, most of it bound for the United States and Germany and which is posted free.

"With the amount of mail we're handling, we're already at the limit. We're doing a tremendous job," said Captain Larry Bullock, from Montgomery, Alabama.

He said a letter from the United States takes about two weeks to reach the soldier in the desert.

LONDON (DEC. 7) - A British businessman and fan of rock and roll legend Elvis Presley payed 66,000 pounds ($120,000) on Friday for a license plate reading ELV 1S, at an auction at Christie's.

Mr. Anson Lane, who does not own a car, said that he planned to buy a pink Cadillac to go with the plate. He said that he had been a fan of Elvis since 1957, owned all of his records and had seen him seven times in concert.

Among the most expensive plates sold at the auction were H2 EAU (10,000 pounds), SUS 1E (35,000), UFO 1 (12,000) and B1 NGO (24,000).

Almost 800 collectors and onlookers attended the auction, organized by the Department of Transport. It brought in a total of 1.3 million pounds ($2 million) for the 69 plates put up for bidding.

The highest amount ever payed for a British licence plate was 176,000 pounds ($350,000) for the number 1A in December, 1989.

BAGHDAD (DEC. 7) - Iraq's National Assembly Friday endorsed an order by President Saddam Hussein to release all foreign nationals held hostage in Iraq and Iraqi-annexed Kuwait, Baghdad Radio said.

In New York, the United Nations Security Council postponed until 2100 Gmt a meeting at which it will discuss a draft resolution calling for a Middle East peace conference.

The Iraqi parliament met in special session and approved by a large majority Saddam's order on Thursday that all foreign nationals held against their will in Iraq and Kuwait be allowed to leave, the broadcast said.

More than 2,400 western foreign nationals, mostly Americans and Britons, are being held in Iraq and Kuwait as ''human shields'' to guard against a possible attack by the U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the Gulf following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on August 2. About 3,300 Soviets are also in Iraq.

Saddam's order reversed a decision last month to allow the release of all foreign hostages in batches starting on December 25, Christmas Day.

LONDON (DEC. 7) - Tanker rates remained firm this week in the Gulf, and this trend is likely to continue until the end of the year, London brokers E.A. Gibson said Friday in their weekly report.

However, the outlook for 1991 is far less encouraging, due to falling demand for oil, continuing over-production and high stocks, they warned.

Although the number of VLCCs (very large crude carriers, 200,000 to 270,000 tonnes) loading in the Middle East Gulf during the week (18 vessels totalling 4.5 million tonnes) was slightly lower than last week, the rapidly depleting availability enabled owners to maintain, or even slightly raise, the existing firm rate structure.

Rates also advanced for vessels loading in the Mediterranean. But rates in West Africa failed to recover from the sharp drop experienced last week, although there was a reasonable amount of activity.

Shipowners also had to accept lower earnings in the Caribbean and in the North Sea.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) - U.S. policy on normalization with Vietnam remains tied to the full implementation of a United Nations-sponsored Cambodian settlement, a State Department official said here Friday.

"There is no change in policy, no speeding up," said the official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Her remarks followed comments by Assistant Secretary of State Richard Solomon at a business conference on Vietnam here Wednesday indicating that full normalization with Hanoi could be achieved within two years if Hanoi also gave a full accounting of the nearly 2,300 Americans missing since the Vietnam War.

Noting that it took eight years for U.S.-Chinese relations to be fully normalized in 1979, Mr. Solomon pointed out that the normalization with Vietnam "could be carried out much more rapidly, in two years or less, if the processes that are now underway are in fact actively supported."

"This is a process that we see moving in stages," Mr. Solomon said, with full normalization coming "when the agreement on a Cambodian settlement process had been fully implemented -- that is with the elections held in something like a year and a half ... and the installation of a democratically elected government in Phnom Penh."

Hanoi and Washington have never had diplomatic ties and the United States has maintained a crippling trade embargo on Hanoi since 1975 when Vietnam was reunified under communist rule.

Mr. Solomon expressed hope that the U.N.-brokered peace plan plan -- which provides for a major U.N. role in governing Cambodia during the transition to U.N.-monitored elections -- would be signed at a 19-nation conference in Paris Conference within the next two months.

He said Washington would then be prepared to discuss with Hanoi technical issues blocking a normalization, such as financial claims by both sides, the mechanics of setting up an embassy and other aspects of a normal relationship.

"As the process goes forward, we will be prepared to take certain confidence-building steps, depending on progress achieved on all these issues," Mr. Solomon told the business conference.

LONDON (DEC. 7) - A British Airways plane left Friday for Iraq to bring back a first batch of the approximately 1,150 Britons held hostage in Iraq and Kuwait, officials said at London's Heathrow airport.

The Boeing 767, which left here a few hours after the Iraqi Parliament ratified President Saddam Hussein's decision to release all remaining hostages, was due to arrive in Baghdad at 1930 GMT, but could change course and go to Amman if it failed to receive permission in time to land in the Iraqi capital, the sources said.

A BA spokesman said the plane had room for 247 passengers, but was unable to say how many of the hostages would get on the flight.

The plane was loaded with food, champagne and cigarettes for a party to celebrate on the released group's return.

BA expected the airliner to return here Saturday afternoon, but the Foreign Office said it could take five or six days to complete formalities for the departure of all 1,150 Britons.

Meanwhile a second BA plane was standing by at Heathrow, ready to take off. A Virgin Atlantic plane was also waiting to leave as soon as possible from Gatwick airport, south of London.

NDJAMENA (DEC. 7) - U.S. instructors trained some 700 former Libyan prisoners of war held in Chad to carry out attacks against their own country, reliable sources said here.

A first batch of 200 freed Libyans were flown out of here Friday by a U.S. Air Force C-141 Starlifter, taking off from a farflung corner of the airfield, an Agence France-Presse correspondent witnessed.

U.S.-trained Libyans, taken prisoner from 1983-1987, committed several attacks and laid mines in southern Libyan, the sources said.

The Libyan prisoners, who at first helped the army maintain weapons seized from Libya, were later placed under the command of Libyan Colonel Colonel Alifa Haftar, himself a former prisoner, and armed and trained by U.S. advisors at a camp near here, the sources added.

Libyan envoys headed by Colonel Massud Abdel Aziz arrived here Monday, two days after Chad's new strongman Idriss Deby seized power from former president Hissein Habre, asking that commando members be extradited to Libya.

Mr. Deby's troops overran Chad's eastern regions in the past weeks with Libyan support.

U.S. military sources said the C-141 carrying the Libyans had arrived from Lagos earlier and would return there with its passengers.

More former Libyan prisoners of war were to be flown out Saturday under the auspices of the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC).

Ankara and Moscow hope to boost bilateral trade to at least three billion dollars next year.

Turkey has proposed establishment of an economic union among the Black Sea countries.

NEW DELHI (DEC. 7) - At least 19 people were killed and more than 50 injured in fighting between rival groups in two Indian towns Friday, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said.

PTI did not identify the groups involved but informed sources here said the clashes in Hyderabad and Aligarh could be Hindu-Moslem riots.

An indefinite curfew was imposed on the two towns.

Violence in Hyderabad, capital of the southern state of Andhra Pradesh, continued after the curfew was enforced, PTI said, adding that 15 people were killed and 45 injured while one person died when police opened fire.

Three people died and about a dozen people suffered serious injuries in Aligarh, in the northern state of Uttar Pradesh about 100 kilometres (62 miles) southeast of here, PTI said.

TOKYO (DEC. 7) - The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions (ICFTU) warned Friday of an impending crisis in eastern Europe caused by mass migrations of workers.

An uneven pattern of reform in the region could lead to a "large scale migration" of workers, with countries like Czechoslovakia and Poland having to carry the burden, the ICFTU executive committee said in a statement.

Migrant workers from the Soviet Union and Romania have begun arriving in Czechoslovakia, increasing the threat of mass unemployment in the country, an ICFTU official quoted a Czechoslovak delegate as saying.

"Our dream is that the government learns how to use the instrument of unionism " said Roman Kovacs, president of Czechoslovakia's largest trade union.

The Czech union together with Poland's Solidarity are the only two eastern European unions affiliated to the ICFTU, some of whose members are strongly opposed to any contact with former official unions of Eastern Bloc countries.

"Some have changed but we are closely monitoring the situation, especially in the Soviet Union," an ICFTU spokesman said, adding however that the ICFTU was looking at potential partners and was currently considering applications from a Romanian and a Bulgarian trade union.

Meanwhile, in an open letter to Chinese Prime minister Li Peng, the ICFTU called Friday for the release of around 20 Chinese union members and activists.

Written by by ICFTU Secretary General John Vanderveken on behalf of the executive board, the letter expressed "urgent concern" over the fate of those detained after the bloody crushing of the student-led pro-democracy movement in Beijing in June last year.

The ICFTU executive committee met here from Wednesday to Friday.

JOHANNESBURG (DEC. 7) - Platinum demand in 1991 is expected to be higher than 1990 levels provided there are no major shocks to the principal western economies, Johannesburg Consolidated Investment (JCI) said here Friday.

In its annual platinum forecast, JCI said it expects greater production next year from all mines in South Africa, which supply 80 per cent of the world's annual platinum output of 98,000 kilograms (3.5 million ounces).

These supplies may be offset to some extent, it said, if supplies from the Soviet Union are unfavourably affected by economic and political uncertainty in that country.

JCI believes the Soviets will attempt to maintain sales to maximise hard currency revenues.

The company, one of South Africa's seven major mining houses, said that for the first time since 1984, supplies are expected to exceed demand in 1990.

But, it added, the surplus is not expected to be large and will possibly be absorbed by year's end as a result of increased Japanese investment purchases.

BEIJING (DEC. 7) - Students at the 10 main universities here have been "invited" to take part in sporting and cultural events to mark the anniversary Sunday of a historic anti-Japanese protest, press reports said here Friday.

Events on the anniversary of the December 9, 1935 protest would include films, seminars on the "spirit of Yenan," Chairman Mao's famous mountain redoubt, and relay races, the People's Daily said.

Students demonstrating for more democracy in the eastern city of Hefei on December 9, 1986 sparked off protests that were the forerunners of the pro-democracy movement crushed by the army in Beijing last year.

The 1935 student movement, touched off by Japan's depredations in northeastern China, came two years before the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War.

BRUSSELS (DEC. 7) - NATO countries for the first time opened the door to the possibility of eliminating tactical nuclear weapons based in Europe, during talks here Thursday and Friday, various sources said.

During discussions among NATO defense ministers aimed at finding a post-Cold War strategy for the alliance, Britain signalled it was ready to lift its objection to the "Third Zero Option," or elimination of all tactical nuclear forces, according to diplomats.

Tactical, or short-range, nuclear forces include all nuclear missiles and artillery with a range of less than 500 kilometers (300 miles)

Following Friday's talks, Belgian Defense Minister Guy Coeme said NATO countries did not reject the idea of the complete elimination of all tactical forces, but he indicated the Soviet Union did not appear as favorable as it once had to such an agreement.

He added that talks within NATO on short-range forces should conclude in spring, 1991.

The government of former West Germany, where most of these short-range weapons are based, had long fought for their elimination.

The July NATO summit in London had provided for negotiations on a reduction in short-range forces following the conclusion of the Conventional Forces in Europe treaty, which was signed on November 19, but no mandate was set forward for such talks.

NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner indicated that NATO was considering a "substantial reduction" of nuclear weapons in Europe and an "increased emphasis on nuclear-capable aircraft."

He said "No nation wants a denuclearization of Europe."

U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney refused to speculate on Washington's position regarding the short-range forces negotiations, but he emphasized that the military situation in Europe had been "significantly altered" by the withdrawal of Soviet forces from Eastern Europe.

The United States had intended to deploy a Tactical Air to Surface Missile (TASM) aboard aircraft stationed in Europe beginning in late 1995.

The ministers also set out the broad outlines of a new NATO conventional forces strategy for the post-Cold War period. The meeting's final statement said that the allied countries hoped to be able to approve the new strategy by next spring.

The communique said that the ministers had agreed on the idea of a smaller, more mobile allied force composed primarily of multinational units, but diplomats indicated the problems involved in the formation of such units were far from being solved.

The statement also indicated that the alliance also intended to scale down its infrastructure program, and to transfer "excess modern material" to Greece, Portugal and Turkey in order to allow those countries to modernize their forces.

MOSCOW (DEC. 7) - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev warned on Friday that 1991 will be "the year of tough and unopopular measures", winding up a difficult meeting with heads of state-run enterprises.

The upcoming year would see cuts in public spending, particularly on defence, Mr. Gorbachev said, according to the Interfax news agency.

Some of the 3,500 company chiefs attending the meeting had openly called on the reform-minded Soviet leader to return to disbanded centralized management.

Mr. Gorbachev called for the rapid conclusion of economic agreements between the various Soviet republics and between the Kremlin and the regions.

Several of his critics at the meeting, backed by Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Rhyzkov, objected to what they called "every man for himself" tactics in the Soviet Union, which would lead to the breach of many standing contracts.

"Now we have to pay for all the errors of the past," was the Soviet leader's reply.

He also announced, according to Interfax and Tass, a cut in investment by central government and a major extension in long term distribution of land.

He recently told a gathering of Soviet intellectuals that he was against private land ownership, but did not see why land could not be rented out "even for a hundred years, even with the right to sell tenancy rights".

The Russian Federation, by far the biggest of the 15 Soviet republics, on Monday said that it wanted the private ownership of land, though it attached a sizeable number of conditions.

Mr. Gorbachev, caught between radical reformers and hardliners, also said on Friday that bank interest rates were set to rise and that "free prices" would be set for "luxury goods". This latter measure has already been contested in several republics, including the Russian Federation.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) - The United Nations coordinator of aid to Afghanistan, Sadruddin Aga Khan, is to give up the honorary post at the end of the year, the spokesman for the U.N. secretary-general announced here Friday.

Sadruddin Aga Khan called into being ''Operation Salam'', which has received over one billion dollars worth of material and financial aid from the international community.

The aid action is in future to be led by Perez de Cuellar's personal envoy for Afghanistan and Pakistan, Benon Sevan.

Sadruddin Aga Khan is also in charge of U.N. humanitarian measures in connection with the Gulf crisis.

NEW YORK, United Nations (DEC. 7) - U.N. Security Council members Friday were awaiting a U.S. response to a draft resolution calling for an international peace conference on the the Middle East and the Palestinian problem.

Debate on the draft resolution, which was tentatively approved Wednesday by ambassadors from the council five permanent members, was postponed Thursday and scheduled for Friday afternoon amid ongoing consultations, diplomats said.

Israel has categorically rejected the holding of an international conference to discuss the Palestinian issue or the situation in Israel's occupied territories.

Israeli Prime Minister Yitzak Shamir, due to arrive here later Friday on a seven-day visit to the United States, said before departing from London that his country would not agree to "any foreign body deciding its future and fate."

Mr. Shamir is scheduled to meet U.S. President George Bush Monday in Washington.

The resolution, which also proposes establishing a U.N. presence in the occupied territories to monitor the situation there, was put forth by Colombia, Cuba, Malaysia and Yemen -- Security Council president for this month - and approved among others by U.S. ambassador Thomas Pickering.

The draft does not explicitly call for an international conference or set a timetable for such a meeting, but "considers that the convening at an appropriate time of an international peace conference on the Middle East ... with the participation of the parties concerned, would facilitate the achievement of a comprehensive settlement of lasting peace in the Middle East."

But the wording of the resolution, which if approved would be the first to call for a Middle East peace conference, is likely to change before any voting, diplomats said.

The New York Daily News said Miss Shields, who always travels with her mother Terri, had already packed her bags for the trip when she learned Sunday, the day before she was to leave, that her visa application had been refused.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) - Last-minute discussion continued here Friday over a draft U.N. Security Council resolution that welcomes an international conference on the Middle East.

A vote on the draft was put off for a third time because of behind-the-scenes negotiating, but diplomats said the Security Council was likely to convene at 2400 hours Gmt friday.

The United States has hinted that for the first time ever it would either abstain or vote in favour of the international-conference proposal, which is bitterly opposed by Israel.

The proposal is broadly acceptable to all the other 14 members of the council, but would have faced an American veto in the past.

The resolution was drafted by Cuba, Malaysia, Colombia and Yemen after consultations with U.S. representative at the United Nations Thomas Pickering. The text does not set any date for such a Mideast conference or lay down who should attend.

Israel refuses to countenance a conference with the Palestine Liberation Organisation, which it denounces as ''terrorist''.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) - The United States said Friday its ambassador Nathaniel Howell and his diplomatic staff in Kuwait City will return home as soon as the last U.S. citizens held hostage by the Iraqis are freed.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the embassy in Kuwait ''remains open'' although nobody would be there. Only one other western nation, Britain, still has diplomatic personnel in Kuwait.

The U.S. mission's ''only function'' since the Iraqi invasion had been to assist the departure of U.S. citizens held against their will in Kuwait. Once this task had been carried out, the ambassador could leave, she said.

Iraq, which has annexed Kuwait, has demanded the closure of all foreign embassies there and their removal to Baghdad.

Explaining the pullout, Tutwiler said: ''If all the Americans leave, surely you don't expect them to stay there and do routine business with Iraqi occupation forces.''

The U.S. charge d'affaires in Baghdad, Joseph Wilson, had urged the Iraqis to resume supplies of water and electricity to the Kuwait mission. Tutwiler disclosed that 750 U.S. citizens were trapped in Kuwait and Iraq. Previously, officials have declined to give totals.

Tutwiler said no firm dates had been set yet for direct talks between Iraq and the United States on the Gulf Crisis. Baghdad had proposed that its foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, meet U.S. President George Bush in Washington on December 17.

Washington would not be agreeing to that until Baghdad settled a date for U.S. Secretary of State James Baker to meet Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. dpa

CARACAS (DEC. 7) - President George Bush Friday expressed disappointment with the European Community (EC) stance at failed trade talks in Brussels and called on the Europeans to muster the "political will" to negotiate accords that would reduce farm subsidies.

This week's talks under the umbrella of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) "unfortunately ... ended without result due to the inability of nations with substantial economic strength -- the European Community, Japan, (South) Korea -- to negotiate fundamental agricultural reforms," Mr. Bush said in a communique released here, the last stop of his five-nation tour of South America.

The GATT conference, attended by more than 100 countries, broke down Friday over the EC's refusal to cut its subsidies for farmers to the extent demanded by the United States and other countries.

"This is all the more disappointing given the very constructive attitude taken by many developing countries, particularly many of our friends in Latin America," Mr. Bush added.

The United States remains "committed to maintaining and strengthening the multilateral trading system and to a timely and successful conclusion" of the current round of global trade talks, Mr. Bush said.

Washington would do all it can "to bring this about while continuing to insist upon agreements that genuinely liberalize trade," he added.

"Accordingly it is our hope that participants, especially the EC, will take this opportunity to reflect upon their position on agriculture and develop the political will to negotiate real market-opening agreements while there is still time to do so," Mr. Bush said.

OTTAWA (DEC. 7) - Fossil remains of a sea anemone that may have lived more than 600 million years ago -- possibly the oldest traces of animal life on Earth -- have been uncovered in northern Canada, a magazine reported.

The find by Canadian geologists and paleontologists in the Northwest Territories could be of major importance because its calls into question the theory that the first animal life forms on Earth emerged after the Ice Age, Geology magazine said in its December edition.

"It very dramatically upsets the apple cart. The structures we're describing are very simple," said paleontologist Guy Narbonne, a professor at Queen's University in Toronto. He was one of three men who found the fossils.

The fossil remains were found in 1989 under glacial deposits in the Mackenzie Mountains by Mr. Narbonne and geologists Hans Hofmann and James Aitken of the Geological Service in Montreal.

According to Mr. Narbonne, the anemones were roundish, grape-sized, multi-celled creatures that lived in muddy sea bottoms that geological upheaval turned into mountain ranges 20 million to 40 million years ago. The anemones shared their habitat with microscopic organisms and small plants.

Mr. Narbonne acknowledged that the discovery will not be unanimously accepted in the scientific community.

Nevertheless, Harvard University professor Andy Knoll, who heads an international committee that studys the pre-Cambrian period, gave the find his backing.

"I'll support their interpretation that these are older than the oldest standard record of animal fossils," Mr. Knoll said.

LONDON (DEC. 8) - Britain's Conservative Party has surged ahead of the opposition Labour Party in popularity and is now leading by eight points, according to results of a composite opinion poll announced by the BBC on Friday.

According to the BBC's "poll of polls," 47 per cent of those questioned said they supported the ruling Conservatives compared to 39 per cent for the Labour Party.

Last month, before Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher was ousted and replaced by John Major, the same poll gave a 14-point lead to the opposition party.

The poll is a synthesis of six separate opinion polls. The latest one was taken between November 21, the day after Mrs. Thatcher was forced into a second-round ballot for leadership of the Conservative Party, and December 3, nearly a week after Mr. Major took over.

The continued decline of the Conservative Party in the opinion polls after more than 11 years in power was one of the factors prompting the party revolt which led to Mrs. Thatcher's resignation in November.

The composite poll showed the centrist Liberal Democrats with 10 per cent of the vote, down from 14 per cent a month ago.

Support for the Green Party slipped two points, from four to two per cent.

CANCUN, Mexico (DEC. 7) - Oil-producing nations not belonging to the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) ended a two-day meeting here Friday expressing concern about the impact of the Gulf crisis on the world oil market.

The parley brought together representatives of Angola, Colombia, China, Egypt, Mexico, Norway, Oman, the Soviet Union, Malaysia and Yemen as well as from the U.S. states of Texas and Alaska and the Canadian province of Alberta.

These independent oil-exporting nations or areas together produce nearly 23 million barrels of oil a day.

In a joint communique, they said that, with an end of the Gulf crisis triggered by the August 2 invasion of Kuwait, excess oil production and a world economic slump could weaken the oil market in the first quarter of next year.

The participants also agreed to strengthen cooperation with OPEC to assess the future of the oil market, the communique said.

OPEC Secretary-General Dr. Subroto, who attended the final session of the conference, restated OPEC's commitment to closer ties with independent oil-exporting nations.

He announced that the next OPEC ministerial meeting, scheduled for Wednesday in Vienna, would approve creation of a joint working group to set up a data bank and standardize criteria to calculate production and exports.

The independent oil exporters agreed to hold their next meeting in Egypt early next June.

LONDON (DEC. 8) - A man was arrested Friday evening in the grounds of Buckingham Palace, London home of the British royal family, and has been charged with "going equipped for criminal damage," a police spokesman said.

Eugene Derek Smith, an Irish man of no fixed abode, is to appear before Bow Street magistrates Saturday morning, police said.

Mr. Smith was arrested earlier after setting off intruder alarms as he climbed over the Palace wall.

The Duke and Duchess of York were the only members of the royal family present at the Palace at the time. Police said they were in no danger.

In 1982, Michael Fagan, an unemployed painter, broke into the Queen's bedroom in the Palace. He sat on her bed and chatted with the Queen for half an hour before anyone came to her aid.

Since then millions of pounds have been spent on improving security at royal homes. But break-ins have continued, and earlier this year an Iranian was intercepted twice in the grounds of Kensington palace, home of the Prince and Princess of Wales.

Last year, detectives posing as IRA suspects exposed gaps in the security system by getting into Buckingham Palace.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) - The United States has decided to speed up distribution of military aid to El Salvador because of a surge in attacks by leftist rebels the State Department said Friday.

The department said in a written statement that it was also studying the rebel offensive, including the guerrillas' use of Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles and what the administration called their "inflexibility" in peace talks, to see if military aid withheld by Congress should be released.

Congress had cut military aid to El Salvador to 42.5 million dollars from a planned 85 million in fiscal 1991. The move was aimed in part at showing displeasure with suspected military involvement in the November 1989 murder of six Jesuit priests and two other people at a San Salvador university campus.

The aid withheld could be released if the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front (FMLN) launches an offensive that threatens to topple the government of President Alfredo Cristiani.

A total of 48.1 million dollars will be released to "allow the Salvadoran Government to replace equipment damaged in the recent guerrilla attacks, especially aircraft lost to surface-to-air missiles," the statement said.

Some 33.7 million dollars in the accelerated aid comes from the 1991 budget and 10.6 million dollars from money left over from the 1990 appropriation.

The rebels have shot down two airplanes and a helicopter since launching what they called a limited offensive two weeks ago. The attacks were part of a strategy to shore up their position in stalled talks with the government,the guerrillas said.

"We would much prefer to apply our aid toward peace," the State Department said. "However, the FMLN's recent attacks show that the guerrillas have not yet abandoned the idea of a military victory. Until they do, we will continue our military assistance to the Salvadoran Government."

U.N.-sponsored peace talks have deadlocked over rebel demands for a dismantling of the Salvadoran armed forces and trials for military personnel they acuse of human rights abuses.

PARIS (DEC. 8) - France is to check for radioactivity off a nuclear testing site in the Pacific and hand its samples over for independent analysis, after the environmental group Greenpeace said it found marine organisms in the area to be contaminated, officials said here Friday.

A Defense Ministry statement said samples would be taken as soon as possible in the area where the Greenpeace vessel Rainbow Warrior II had taken its own samples, off the Mururoa atoll in French Polynesia.

The samples would then be submitted to an "internationally recognized laboratory" for tests, the communique said.

Greenpeace activists aboard the Rainbow Warrior II said traces of the radioactive isotopes caesium-134 and cobalt-60 had been found in plankton taken 20 kilometers (12 miles) off Mururoa atoll.

The French Defense Ministry said that the Greenpeace analyses had been completed in "a suprisingly short time, given the usual complex procedures" of such testing.

It said the Greenpeace announcement stood in "formal contradiction with the results of very numerous tests regularly conducted by the French authorities."

The ministry rejected a Greenpeace offer to French Atomic Energy Commission scientists to check the results of its tests, because of the "uncertainty over the way the samples were taken."

Greenpeace has said it also plans to take plankton samples off Fangataufa atoll, another French nuclear testing site near Mururoa.

PARIS (DEC. 8) - In spite of the Gulf crisis and the resulting oil price explosion, the world economy is expected to remain on a "positive trend" thanks to continuing strong growth in Germany and Japan, an official of the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development said here Friday.

Speaking after presiding a two-day meeting of top OECD officials at the organisation's headquarters here, Germany's Hans Tietmeyer said that there was still "a certain floor to economic activity," thanks to "strong autonomous growth in Japan and Germany."

Mr. Tietmeyer, who is the number-two executive in the German Bundesbank, conceded that there were "uneven situations" among the OECD's 24 member states.

He outlined three different groups of countries, of which one comprised states "close to recession," such as Britain, Canada and the United States.

In another group, including Belgium, Germany and Japan, growth was accelerating, while in an intermediate group of countries, growth was going on at "a little bit slower pace."

On recent changes in exchange rates, the central bank official said that most of his colleagues in the OECD meeting were "of the opinion that till now the development (has been) orderly."

"Some felt the dollar may already be too weak but all agree that we have to monitor closely the further development and that the cooperation has to be maintained," Mr. Tietmeyer said.

"Some expressed the view that there could be some room for further appreciation of the yen," he added.

On inflation, he stressed that "the battle is not over."

"Further vigilance is necessary... There is no case for a relaxation of monetary policies, even in the strong countries where the inflation rate till now is under control, but there is a booming demand."

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) - The aircraft carrier USS Ranger and seven escort ships are to leave their California ports for the Gulf on Saturday, the Pentagon announced Friday.

The Ranger will join three other carriers already backing Operation Desert Shield, launched after the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. After Christmas, they will be joined by the USS America and the USS Theodore Roosevelt.

The new deployment brings the total number of U.S. ships in the region to more than 80.

The naval deployment is the largest since World War II. It includes six aircraft carriers, two battleships, missile cruisers, destroyers, frigates and supply ships, all patrolling the Gulf, the Arabian Sea and the Red Sea.

Analysts say submarines will likely augment the force. Usually one or two submarines travel with aircraft carriers to protect them and reconnoiter for them.

The Defense Department said that some members of the 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment have arrived in Saudi Arabia from their base in Nuremberg, Germany. The regiment numbers about 5,000, but the Pentagon has declined to say how many have arrived.

SEOUL (DEC. 7) EFE - An official North Korean newspaper Friday accused South Korea of trying to destroy developing relations between the two countries by building up an alliance of its own with the Soviet Union.

South Korean President Roh Tae Wu's visit this week to the Soviet Union where he signed trade and investment accords with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev was evidence of this, Pyongyang daily Rodong Sinmun said.

North Korea, a long-standing Soviet ally but increasingly isolated by reforms in the communist world, has proposed a joint seat for the two Koreas in the United Nations, with the representation alternating between North and South.

But the newspaper said Friday that U.S.-backed South Korea had bought friendship with the Soviet Union. Seoul promised aid and cash in exchange for diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, which were established in September to the annoyance of Pyongyang.

Now Seoul was seeking Soviet support for its independent entry into the United Nations, the newspaper said.

More outbursts from the North on its neighbor's relations with Moscow could endanger the third meeting between the prime ministers of North and South Korea slated for next week in Seoul, observers said.

The two men have not been seen since.

Rodriguez Gacha, known as El Mexicano, died in a shootout with Army and Police last December. In all some dlrs 42 million in cash and 160 gold bars was found hidden on his property.

JERUSALEM (DEC 7) EFE - With Palestinians preparing to mark the third anniversary of their "intifada" uprising Sunday, Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens warned of a crackdown if Arabs resort to using guns in the Occupied Territories.

The security forces will match "fire with fire," he said Thursday after visiting the scene of a gun attack the previous day in which three Israelis were wounded on a bus.

His warning came as Israel announced curfews for Sunday in much of the Occupied Territories, including the Gaza Strip, the towns of Nablus, Jenin and Hebron and several Palestinian refugee camps on the West Bank.

Palestinians have called a 48-hour general strike to begin Saturday, which will also commemorate the killing of 17 Palestinians by security forces in East Jerusalem two months earlier.

More than 1,000 Palestinians and some 50 Jews have been killed in the intifada.

Nearly 300 of the dead Palestinians were killed by fellow Arabs for allegedly collaborating with Israeli security forces.

The deputy mayor of Al Bire on the outskirts of Jerusalem was stabbed and seriously injured Thursday night. Arab sources said he was an Israeli collaborator.

Palestinians have usually restricted themselves to stabbings and throwing stones at security forces and civilians during the three-year-old intifada.

But Israeli state radio said Army officers were worried that militants could use the anniversary to step up the intifada by using guns more often.

Observers said next week's meeting in Washington between Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and U.S. President George Bush, and planned talks between the United States and Iraq on the Gulf crisis, might also prompt the Palestinians to take up arms in the Occupied Territories.

Several countries are pressing for the Palestinian question to be included in a United Nations-organized international peace conference on the Middle East, which would deal with Iraq's August invasion of Kuwait.

But Shamir said during a Thursday stop-over in London on his way to meet Bush that his government would not participate in such a conference.

"I don't believe that a foreign organization (the U.N.) can determine the destiny of the Israeli people," Shamir said.

Meanwhile, unconfirmed reports from Cairo said that U.N. Deputy General Secretary Jean Claude Aimee is expected to begin his long-awaited visit next week to investigate the plight of Palestinians living under Israeli control.

The Israeli press estimates that militant Palestinians have secret caches of some 10,000 weapons, which Army officers believe could soon be in use.

WARSAW (DEC 7) EFE - Lech Walesa, the trade union hero who toppled communism, was set to win Sunday's runoff presidential elections in Poland although there were signs that his once enormous popularity was fading.

Opinion polls still put him well ahead of candidate Stanislaw Tyminski, an emigre self-made millionaire and total stranger to the Polish political scene until two months ago.

Tyminski was the dark horse in the November 25 first round poll, a three-cornered struggle which included outgoing Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

But in a surprise result Tyminski, who has promised to sweep away austerity and convert Poland into a land of milk and honey, edged Mazowiecki out. The second poll is being held because none of the candidates, including Walesa who came first with 39.36 of the vote, obtained an absolute majority.

After the first flush of success, Tyminski was publicly accused of having links with former communist leaders and reports appeared in the Polish press suggesting that he had a murky past despite his success as an electronics businessman in Canada and Peru.

At a campaign rally earlier this week he was booed off the rostrum to chants of "KGB, KGB," which appeared to accuse him of past connections with the Soviet security police.

Some opponnents describe him as irresponsible and "mentally sick."

But Walesa can take little comfort from his rival's difficulties. Although forecast to sweep Sunday's poll with about 70 per cent of the poll, only 16 million of the 27 million eligible voters are expected to turn out.

Political observers said the high rate of absenteeisim -- 17 million voted in the first round -- reflected growing skepticism that Walesa was capable of solving deep economic problems.

"It is the end of the Walesa myth," said one, who pointed out that Walesa would be chosen by only 24 per cent of the electorate.

Critics say the problem lies in the weak aspect of his program which lacks concrete proposals for solving Poland's problems.

He has also contradicted himself in poorly-delivered campaign speeches which used over-simplified language, they say.

Observers noted that most of Walesa's votes in the first round came from the less-developed eastern and southeastern rural regions of Poland and not from the industrial cities, his traditional power base.

Walesa became a national hero when he created the Solidarity trade union movement in the port city of Gdansk 10 years ago and went on to oust the Communist government last year to set Poland on course for transformation to a free market, democratic society.

Associates accused him of wanting to be a "populist dictator president" after he announced he was standing for the presidency against Mazowiecki, a former protege who had gained prestige at home and abroad for his democratic reforms.

Mazowiecki has reluctantly thrown his support behind Walesa in Sunday's vote, calling him the "lesser of two evils."

Urging his followers to vote for Walesa, the prime minister said: "This doesn't mean I endorse his ideas or his style of politics, but there are situations in which we have to make a distasteful choice to stave off an even greater danger."

SANTIAGO (DEC 7) EFE - The pro-ecology group Greenpeace on Friday welcomed the shift in attitude at the recent meeting of Antarctic Treaty nations, but criticized the refusal of some members to approve plans to ban mining in the world's pristine southern wilderness.

"This meeting began with a number of countries arguing there was no concensus to prohibit mineral exploitation, and it finished with such prohibition as a starting point for the future round of talks," said Greenpeace spokesman Paul Bogart.

But some nations still failed to see the crucial need to control marine pollution or protect the Antarctic's flora and fauna, Bogart said.

The 18-day Antarctic Treaty meeting ended in Vina del Mar on Thursday with agreement on a draft of resolutions to protect the Antarctic's frozen wastelands.

The draft protocol will form the basis of the next round of talks, to be held in Madrid in April.

But proposals backed by Australia and France to declare Antarctica a wilderness reserved only for scientists and where mineral extraction would be banned forever were not approved.

Nor did the 200 delegates from 32 nations and several non- governmental organizations agree to impose a specific moratorium on mining, although they said such activity would be prohibited "for a long period of time."

Several industrialized nations, led by Britain and Japan, have argued that a mineral-exploitation option in Antarctica should be kept open for the future.

MOSCOW (DEC 7) EFE - The Soviet republic of Armenia will not attend a Congress of People's Deputies session this month to discuss the controversial new Treaty of the Union which aims to redefine relations between Moscow and the 15 republics, newspapers in the republic reported Friday.

They published a statement to President Mikhail Gorbachev from the republic's deputies saying they would not attend the next session of the congress, the Soviet Union's highest legislative body, which opens December 17.

Radio Moscow's Interfax service said the decision to boycott the session was approved at a meeting of Armenian deputies called to discuss the signing of the new federal treaty.

Gorbachev has drawn up the treaty in a bid to prevent the break up of the Soviet Union, which has been swept by a wave of independence movements pressing for varying degrees of autonomy.

Armenian deputies said the proposed treaty ran counter to the interests of the Transcaucasian republic which has already declared the sovereignty of its laws over those of the Soviet Union, Interfax reported.

The deputies also called on Soviet authorities to lift the state of emergency and to reestablish civilian power in the disputed Nagorno-Karabakh region which belongs to the neighboring republic of Azerbaijan but is populated mainly by Armenians.

SOFIA (DEC 7) EFE - Bulgarian caretaker Prime Minister Dimitar Popov said Friday, hours after lawmakers elected him to the post, that he wanted to soften the harsh economic reforms begun under former communist premier Andrei Lukanov, who resigned last week.

"In economics one has to act with reasonable and useful measures. I do not want a cruel future for Bulgaria, although our program will be difficult enough and surrounded by problems,"

It was Popov's first public statement since the Bulgarian parliament earlier Friday elected him to head a caretaker government that will lead the country to fresh elections next year.

Only 15 deputies in the 400-seat Grand National Assembly voted against Popov to replace Lukanov, whose Socialist government resigned last week under the pressure of a general strike and mounting opposition protests.

Popov, 63, now has a week to form a government which satisfies both the communist majority and the opposition.

"I will not form a provisional government but a strong government, made up of politicians competent in their ministerial posts as well as people of great social prestige, not militants in parliamentary forces," Popov said.

He said municipal elections would be held between the end of February and the beginning of March, to be followed by general elections in May or June of 1991.

Popov, who does not belong to any political party, presided over the Central Electoral Commission during Bulgaria's first free elections last June following the ouster of hardline Communist dictator Todor Zhivkov a year ago.

Popov promised to do everything in his power to improve the country's economic situation.

"I do not fear criticism, but you have to keep in mind that we have little time, between five or six months. I hope my government survives until then, but the idea that my (economic) experiment might fail does not overwhelm me," Popov said.

Despite winning a 10-seat majority in parliament in June elections, Lukanov's government formed by ex-communists saw its popularity slump in the face of serious food shortages and a worsening economic crisis.

Popov said his main task would be to stop the economy's "free-fall into an abyss" and promised a government "of hope but not one of miracles."

FROM THE BULLS:

After being bearish since August 1989, JOE GRANVILLE says this morning that he has just turned bullish. "We've broken out above 2580 on authoritative volume - that tells me this market is going to go higher," says Granville. The editor of the "Granville Market Letter" doesn't know how long his green light will be on: "It could flash off in January or February ... but right now I would definitely be a buyer of stocks." (CNN "Business Day", 12/7)

"Frankly, I don't think it's over," OPPENHEIMER's MICHAEL METZ says of recent market gains. "We still have undercommitted investors limiting their exposure. There is growing confidence that this will be a reasonably normal recession rather than open-ended economic collapse." He says IRAQI PRESIDENT SADDAM HUSSEIN's promise to release all hostages "was such an obvious sell signal" yesterday. "All the good news was out." But he says the bear market ended in October and "we've begun to build the base for the next bull market." (NYT and "Investor's Daily", 12/7)

FROM THE BEARS:

"We feel the market is at the upper end of a trading range and will probably work its way more toward 2400 [on the Dow] than to 2700," says JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA at GRUNTAL & CO. "We predicate that on the fact that the economy itself is weakening, it has not bottomed yet. The fourth-quarter GNP and the first-quarter GNP will be the worst of the recession, in our view, but it's too early to start the recovery process in stock prices." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 12/6)

STOCK MARKET:

Investors "got carried away on the upside, [yesterday]," says ROBERT ANTOLINI of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE. "You could get some things done once the idiocy of the opening was over." ("Investor's Daily", 12/7)

"I was sort of stunned that we ended down [yesterday]", says JOHN EBERLEY at CHICAGO CORP. "My guess is that [PRESIDENT] BUSH's posture of nothing less than absolute withdrawal [from Kuwait] spooked some people." ("The Washington Post", 12/7)

"After a very decent broad rally this week, stocks got to levels that scared some people," says NED COLLINS at DAIWA SECURITIES. ("USA Today", 12/7)

"There are other problems that the [stock] market has to deal with besides Iraq," says ROBERT JONES of GOLDMAN SACHS. "The economy is weak, the financial sector is weak. ... The market itself remains slightly overvalued." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/6)

"You could expect some profit taking and the news on the economics side was not good," says HUGH JOHNSON at FIRST ALBANY CORP. "But the fact that the market was not able to sustain the advance of the last four days suggests to me that higher stocks prices will be harder to come by." (NYT, 12/7)

"You had a market that had anticipated very favorable developments in the past few days and had become tremendously extended," says THOMAS GALLAGHER at OPPENHEIMER. "IBM and the biotech stocks had a lot to do with the selling and weakness in the bank stocks scared everybody a little, too," (WSJ, 12/7)

"The market is very much tuned into the Mideast," says LOUIS EHRENKRANTZ, research coordinator at LADENBURG THALMANN & CO. "If there is going to be a war then the market is going to go down to test those lows. If there is not, I think we've got a very good market looking ahead of us." If the resolution of the Middle East is perceived as a victory for the U.S., "I think you are looking at a market a year from now that is well over 3000." If the Saddam Hussein manages to hold onto his power base in Kuwait or some of the land he took "it will be a major defeat for us and I think you are looking at a market that will just limp around 2500 for a year." He says that the market bottomed at 2350 providing all goes well in the Middle East, and the market has discounted the weak corporate earnings. (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/6)

"The heavy cap stocks ... have been going up for quite awhile," says MICHAEL CARTY of VALUELINE. He says the smaller stocks are now catching up. "There's been quite a rally in the secondary markets," according to Carty. (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/6)

The early rally on the announcement of the release of the hostages "didn't last long because you had weakness in IBM, we also had some weakness in the bond market," says PETER GRENNAN of SHEARSON LEHMAN

BROTHERS. "It was a combination of factors." (CNN "Moneyline", 12/6)

STOCK TIPS:

LIFELINE SYSTEMS has experienced "a turnaround that is for real," says DAVID BENHAIM of ADAMS, HARKNESS & HILL. "Everything is falling into place and starting to click." Lifeline has seen two straight quarters of 500% growth. ("Investor's Daily", 12/7)

BILL MATTHEWS, editor of the "Cheap Investor" recommends buying LINDAL CEDAR HOMES, which has a "record net income for 9 months" and "both buyers and dealers have confidence" in the company. He also recommends PACER TECHNOLOGY, which he says "has aggressively expanded its market place" and first quarter earnings show a "vast improvement compared to last year." He reiterates a buy recommendation for HARCOR ENERGY which "has shown excellent increases in sales and net income" and "has just about doubled its assets." (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/7)

"I think this is a new Ma Bell," says SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS analyst MARIA LEWIS about AT&T's move to acquire NCR. "I think it knows what it wants and it goes out and gets it." DONALD SINSABAUGH of ERNST & CO. says he thinks "the true price is somewhere between" AT&T's offer of 90 per share and NCR's counter proposal of 125 per share. "As to whether they'll actually ever agree on that price is still an open question." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/6)

"The brokerage industry hires at the top and fires at the bottom," says a suddenly bullish JOE GRANVILLE. "I like the chart on BEAR STEARNS, I like the chart on PAINEWEBBER, I like the chart on MERRILL LYNCH." The editor of the "Granville Market Letter" likes bank stocks even more than the brokerage issues. His favorites: BANK OF BOSTON, MANUFACTURERS HANOVER, CHASE MANHATTAN and CHEMICAL BANK. (CNN "Business Day", 12/7)

Some of the institutional investors who control 62% of NCR stock expect the company to be sold for about 100 a share. "That's where this thing works out " says JACK TILTON, president of ANB INVESTMENT MANAGEMENT of Chicago, which controls about 400,000 NCR shares. "The stock we have, we're holding. There's very little downside risk at 92 3/4" where the stock closed yesterday. ("USA Today", 12/7)

ARGUS RESEARCH recommends buying AMERICAN CYANAMID because the "company will be much more health-care oriented" and "should warrant a significantly better

P/E multiple." Argus also likes INTEL which it says has "substantial upside potential for the long term" with very little downside risk at current levels. (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/7)

"I feel at this point, one should take a look at some nearby [oil] call options -- maybe January or February call options if they're 3 cheap, out-of-the-money call options," says PETER BEUTEL, energy director at PEGASUS ECONOMETRIC GROUP. "There is a possibility that when we go into negotiations [with Iraq] ... that those negotiations will fall apart and we will be back in a more tense situation. So we may have come down too quickly. I think I would take a look at the long side in a very cautious, conservative way - using options." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 12/6)

FALLS CHURCH, VA (DEC. 7) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"Yes, the [currency] market is embracing [IRAQI PRESIDENT SADDAM HUSSEIN's offer to release hostages] as a new development," says MARC COHEN at FUJI BANK. But he adds that the market is unwilling to "erase the entire war premium and then find out this is just posturing." KAREN KLUGE at CREDIT SUISSE in New York says, "People are still a little unsure what to do with the dollar. Do we still have to wait for full withdrawal before we can take away the war premium?" (WSJ, 12/7)

SADDAM HUSSEIN's offer to release the hostages he has held since August was "a sign war tensions were easing, and the dollar fell sharply," according to MARC CHANDLER of IDEA, who believes the dollar will lose the safe-haven support it has enjoyed in recent months if peace breaks out. By reducing the attractiveness of dollar- denominated securities, lower interest rates may further weaken the greenback, he says. Today's unemployment data "will confirm the slowdown of the U.S. economy and add pressure on the Federal Reserve to ease interest rates," says Chandler. ("Investor's Daily", 12/7)

BRIAN FABBRI, chief economist at MIDLAND MONTAGU ECONOMICS, says Middle East news was "the principle factor moving bond-market psychology" and that "economic fundamentals were put aside." Tough talk by SECRETARY OF STATE JAMES BAKER "threw some cold water on the market," he says. (WSJ, 12/7)

"I would hope [FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN] could do more" to lower interest rates, says REP. RICHARD GEPHARDT (D. - Missouri). "I realize there are countervailing reasons that sometimes make it difficult, but I hope he will keep trying." (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/6)

"I think interest rates are headed down," says DR. LACY HUNT, chief U.S. economist for the HONG KONG BANK. "I think, the biggest drop will be in the short term rates. There will also be a decline in the long term rates while the Federal Reserve is easing and that should continue until the early part of next year maybe even until the spring." (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/7)

"It's a very quiet [bond] market," says JAMES CAPRA at SHEARSON LEHMAN GOVERNMENT SECURITIES. "Caution and profit taking are the watchwords of the day. The market has come a long way and there is a big number [unemployment] on Friday. At this point people are unwilling to make purchases." (NYT, 12/7)

THE ECONOMY:

"Increased oil prices signify increased inflation, higher interest rates and a choking off of any kind of recovery we're going to have," says MICHAEL CARTY of VALUELINE. He says a weaker economy also could hurt both the stock and bond markets. (FNN "Marketwrap", 12/6)

"I think the inflationary pressures have now peaked and they are going to be decelerating," says DR. LACY HUNT, chief U.S. economist for the HONG KONG BANK. "The main driving factor now is the very significant recession that is under way now. It is knocking demand down." He is especially concerned about problems in the service sector. He says problems are being created by the lower dollar and higher cost of imports. "Demand is so weak we are going to see the inflation rate gradually move down," he says. He believes that the recession will not have a sharp, quick recovery. (CNBC "The Moneywheel", 12/7)

"If you look at [sales at] SEARS, WAL-MART, K-Mart, it tells you where people are," says CATHERINE COOPER at KEMPER FINANCIAL SERVICES. "Consumer confidence is down and sales look pretty sluggish. I don't see the country any more on sale than it was last year." ("The Washington Post", 12/7)

"Basically, the November [retail sales] numbers looked fairly similar to October's," says BRUCE MISSETT of OPPENHEIMER & CO. "At least we haven't seen any deterioration." ("Investor's Daily", 12/7)

Retail analyst WALTER LOEB, president of LOEB ASSOCIATES, looks for Christmas retail sales to be flat compared to a year ago and for that weakness to last of most of 1991. "I think it's very slow and consumers are really careful in how they spend this year," he says. "I expect that this will continue throughout the Christmas season and [that] very late in the Christmas season they will rush in and buy something because they will still try to buy for the family and give gifts." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 12/6)

"I think we'll continue to see mediocre sales through mid-December," says RICHARD NELSON at DUFF & PHELPS. "The last week to 10 days of the season will be very important to the retailers' full-year performance. The trend over the last few years has been toward later shopping and procrastinating. Retailers all expect this. ... I expect a lot of late buying. But that may not be enough to salvage the Christmas season." ("USA Today", 12/7)

"The overriding issue in the retail business is the economy," says JANET MONGANO at JESUP, JOSEPHTHAL & CO. "People's jobs are less secure and income isn't rising as much." (NYT, 12/7)

IN WASHINGTON:

The deficit for 1991 is expected to be $320 billion, and those numbers might be "a bit optimistic," according to ROBERT REISCHAUER, director of the CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET OFFICE. Without the S&L bailout costs, it would only be about $192 billion. (CNN "Moneyline", 12/6)

BILL WOLMAN, chief economist at "BusinessWeek" and "CNBC," suggests one possible "scenario" that has not been widely discussed is that PRESIDENT BUSH's move to talk to Iraq is basically an effort to diffuse a highly volatile "countdown" to war, which he says would have been "horrendous psychologically. The hullabaloo would have been really something. ... The thought crosses my mind that part of this ... is simply to confuse the issue, to make the issue less clear during this very critical season for the economy. ... I still believe the Bush position is non-negotiable. I don't think his political position is the least bit defensible in this country - or in the view of history - if he does anything other than insist on his original goals. ... I still rate the chances of war as quite high." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 12/6)

BOULDER, CO (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Satellite Information Systems Co. (SISCOM) (NASDAQ: SATI) today announced a contract to provide NBA Entertainment in New York with a NewsPro(TM) newsroom automation system. Value of the contract was not disclosed.

A division of the National Basketball Association, NBA Entertainment will use SISCOM's NewsPro system in its programming production for NBC, including a weekly entertainment series entitled "NBA Inside Stuff," which airs at 12:30 (EST) every Saturday during the NBA season. NBA Entertainment will also use NewsPro in its programming production for TNT. In addition, the company will use a modified version of SISCOM's Video Archive capability to manage its extensive video library, from which a dozen home videos per year are produced.

"The video library portion of the NBA installation is quite interesting when you consider there are more than 1,400 NBA games each year with an average of three hours of video tape per game," said Bob Turner, SISCOM's director of marketing. "Using NewsPro, NBA Entertainment can code each play of each game, allowing for fast and efficient retrieval of selected video clips for use in producing high quality feature programs."

Stephen Hellmuth, director of operations for NBA Entertainment, said, "We reviewed other software systems and our decision was an easy one. NewsPro offered us power and flexibility and was perfectly suited to our needs." Hellmuth said the NBA is using NewsPro in conjunction with Digital Equipment Corp. VAX computers. DEC has been the official computer vendor of the NBA since 1987, and SISCOM's close relationship with DEC figured into NBA Entertainment's decision to select NewsPro.

"The selection of NewsPro enabled us to use our existing hardware system," Hellmuth said. "The transition went smoothly and we're very happy with our relationship with SISCOM."

SISCOM NewsPro automates the editorial and production control aspects of broadcast news operations, and additionally provides information management facilities for use by organizations in the print media, public affairs, press relations and image industries.

EAST HANOVER, NJ (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Sandoz Pharmaceuticals said that as a result of a recent meeting with the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) and its own experience in operating the CLOZARIL Patient Management System (CPMS) the company has begun meeting with federal and state officials and health care providers to discuss potential changes in the monitoring system for CLOZARIL, the company's product for the treatment of schizophrenia.

The goal of these changes would be to increase patient access to CLOZARIL and significantly lower the price, the company said.

Sandoz also said that the new changes would open the weekly blood monitoring and drug distribution program to outside groups. Given these changes, the company said it would be unrealistic to assume that any new system would maintain the current high level of patient safety standards but every effort would be made to maximize patient safety. One of the safeguards would be the continuation of a national patient database, the company said.

David L. Winter, M.D., vice president, scientific and external affairs, said, Sandoz has amassed sufficient data and experience through CPMS to initiate a nationwide effort with health care providers and professional health care and advocacy organizations to discuss and implement new monitoring systems to meet the mandatory "no-blood, no drug" requirement associated with CLOZARIL therapy.

He said the company hopes to begin a phase-in of new systems in February 1991. CPMS will remain an active program during this period.

CLOZARIL is associated with an extremely high incidence of agranulocytosis, a potentially fatal blood disorder that leaves patients vulnerable to infection due to marked reduction in the white blood cell count.

CPMS was developed specifically to identify early evidence of white blood cell disorders, reducing the potential for fatal reactions through prompt drug-discontinuation. CPMS is a nationwide drug distribution system that links the supply of drug to the performance of a weekly blood test. It provides for prompt notification of test results to attending physicians, and incorporates a confidential, computerized patient data base.

CLOZARIL is the first significant antipsychotic agent for schizophrenia in over 20 years. CLOZARIL is indicated for severely ill schizophrenic patients who have failed to respond adequately to standard anti-psychotic therapy.

ANAHEIM, CA (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Carl Karcher Enterprises Inc. (NASDAQ: CARL) today reported net income of $2,073,000, equal to $.11 per fully diluted share, for the third fiscal quarter ended Nov. 5, 1990. Net income for the corresponding period last year was $4,054,000, or $.22 per fully diluted share. Revenues for the third quarter were $120,897,000 compared with $121,558,000 last year.

For the 40-week period, net income was $12,419,000 or $.68 per fully diluted share, compared with $14,460,000 or $.77 per fully diluted share last year. Year-to-date revenues rose to $403,018,000 from $393,298,000 for the first 40 weeks of the prior fiscal year.

Donald F. Karcher, president and chief operating officer, said the quarter's operating results reflect the overall slowdown in consumer spending and the resulting softness throughout the food service sector.

The company's operating earnings for the quarter, however, declined 15 percent a lower percentage than the overall earnings decline. Operating earnings were $6.8 million in the current quarter, compared with $8.0 million in the same period a year ago. The balance of the earnings decline is attributable to higher other revenues in the prior year period from real estate transactions, and a decrease in investment and other income and a lower effective tax rate for the current quarter. Investment and other income for the third quarter was $52,000 compared with $1,637,000 for the same period last year.

INDIANAPOLIS (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Hurco Companies, Inc. (NASDAQ: HURC) today reported annual earnings of $6,865,000, or $1.21 per share, on revenues of $97,169,000, compared to earnings of $8,221,000, or $1.70 per share, on revenues of $91,773,000 for the 1989 fiscal year. Fourth quarter 1990 earnings were $1,094,000 on revenues of $24,939,000, compared to earnings of $2,910,000 on revenues of $27,959,000 for the same period last year.

Backlog on Oct. 31, 1990, was $9,200,000 compared to the backlog of $19,900,000 on the same date last year. Orders for fiscal 1990 were $83,600,000, compared to orders of $93,700,000 for fiscal 1989. Fourth quarter orders were $23,200,000 compared to $26,100,000 for the same period a year ago.

The announced earnings represent the second highest annual results in the company's history. The primary causes of the lower earnings from 1989's record performance were increased investment in marketing and research and development projects and reduced gross margin resulting from price discounting in the U.S. and U.K. markets. "In light of the economic environment we faced in these major markets, we are pleased with the company's performance during fiscal 1990," said Brian D. McLaughlin, president and chief executive officer of Hurco Companies, Inc. "The company continued to increase its market share, primarily in the German, French and U.S. markets, and developed several new products which should provide significant future growth.

"The company's 1991 first quarter results will be under additional pressure. We face deepening recession in the U.S. and U.K. markets, and anticipate further erosion of gross margins. Expenses have been cut wherever possible, but commensurate reductions are unattainable due to long term commitments to essential programs in product development, customer service and marketing."

Hurco Companies, Inc. is one of the largest United States-based manufacturers of computer numerical control systems for machine tools. The company is based in Indianapolis and has additional manufacturing facilities in Detroit and High Wycombe, England. Its products are sold through 120 independent agents and distributors in the United States and 26 other countries. The company also has direct sales forces in the United States, the United Kingdom and West Germany.

HARLEYSVILLE, PA. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Harleysville Group Inc. (NASDAQ: HGIC), a regional insurance holding company, today announced plans to amend the intercompany pooling arrangement with Harleysville Mutual Insurance Co., effective Jan. 1, 1991, to respond to existing and anticipated changes in the corporate structure and business operations.

Under the amended agreement, Harleysville Group's subsidiaries will increase their total share of the underwriting pool from 50 percent to 60 percent. The pooling change reflects the addition of Harleysville Group's pending acquisitions -- New York Casualty Insurance Co. and Phoenix General Insurance Co. -- to the intercompany pool, and the removal of Harleysville Mutual's

Pennsylvania personal auto insurance business (approximately $35 million in annual written premiums) from the pool. The other terms of the pooling arrangement remain principally the same. Implementation of the amended agreement is subject to necessary state regulatory actions and consummation of the acquisitions.

"The contribution of Harleysville Group subsidiaries to the intercompany pool will be increased through the company's anticipated acquisition of New York Casualty and Phoenix General on January 1, 1991," explained Bradford W. Mitchell, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of Harleysville Group. "Based on results to date, we expect the two companies to write nearly $35 million of property and casualty insurance in 1990. We are particularly excited about expanding our presence in upstate New York, an area which has been traditionally profitable for regional insurers like Harleysville."

"At the same time, we have removed the uncertainty associated with Pennsylvania's personal auto insurance environment from Harleysville Group's results through the formation of a separate company to manage this business. Pennland Insurance Company -- a new, wholly owned subsidiary of Harleysville Mutual -- will write all of Pennsylvania's personal auto insurance and will not be included in the intercompany pool," Mitchell said.

Harleysville Group Inc. is a regional holding company for four property and casualty insurers whose marketing territory encompasses the entire East Coast. SECAUCUS, N.J. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Genlyte Group Inc. (NASDAQ: GLYT) today announced that it expects that sales for the fourth quarter will be approximately 15 percent lower than in the corresponding period last year and that fourth quarter net earnings would be approximately break-even. David E. Momot, president of Genlyte, attributed the anticipated lower sales and earnings to the continued decline in the U.S. and Canadian economies, and in particular their construction and retail markets. Momot stated that the Northeast regional weakness was continuing into the fourth quarter and was being followed by similar signs of weakening in other regions of the United States and in Canada. He added that market contraction had also resulted in increased selling price competition. Momot concluded by saying that the company had decided to restructure one of its manufacturing facilities and is reducing total Genlyte employment by approximately 9 percent during the fourth quarter.

In second quarter 1990, the firms reported an after-tax profit of $467 million.

For the first nine months of 1990 the firms reported a profit after taxes of $22 million on revenues of $40.757 billion. Expenses were $40.723 billion; net income before taxes was $34 million.

This is a decrease of 98.3 percent from the after-tax profit of $1.276 billion in the first nine months of 1989, during which the firms reported $45.093 billion in revenues and $43.159 billion in expenses. Net income before taxes for January to September 1989 was $1.934 billion.

Revenues in the 1990 third quarter fell to $13.088 billion, down 13.4 percent from third quarter 1989 revenues of $15.106 billion in third quarter 1989. Second quarter 1990 revenues were $14.153 billion.

The third quarter 1990 after-tax loss represented a 1.4 percent annual loss on the member firms' average net worth of $36.460 billion during the period. In third quarter 1989, after-tax profit represented a 4.8 percent annual return on the member firms' average net worth of $39.128 billion during the period. Second quarter 1990 produced a 5.0 percent annual return on average net worth of $37.563 billion.

Expenses for the third quarter fell 7.8 percent to $13.276 billion, from $14.393 billion in the same quarter last year. Second quarter 1990 expenses were $13.445 billion.

The NYSE said about 48 percent of the 334 firms reporting for the quarter were profitable. The 161 profitable firms reported aggregate pre-tax earnings of $445 million; the 173 unprofitable firms reported an aggregate loss of $633 million before taxes.

The figures collected by the NYSE include revenue from all sources, including trading, interest and commission income.

Since the NYSE member firm community is made up of corporations and partnerships, after-tax earnings are presented on a pro-forma basis assuming a regular corporate tax rate or credit of 34 percent.

Commission revenues amounted to 17.5 percent of total member firm revenue of $13.088 billion in third quarter 1990, an increase from 17.0 percent for third quarter 1989 and 16.1 percent in second quarter 1990.

The NYSE also reported that during the third quarter 1990, member firms' assets -- which include cash, receivables, securities and property -- rose 1.5 percent from the same quarter last year to $552.237 billion. Third-quarter 1989 assets were $544.069 billion; second quarter 1990s assets were $526.597 billion.

Capital -- ownership equity and subordinated liabilities -- fell 8.1 percent from a year ago to $36.078 billion. Third quarter 1989s level was $39.252 billion. Second quarter 1990 capital was $36.843 billion.

American's RPMs are also up 4.8 percent for the first 11 months of 1990 at 70.74 billion.

Based on revenue passenger miles; American is the nation's largest airline, both for the month and for the year-to-date.

Available seat miles for November were 10.34 billion, an increase of 8.2 percent compared to November, 1989. November load factor was 59.7 percent, down 1.1 point.

Traffic on international routes grew 33.6 percent from a year ago, while domestic traffic increased 1.5 percent.

"International traffic continues to pace the airline's growth," said Michael W. Gunn, American's senior vice president-marketing. "South and Central America, Australia, and international Caribbean routes were especially strong."

In addition, American's Cargo division continued its record-setting growth pattern with 68.73 million freight ton miles beating 1989's number by 21.1 percent.

"The continued double-digit growth of American's cargo business is further proof that our customers see us as the leader in providing high- quality and reliable cargo services," said William R. Boesch, American's cargo division president.

Despite the 1.5 percent increase in domestic RPMs, there were several areas of strength. The Sunday after Thanksgiving was the ninth busiest day in American's history, and hubs at Nashville, Raleigh- Durham, and Miami showed substantial growth over last year.

Dividend Declared At the meeting of the Board of Directors held today, the Board declared a quarterly dividend on Common Stock of 42 cents per share. The dividend is payable January 15, 1991, to holders of record at the close of business on December 26, 1990.

NOTE: The period-to-period comparison of increases or decreases in operating revenues is not a valid or reliable indication of the Company's operations. Since 1986, changes in Federal and state regulations have allowed the Company to transport gas volumes purchased directly from producers by large industrial customers. In general, the margin earned on gas transported is equal to the margin earned on gas sold; however, transportation which replaces sales results in lower revenues since transportation rates exclude the commodity cost of gas which is paid by the customer directly to the supplier. Therefore gas volumes delivered, margin earned, net income and earnings per share should be used to compare period-to-period operating results of the Company.

ROCHESTER, NY (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Eastman Kodak Company (NYSE: EK) today announced that two managers in its Consumer Imaging Division have been appointed to lead the division's efforts in traditional and electronic products.

John M. Babbitt has been named general manager, Worldwide Photographic Imaging Systems. He will direct the strategic planning units responsible for color film, paper, and chemicals, and for photographic equipment.

Babbitt previously served as manager of the Worldwide Strategic Planning Unit for color films. He has been with Kodak since 1969.

Stephen S. Stepnes has been appointed general manager, Worldwide Electronic Imaging Systems. Stepnes formerly served as manager of New Business Development and launched Kodak's Photo CD program. He will oversee Worldwide Strategic Planning for image transmission, thermal, video, and Photo CD products, as well as for batteries. Stepnes resides in Pittsford, N.Y. and has 23 years of Kodak service.

"The creation of these two positions will help sharpen our focus on the customer," said Peter M. Palermo, Kodak vice president and general manager of the Consumer Imaging Division. "It will also enable us to capitalize on the synergy that exists between silver-halide and electronic technologies. Photo CD is a good example of this type of synergy."

The Photo CD system, announced in September and available in 1992, will allow 35 mm images to be scanned and written on compact discs. The pictures then can be played back on television with a Kodak Photo CD player.

Because it uses film to capture images, Photo CD offers quality that is far superior to that of conventional electronic still photography systems.

"Kodak has stated its intention to be the best in both chemical and electronic imaging," Palermo noted. "These new positions will help move us closer to our goal."

HOUSTON (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Oshman's Sporting Goods Inc. (NASDAQ: OSHM), today reported results for the third quarter and the nine months ended Nov. 3, 1990.

Third Quarter Results: Sales: $68,836,000 this year versus $67,985,000 last year. Net loss: ($2,768,000) this year versus ($2,088,000) last year. Loss per share: ($.48) this year versus ($.36) last year.

Nine Months Results: Sales: $221,291,000 this year versus $208,479,000 last year. Net loss: ($4,382,000) this year versus ($3,892,000) last year. Loss per share: ($.76) this year versus ($.67) last year.

Alvin N. Lubetkin, chief executive officer, stated that same store sales declined 2.8 percent while total sales increased 1.3 percent during the third quarter. For the nine months same store sales reflect an increase of 1.4 percent and total sales increased 6.1 percent.

Sales in the third quarter were adversely impacted by the general economic downturn. In addition, unseasonably warm weather in the Western United States contributed to a significant loss in sales of ski clothing and equipment in the California stores. Unfortunately, this warm weather trend has continued into the fourth quarter as well.

Given the current economic conditions and extreme competition for the customers dollars, the Company does not expect the final quarter to be sufficiently profitable to allow us to earn a profit for the full year.

During the quarter, the Company opened one, and closed two stores. In mid-November the Company opened its second SuperSports USA store. Initial sales for this 80,000 square foot store in Austin, Texas are exceeding projections.

At the end of the quarter, Oshman's was operating 192 stores compared to 193 at the previous year end.

On Dec. 6, 1990, the board of director's of Oshman's Sporting Goods Inc. declared a regular dividend of five cents ($.05) per share to all common stock shareholders of record on Dec. 28, 1990 with the dividend to be payable on Jan. 11, 1991.

PULASKI, VA. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Pulaski Furniture Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: PLFC) today reported operating results for the fiscal year and for the fourth quarter ended Oct. 28, 1990, and compared them with the 1989 results as follows:

PULASKI FURNITURE CORPORATION
(In thousands)

	Fourth Quarter		Year
	Oct. 28, 1990	Oct. 29, 1989	Oct. 28, 1990	Oct. 29 1989
Net sales	$46,225	$48,240	$132,454	$131,817
Income before income taxes	3,292	5,252	7,874	9,826
Net income	2,302	3,244	5,184	6,176
Earnings per share	$0.81	$1.13	$1.81	$2.15

The increase in sales for the fiscal year ended Oct. 28, 1990, was primarily attributable to the contribution to sales by the Accentrics division, which began operations at the beginning of fiscal 1990.

The lower fourth quarter, 1990 sales was the result of continuing industry softness and the lower demand for household furniture. There is no evidence of any increase in demand, which will also impact the sales and earnings for the first quarter of fiscal 1991.

The lower earnings in the 1990 quarter and fiscal 1990 are related to the deterioration of the demand for household furniture and the resulting reduced work schedules in some of the manufacturing divisions.

The board of directors at its Dec. 7, 1990, meeting authorized the purchase by the corporation of up to 200,000 shares of its common stock presently outstanding.

The board also approved increasing the quarterly dividend from 12 cents to 13 cents per common share, payable on Jan. 2, 1991, to stockholders of record on Dec. 18, 1990.

BALTIMORE (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - IBM and the National Urban League today announced the formation of Drugs Destroy Dreams - A Youth Drug Intervention Program that will be implemented in Baltimore and seven other cities beginning Jan. 1.

The $1.4 million pilot program is aimed at alcohol and substance abuse by youth at risk. Working with Urban League affiliates across the country, IBM employees and retired volunteers will work as instructors and mentors to teach drug prevention and early intervention to youngsters aged 12 to 16.

The substance abuse curriculum will be taught in three-month sessions in the eight cities. Besides Baltimore, these include Detroit; Columbia, S.C.; Providence, R.I.; Tucson, Ariz.; Tacoma; Wash.; Akron, Ohio; and Tampa, Fla.

Besides students, the program will involve parents, school officials, business leaders and community groups. It will be funded over the next three years.

John E. Jacob, president and chief executive officer, National Urban League, told a news conference here, "The dreams of our young people must not be destroyed by drugs. With the help of IBM, we are aiming this innovative drug program at one of our nation's greatest challenges."

"As business people, citizens, and parents, IBM is committed to helping our youth achieve their fullest potential," said Gerald W. Ebker, IBM vice president and president, federal sector division. "Our partnership with the National Urban League allows us to combine their expertise and IBM employee skills and talents to help our youth succeed in school and in life."

IBM spent about $60 million worldwide last year in support for a wide variety of educational programs. The curriculum of the drug prevention program has four main parts: Saying Yes and Saying No, Managing Tension, Peer Pressure and Decision Making, and Building Self-Esteem.

Students will be encouraged to develop community spirit and organize into peer counseling teams. Parents will review the curriculum and receive information on methods of reinforcing the drug-free message within their homes.

SEATTLE (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - With yesterday's Cargolux order of three 747-400s, total 747 announcements for the year reached 170, double that of 1966, Boeing's previous record year when 85 were ordered, the company announced today.

Also, for the first time in 1990, more orders have been announced for the 747 than for the 737 which dominated Boeing order books every year since 1980 when it overtook the 727. So far in 1990, orders for 155 Boeing 737s have been recorded.

The 747-400 also has become the most ordered-type of 747, surpassing the 747-200. In the five years since its announcement, the 747-400 has recorded 397 orders, four more than the 747-200, mainstay of the superjet fleet for nearly 20 years. Orders for all variations of the 747-200, including freighters, combis and special derivatives, reached 393 before Boeing stopped taking orders for them.

In 1966, when the 747 was introduced to the world, Boeing took 83 orders for the its first offering, the 747-100, and two for the 747-200.

Pan American World Airways was the first to order the 747 in 1966 with 10 other customers placing 747 orders that year. British Airways, Japan Airlines and United Airlines are the only 1990 747 customers who also purchased 747s in 1966.

When first offered, the 747-100 cost those 11 customers $21 million each. This year, 17 customers have ordered the new technology 747-400 which costs from $125 million to $147 million, depending on options.

Since its introduction, the 747-400 has been ordered by 30 customers who will operate the newest version of the 747 well into the next century.

The 747-400 incorporates evolving technology in aerodynamics, structural materials, avionics and interior design into what is one of the world's most modern and fuel efficient airliners. Flown by a crew of two instead of the three required by earlier 747s, the 747-400 can carry as many as 400 passengers in a roomy three-class configuration more than 8,000 miles.

MILWAUKEE, WIS (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Miller Brewing Company's Sharp's has emerged as the best-selling non-alcohol brew in the United States, capturing almost one-third of all category sales, just a year after its national introduction.

According to a copyrighted article in the December issue of Market Watch, a leading beverage industry publication, Sharp's has secured the category lead with an estimated 30.3 percent of the U.S. non-alcohol market. The publication estimates Sharp's will ship close to 400,000 barrels in 1990, outdistancing its closest competitors, O'Doul's, from Anheuser-Busch and G. Heileman Brewing Company's Kingsbury.

According to Market Watch, O'Doul's will ship close to 239,000 barrels and hold an estimated 18.2 percent market share. Following O'Doul's is Kingsbury, the former category leader, which the publication estimates will ship 236,000 barrels and hold a 17.9 percent market share.

Rick Burton, Sharp's brand manager, acknowledged Sharp's category leadership position.

"We've had a record-breaking year for Sharp's, thanks to consumers who have discovered our breakthrough beer taste," said Burton. "Last year at this time the jury still was out on the viability of the non- alcohol-brew category. But this year, the verdict is in and it is especially gratifying to see that beer drinkers have made Sharp's their top choice."

The non-alcohol-brew category has grown at a rate of 10-15 percent each of the past five years, but in 1990, growth has skyrocketed. Current trends indicate the overall category volume will increase nearly 90 percent in 1990, according to Market Watch's copyrighted Impact Databank figures.

Sharp's, which has 68 calories per 12-oz. serving, is available in 12-oz. bottles and 12-oz. cans. By federal regulation, non-alcohol brews contain less than .5 percent of alcohol by volume.

Miller is a wholly owned subsidiary of Philip Morris Companies Inc. Principal beer brands include Miller High Life, Miller Lite, Miller Genuine Draft, Lowenbrau, Magnum, Meister Brau and Milwaukee's Best. Miller also produces Sharp's, a non-alcoholic brew.

JACKSON, MI (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - CMS Energy Corporation's (NYSE: CMS) oil and gas exploration unit, Nomeco Oil & Gas Co., today announced formation of a joint venture with Tatham Offshore, Inc. (TOI) and American Hunter Exploration Ltd. for a major oil and gas development project in the Gulf of Mexico. The announcement caps off a year of substantial activity for Nomeco in the Gulf of Mexico.

TOI, a subsidiary of DeepTech International, will operate the project in the Gulf of Mexico flextrend commencing an initial well this month. The joint venture is for the exploration and development of the six-block Federal Exploratory Unit, Ewing Bank Block 915. The prospect unit is located in water depths of 1,000 feet to 1,400 feet. Nomeco has the right to earn up to a 25-percent working interest in the blocks.

The first well will be drilled to 10,300 feet at a location in Ewing Bank Block 914 and should require 45 days to reach total depth. A successful completion of the first well will result in additional drilling in 1991.

The joint venture partners plan a project development program that includes accelerated production schedules, utilizing some of the alternative development techniques employed worldwide and now making their way into Gulf of Mexico projects.

Eventual development of the prospects on the six-block unit could include several satellite fields and employ a conventional platform, subsea completion and tie-backs, and a floating production system.

Nomeco had previously announced its return to activity in the Gulf of Mexico in 1989 and it began its offshore drilling program this year after participating with other partners in Federal OCS lease sales in 1989 and 1990.

Nomeco is engaged in a broad-based exploration program in the Gulf, with its working interest ranging from 25 percent to 33 percent in 23 federal tracts. The company's total expenditure for all tracts to date is $9.0 million.

Nomeco President and Chief Executive Officer Richard J. Burgess said, "New technology, a trend toward lower acreage and drilling costs, the likelihood of a strong surge in demand for natural gas as the fuel of the future, and the belief that gas prices will strengthen are all factors behind our renewed interest in the Gulf of Mexico."

DEERFIELD, IL (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Xtramedics, Inc. (NASDAQ: XMED) today announced the signing of a letter of intent with an investor group, in the process of forming a privately-held company managed by former executives of feminine consumer products companies, to distribute Xtramedics' Fresh 'n Fit Padettes exclusively in the United States and Canada. A definitive distribution agreement with the distributor is being negotiated.

Under the letter of intent, Xtramedics will manufacture the product for the distributor on a cost plus arrangement. To keep the distribution rights, the distributor must commit at least $470,000 of cash and services within six months of signing the final agreement for the development and testing of new product packaging and advertising for a mini-rollout of the product.

Thereafter, the distributor will be required to spend minimum annual amounts for marketing the product and must meet minimum purchase requirements from Xtramedics. Additionally, the distributor will advance Xtramedics funds for working capital to pay for inventory buildup as required.

Bruce N. Barron, CEO of Xtramedics, said, "Since Xtramedics does not have the resources necessary to fully take advantage of the Fresh 'n Fit Padette opportunity, we are fortunate to have reached this preliminary agreement. Although the distributor is a new entity, its management has many years of experience with large U.S. companies marketing feminine consumer products."

Steven Marcus, acting president of the distributor, said, "The signing of the letter of intent is an important first step in the process which hopefully will lead to expanded distribution of Fresh 'n Fit Padettes. We have already begun preliminary work on the market research for Fresh 'n Fit Padettes and look forward to this opportunity."

While a definitive agreement is currently being drafted there is no assurance as to when and if the transaction will be completed.

Xtramedics currently markets Fresh 'n Fit Padettes in a test market in Tallahassee, Fla. The Padette is made of sanitary, absorbent material and is about the size of one's little finger. It is intended to fill a need between internally worn tampons and externally worn sanitary napkins, pads and pantyliners.

Consolidated revenues for the 39 weeks and 13 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, increased to $29,882,000 and $9,563,000, respectively, as compared to $27,695,000 and $9,171,000 for the same periods last year. The net loss for the 39 weeks and 13 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, was $487,000 (21 cent loss per share) and $334,000 (14 cent loss per share), respectively, as compared to net income for the 39 weeks and net loss for the 13 weeks ended Oct. 28, 1989, of $426,000 (17 cents per share) and $300,000 (12 cents loss per share), respectively. Revenues and net loss for the 39 weeks and 13 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, includes accrued interest income of $400,000 relating to certain income tax refunds, where realization of such amount is assured. A gain of $599,000 relating to the settlement of certain pension obligations is included in net income for the 39 weeks ended Oct. 28, 1989. The company's net loss for the 39 weeks and 13 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, is primarily the result of additional selling, general and administrative expenses as well as additional interest expense.

The increase in revenues for the 39 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, as compared to the prior year is attributable to an increase in sales in the retail division primarily resulting from the company's two new retail stores opened in the second quarter of the prior year and a retail outlet store in Secaucus, N.J., opened in February 1990. Commission income for the food division also increased for the 39 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, as compared to the prior year, due to the addition of new principals as well as new product introductions from existing principals. Revenues for both the retail and food division remained unchanged for the 13 weeks ended Oct. 27, 1990, as compared to the prior year.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Banyan Corp. (AMEX: BYC) today announced it was seeking approval of its stockholders for an amendment to its Certificate of Incorporation that would restrict certain transfers of its common stock. The board of directors has approved the amendment in an attempt to protect certain federal income tax benefits.

The company stated that the charter amendment would restrict transfers of the company's capital stock that might otherwise result in the imposition of limitations on the use for federal income tax purposes of the company's carry-forward of net operating losses and credits, which as of the end of its fiscal year ended June 2, 1990, approximated $31 million.

The application of this amendment will require owners of more than 4.75 percent in aggregate value of the company's then outstanding capital stock which contemplate additional purchases and entities or groups which as a result of the contemplated purchases would own in excess of 4.75 percent of the company's outstanding stock to obtain approval of the board of directors prior to the purchase of such stock. If such approval is not obtained the transfer in excess of 4.75 percent will be void. Changes in ownership in excess of this percentage could result in the limitation of the company's ability to use its existing and future loss carryforwards and credits.

The amendment will be presented to the stockholders for approval, along with the election of directors, at its annual meeting set for Jan. 14, 1991. Proxy materials explaining these matters are being distributed to stockholders.

LA JOLLA, CA (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Marrow-Tech Inc. (NASDAQ: MAROA, MAROZ) announced today that data from a study reporting the successful use of its proprietary three-dimensional bone marrow culture system to produce Natural Killer Cells was presented this week at the American Society of Hematology meeting in Boston. The presentation was conducted by Amin Tjota, M.D., Ph.D., of the Children's Hospital of Buffalo.

Natural Killer (N.K.) cells are an important component of the immune surveillance system which are capable of killing a wide variety of tumor targets. Conventional clinical therapy utilizing N.K. cells to kill solid tumors is limited by the inability to harvest sufficient numbers of cells for effective treatment. Research data presented by Tjota indicates that Marrow-Tech's three-dimensional culture system makes possible the long-term continued proliferation of N.K. cells which retain the ability to kill tumor cells in vitro. Commenting on the significance of the study, Tjota said, "The Marrow-Tech culture system enhances the numbers of active Natural Killer Cells. Use of this system for N.K. cell production has the potential of allowing more effective tumor kill in patients." Tjota and Marrow-Tech scientists will continue to examine in vivo tumor kill by N.K. cells produced in three- dimensions.

Marrow-Tech is engaged in the growth of human tissue outside the body. The company's proprietary tissue culture system has a number of potential therapeutic and laboratory applications. To date, the company has successfully grown bone marrow, skin and liver tissue. The company was recently granted FDA approval to commence clinical trials on DermaGraft(TM), a living dermal replacement for use in the treatment of burn patients.

NORCROSS, GA (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - CytRx Corp. (NASDAQ: CYTR) today announced the introduction of Hunter's TiterMax(TM), an immunologic adjuvant for the basic research community.

TiterMax(TM) is the first product of CytRx's own technology. CytRx is rapidly developing technology for vaccine adjuvants.

Jack Luchese, CytRx president and CEO, said, "Hunter's TiterMax(TM) finally provides scientists with a reliable alternative to Freund's Complete Adjuvant. Scientists, technicians and animal care committees want an adjuvant which is safer, more productive and easier to use than Freund's," said Luchese. "We believe Hunter's TiterMax(TM) is the answer. It produces high antibody titer levels and offers low toxicity. It entraps almost any antigen in a water-in-oil emulsion, so it's extremely reliable. TiterMax(TM) is cost effective because higher titers can be achieved with fewer injections in a shorter period of time."

TiterMax(TM) was developed by Robert L. Hunter, M.D., Ph.D., professor of pathology at Emory University in Atlanta and vice president of research of CytRx. He has conducted adjuvant research for more than 20 years. TiterMax(TM) was developed in response to the basic research community's need for a more reliable alternative with less toxicity. "The TiterMax(TM) formulation was selected from over 200 experimental formulations because it consistently produced higher titers than Freund's with much lower toxicity," Hunter said. "It combines the advantages of a stable, metabolizable water-in-oil emulsion with the potent adjuvant activity of CytRx's new block copolymer."

DAYTON, OH (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - In a Dec. 5 letter to AT&T (NYSE: T)

Chairman Robert E. Allen, NCR (NYSE: NCR) Chairman Chuck Exley said, "NCR is prepared to commence negotiations if AT&T offers to pay not less than $125 per NCR share." Exley has responded to questions regarding that statement.

Q. Does the fact that the Board set $125 per share as the "full and fair value" for NCR shares mean that NCR is for sale?

A. "No. In the name of rationality and in recognition of its fiduciary responsibility to NCR shareholders, the Board felt obligated to set a "full value" price for shares. It would be preposterous for us to say there is no price we would accept. The fact that the Board set a price does not mean that we want to sell the company -- the company is not for sale.

"We want AT&T to go away and leave us alone so that we can get on with our new product programs, which represent a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to revolutionize the computer industry. If we are to realize NCR's extraordinary potential, we must be free to dedicate all our energies and resources to the task at hand."

Q. Some analysts are saying that this is part of the negotiation process.

A. "This is not a negotiating tactic. The "full and fair value" has been set by the Board at $125 per share -- not $124.50 or anything less.

"At the same time the Board has said that if AT&T cannot offer NCR shareholders this fair value, NCR will use every means at its disposal to protect NCR shareholders and other stakeholders against this hostile takeover attempt."

Q. AT&T has called NCR's full value price "outrageous." A. "In my letter of December 5, I told Mr. Allen that we will provide AT&T with non-public information concerning NCR to support that price if, and only if, AT&T enters into a customary confidentiality and standstill agreement providing appropriate assurance that if AT&T refuses to go forward at that price level, it would immediately terminate its effort to acquire NCR.

"If AT&T finds $125 per share outrageous, that's fine with us. We want them to go away and leave us alone."

ANN ARBOR, MICH. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - InterFirst Bankcorp, Inc. (NASDAQ: INFB), holding company for InterFirst Federal Savings Bank, today reported that the net income of the bank was $262,664 for the third quarter of 1990, as compared to a loss of $82,675 during the same period last year. The change in net income was primarily the result of a $405,936 before-tax gain on sale of loan servicing during the quarter.

According to Stanley H. Rhodes, chairman and chief executive officer, "This quarter's income reflects the sale of loan servicing which is a fundamental and recurring element of InterFirst's mortgage banking business."

The gain on servicing resulted from the sale of $28,478,643 of loan servicing at a gross price of $454,436. After the sale of servicing, the portfolio of loans serviced for others decreased only slightly from $294,655,943 to $293,291,592 during the quarter. Retained income for the bank increased to $5,860,381 as of Sept. 30, 1990.

InterFirst converted to a stock institution on Nov. 9, 1990, through the issue of 257,399 shares of common stock to the public at a price of $8 per share. First of Michigan Corporation advised the bank and assisted in the sale of the stock which raised $2,059,192 in gross proceeds. Based on net proceeds of $1,451,584, the pro forma stockholder's equity of the bank as of Sept. 30, 1990, was $28.41. The bank's third-quarter earnings equate to $1.02 per share of outstanding stock, or $1.11 per share, on a pro forma basis (assuming investment of the proceeds from the bank's conversion).

"InterFirst's net interest income also increased significantly," said Rhodes. Net interest income increased from $621,154 in the third quarter of 1989 to $774,438 in the current quarter, an increase of 25 percent. "This increase is a result of an increase in the asset size of the bank as well as a more favorable interest rate climate," according to Rhodes, "and reflects the increasing core income at InterFirst."

Non-interest expense increased from $694,267 for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1989, to $1,045,963 for the quarter ended Sept. 30, 1990. "This change is due primarily to an increase in the number of employees at the bank needed to support our increased asset size and also the new branch office that has recently been opened in Ann Arbor," Rhodes said.

The bank had no real estate owned (foreclosed loans) as of Sept. 30, 1990, and non-performing loans as a percentage of assets decreased from 0.49 percent to 0.38 percent from Sept. 30, 1989, to Sept. 30, 1990.

InterFirst Bankcorp, Inc., through its subsidiary, InterFirst Federal Savings Bank, operates five branch offices in Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Ypsilanti Township Milan and Saline, Mich., and provides mortgage banking services from its corporate headquarters in Ann Arbor.

CROYDON, UNITED KINGDOM (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - United Artists Communications, the United Kingdom's largest cable television operator, has today proved it is one step ahead of the telecommunications market with the launch of a quality alternative business telephone service in Croydon.

The move into telephone service comes just three weeks after the publication of the duopoly review and confirms the company's expectations of a more open marketplace for telecommunications. The duopoly review was a government review and recommendation of action for the liberalizing of the United Kingdom's telecommunications marketplace.

In addition, United Artists believes it represents the biggest opportunity for consumer choice yet offered by a cable operator in the United Kingdom.

United Artists Communications is a subsidiary of United Artists Entertainment of Denver, the third largest cable television operator in the United States. U S WEST Cable Communications, a subsidiary of U S WEST Inc. of Englewood, Colo., also is a partner in the Croydon franchise.

Introduced initially in the central Croydon business district, the service is currently being extended to the boroughs of Sutton, Merton, Kingston and Richmond and will eventually be available to 400,000 other homes and businesses in the area. It will also be made available to other United Artists' U.K. franchises, including Avon, South Essex, the Medway towns, Edinburgh and the Cotswolds.

Croydon is now recognized as the country's seventh largest commercial center, home to 10,000 businesses occupying 3.5 million square feet of space.

Commenting on the initiative, Stephen Horsley, general manager of United Artists Communications' south London operation, said: "Croydon is only the beginning. We have already started to offer telephony to the Sutton residential community and are currently extending the service throughout our remaining London South franchises.

The Croydon telephony service will offer a local loop of high-quality digital telephone and facsimile lines, which, by linking through Mercury Communications' national and international network, can call anywhere in the world. United Artists is also committed to providing a greater degree of service than is currently being offered.

The service offers a number of benefits, including: -- Connection typically within five working days. -- Response to problems within two working hours. -- Fiber optic digital technology for perfect call clarity. -- Itemized and monthly billing, for added control. -- Low-cost installation. -- Significant call charge savings. -- Choice of supply.

CHICAGO (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Midway Airlines (NYSE: MDW) today announced that it has concluded the sale to USAir (NYSE: U) of its leasehold assets at Philadelphia International Airport, according to David R. Hinson, chairman and chief executive officer.

The transaction includes the sale of Midway's terminal, cargo and other facilities and equipment at Philadelphia International Airport, its route authority in the Philadelphia-Toronto and Philadelphia-Montreal markets and USAir's assumption of certain air traffic liabilities. The transfer of the Canadian route authority will be completed following receipt of approvals by the United States and Canadian regulatory authorities.

In the transaction the company received $39.5 million in cash at the closing, with an additional $20 million to be paid on May 1, 1991 and $5 million to be paid on transfer of the Canadian route authority.

"The sale of the Philadelphia assets is the linchpin of the company's strategic plan to refocus operations at its Midway Airport hub and return to profitability," said Hinson.

"While the establishment of the hub at Philadelphia in November 1989 was the right move at the time, unprecedented increases in the cost of aviation fuel have made this operational redeployment necessary," he said.

According to Hinson, over the next five months Midway will gradually withdraw flights from its Philadelphia hub to minimize disruption and to insure that the thousands of passengers now ticketed on Midway are accommodated.

Thereafter, Midway will continue to serve Philadelphia with a substantial number of non-stop flights to its Chicago Midway Airport hub which will offer convenient through and connecting services to the Midway cities beyond Chicago.

Midway Airlines offers coast-to-coast service from its hubs at Chicago's close-in Midway Airport and Philadelphia International Airport. Midway Airlines and its wholly owned subsidiary, the Midway Commuter, serve 60 destinations in the United States, Canada, U.S. Virgin Islands, and the Bahamas.

The sale was completed after certain assets of the portfolio were sold to Sanwa Business Credit Corporation.

Terms of the sale of the data processing and check sorting equipment leasing business to Meridian, and the sale of the point-of-sale equipment leasing activities to Sanwa were not disclosed.

The sale and closing costs associated with the transactions are expected to result in a charge of approximately $30 million, or $0.06 per share, against BellSouth's 1990 earnings. Dataserv will continue to provide data processing parts and maintenance, and BellSouth also continues to operate a data processing leasing business in Europe through its Dataserv International subsidiary.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - A federal district court judge today extended a temporary restraining order which allows the Daily News to continue selling newspapers in the New York transit system. The judge, Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum, extended the order to Monday, Dec. 17, at which time it is expected that she will decide whether to grant longer-term injunctive relief to the News. The News had argued that the MTA's action banning hawker sales violated the News' First Amendment rights.

"We are pleased with this ruling which allows us to continue our already successful hawker program in the subways, on the Long Island Rail Road, and in Metro North stations," said John Sloan, News vice president. "We are selling papers at over 100 locations in the transit system, and the judge has today affirmed our right to continue to do so."

Newsstand dealers who operate in the subways have stated that they refuse to handle the Daily News because of fear of physical harm to themselves and their businesses. The dealers continue to sell other newspapers throughout the transit system and had sold the News until the strike began.

Hawkers, including those working in the transit system, have been selling in excess of 200,000 copies of the News each day.

TORONTO (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) announced today the introduction of VITAL VIIe, a new product in the line of visual simulation training systems built by McDonnell Douglas Electronic Systems Co.

VITAL (Virtual Image Takeoff and Landing) is a family of computer generated visual simulation systems that provides a realistic visual environment for training aircrews in all weather, day, night and twilight conditions.

The announcement was made at Canadian International Airlines Training Centre in Toronto during a ceremony for the first Level D (Phase III) qualification of a VITAL VII system in Canada.

VITAL VIIe is a low-cost version of VITAL VII, the most advanced system in the VITAL line. VITAL VIIe offers commuter airlines and corporate flight training centers a high quality system that meets Level C (Phase II) standards. However a variety of options can be installed that will also satisfy Level D (Phase III) training requirements.

Ken Anderson, director of McDonnell Douglas' VITAL business center, called the new product "a significant addition to the VITAL family of visual simulation systems. VITAL VIIe will give pilots training on this system an advantage over pilots who must train on less sophisticated systems. For the first time, quality does not have to be compromised because of cost."

VITAL VIIe provides night, dusk and dawn, and full-color day scenes. It uses a radar-based method of image generation with standard resolution of 500,000 pixels. In addition, it includes calligraphic techniques for pinsharp lightpoints.

VITAL VIIe provides standard photographic and matte textures. Texture can be applied on any surface, in any orientation, including moving objects. In addition to standard texture, VITAL VIIe can use digitized photographs to produce phototexture patterns for enhanced scene realism. Matte texture allows the viewer to see through a textured surface, like clouds, thus presenting broken and scattered clouds.

Scene generation is fast, easy and cost effective with the VITAL VIIe scene modeling workstation. Airfields are quickly and accurately included in a database while photos of surrounding scenes can be digitized to provide a custom, realistic scene.

VITAL VIIe systems provide unlimited occulting. This gives objects within a scene the correct relationship with the surrounding environment - allowing, as in real life, a distant object to be concealed or partially hidden by a closer one.

AVON, MASS. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Child World, Inc. (NASDAQ: CWLD) will begin what company officials believe is the largest Christmas toy sale ever at 182 Child World and Children's Palace stores tomorrow. Markdowns of up to 50 percent or more will be taken on a wide variety of toys, dolls and games, including 267 titles of Nintendo software and more than 100 titles of Atari and Sega Games software. The price cuts are on top of existing Child World and Children's Palace prices, which are already as much as 30 percent below "manufacturers suggested retail price."

The sale, which was announced earlier this week by the country's second-largest retail toy supermarket as part of a larger plan to reduce inventory and overhead and conserve cash, will continue through Christmas. The company plans to announce a major restructuring of its operations in mid-January.

"This is the year Santa Claus came early," said Peter Hayes, president of Child World, Inc. Hayes said that customers can easily spot the bargains by looking for red and green labels on the merchandise. Red labels indicate a price cut of 30 percent and green a price cut of 50 percent. "The customer will actually see the discounts being made on the cash register," said Hayes.

The new markdowns cover merchandise with a retail value of $105 million. Child World's current inventory is valued at approximately $525 million. "Customers don't have to worry about finding only a few items on sale," said Hayes. "These cuts are across the board, in games, dolls, action figures, pre-school and infant toys. But even what isn't marked down specifically for this sale is available at our everyday low prices."

Hayes said that the cuts on video software were particularly dramatic. Prices on Nintendo software that originally sold at Child World/Children's Palace for as much as $49.99 is now being sold for $14.90 to $24.90. Atari software, formerly priced as high as $24.99, now sells for $4.90. Sega Games, formerly priced as high as $39.99, now sell for $9.90.

Other price cuts include: -- 30 percent off on selected action figures and accessories, including Ghostbusters, Dick Tracey and Beetlejuice.

-- 50 percent off on Police Academy and Mega Force games. -- All basic dolls, usually priced at 99 cents to $99.99, are now 66 cents to $69.95.

-- Barbie Collectables are now $2.79, down from $3.99. -- 30 percent off on selected bicycles. -- 30-50 percent off on a wide selection of family board games and hand-held games.

The price markdowns are on selected inventory. Once the merchandise is sold, it will not be restocked. No "rain checks" will be issued for out-of-stock merchandise.

DALLAS (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The LTV Corp. (NYSE: QLTV) said today it will not appeal a U.S. District Court decision restoring two pension plans, the J&L Salaried Pension Plan and the Republic Hourly Pension Plan, but it will appeal the restoration of a third, the J&L Hourly Plan.

The company contends that the J&L Hourly Plan covering 25,000 hourly workers ran out of assets in September 1989, and the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., the federal pension insurance agency, cannot return a depleted plan to the company. U.S. District Court Judge Robert Sweet ruled Tuesday the plans had to be returned to the company to comply with an earlier U.S. Supreme Court decision.

Even though the PBGC may now restore the plans, the company said under bankruptcy law it cannot make contributions to the plans while it is undergoing a Chapter 11 reorganization.

The contributions issue will be considered in another federal court this month. Two of the plans have assets sufficient to cover near-term disbursements to retirees and the PBGC has made advancements to the J&L Hourly Plan which will be used to make benefit payments.

Although LTV will file its appeal immediately, the company said it will continue to seek a negotiated settlement of its pension plan issues with the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp.

On Nov. 19, the PBGC gave the company a 30-year repayment schedule to resolve the pension issues between the company and the federal agency. The company said today that it will press ahead during the appeal process for a negotiated settlement with the PBGC, but the PBGC's repayment schedule was excessive and unworkable. LTV noted that the courts have consistently rejected the PBGC's analysis of the company's financial condition.

The company expects to meet with the PBGC later this month with a repayment proposal which it and the company's financial advisors consider a workable compromise.

The various legal and negotiation actions described above will not cause pension payments to retirees to be reduced from present levels. While no date has been set for the return of the three pension plans to the company, LTV and the PBGC have agreed to an orderly transition which will not cause any disruption or delay in monthly payments.

LTV is a diversified manufacturing company involved in steel, aerospace/defense and energy products.

RESTON, VA (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Freddie Mac's Board of Directors (NYSE: FRE) today voted to remove the company's four percent ownership limit on Freddie Mac voting common stock effective Monday, Dec. 10.

The board also declared a regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share on the corporation's voting common stock, payable on Dec. 31, 1990 to shareholders of record as of Dec. 17, 1990.

In addition, the directors adopted standard corporate bylaws requiring advance written notification of shareholder nominations and proposals to be acted upon at the annual meeting.

"The removal of the ownership limitation is a final step in the transition of Freddie Mac to a publicly owned company with traditional corporate governance and capital structure," said Leland C. Brendsel, chairman and chief executive officer of Freddie Mac.

Brendsel noted that other historic steps in this transition process included removal of ownership restrictions on the company's original participating preferred stock; conversion of participating preferred stock to voting common stock; the election of a board of directors similar to that of public corporations; and redemption of $100 million of non-voting common stack held by the Federal Home Loan Banks at par value.

With the removal of ownership limitations, Freddie Mac will adopt beneficial ownership reporting requirements identical to those of the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC).

Since Freddie Mac's charter as a government-sponsored enterprise grants the corporation exemption from SEC reporting requirements, reports will be filed only with Freddie Mac's Shareholder Relations Department and with the New York and Pacific exchanges, on which the stock is listed.

Until today's board vote, ownership of Freddie Mac voting common stock was limited to 2,400,000 shares per person or entity (approximately four percent of the 60,022,290 million shares outstanding as of Sept. 30, 1990).

The ownership limitation was originally adopted by the corporation to avoid undue concentration of ownership of common stock by any single thrift institution customer of Freddie Mac. Thrifts at one time owned 95 percent of Freddie Mac's stock. Today, they own less than 15 percent of the stock.

Freddie Mac is a stockholder-owned corporation chartered by Congress in 1970 to create a continuous flow of funds to mortgage lenders in support of homeownership and rental housing.

By linking the capital markets with the mortgage markets, Freddie Mac brings the efficiencies and lower costs of the secondary mortgage market to the lender, the investor, and the homebuyer. Over the years, Freddie Mac has helped finance one in eight American homes, including more than 700,000 apartment units.

ARLINGTON, TX (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Allied Pilots Association, which represents the 9,000 pilots of American Airlines, presented a comprehensive counter-proposal to negotiators for American Airlines in response to the company's contract proposal delivered to the pilots last month. The pilots' contract has been subject to change since last December and both sides are currently negotiating with the assistance of a federal mediator.

Fred Vogel, president of the Allied Pilots Association, stated, "Our proposal represents innovative ways of addressing management's concerns and those of our pilots. We have responded to every issue raised by management while remaining firm in our conviction that our pilots should be compensated commensurate with the industry-leading status of our highly successful and prosperous company."

The proposal includes an elimination of the two tier or so called "B-scale" increased benefits for retired, active and disabled pilots, maternity benefits comparable to other large U.S. corporations, restoration of pay and seniority lost by pregnant pilots under prior American policies, and restoration of vacations and retirement contributions which were lost when the B-scale was established at the airline.

The B-scale is a system whereby newly hired pilots are paid substantially less for a large part of their careers. It has been in place at American and other airlines since 1983 and is currently being phased out in new contracts at those airlines.

Major scheduling flexibility provisions were also proposed which would help the company continue its rapid expansion plans. The pilots' proposal would allow American to maintain a competitive edge over other major airlines in the area of scheduling efficiencies. Duration of the contract proposal is from Jan. 1, 1990, to Dec. 31, 1992.

In addition to the union's innovative new proposals, many of the concepts presented in the pilots' proposal are found in existing pilot contracts at other large, successful airlines and should provide the basis for a mutually beneficial new contract.

Due to the comprehensive nature of the pilots' proposal, the management negotiators requested that the pilots' negotiating committee be available all day Saturday to answer questions relating to the proposal. The union agreed to their request.

In order to allow the management negotiators time to analyze the pilot proposal, federal mediator Harry Bickford scheduled the resumption of talks for Wednesday, Dec. 12. Union President Vogel told the management negotiators that he expects to receive their counter-proposal at that time.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) today placed Central Federal Savings, F.S.B., Long Beach, N.Y., in receivership and chartered a new federal mutual institution to take its place.

The new institution, Central Federal Savings Bank, will assume certain assets and liabilities of the old thrift, and will operate in conservatorship under the management of the Resolution Trust Corporation.

The receivership did not result in any interruption of Central Federal's day-to-day operations. The institution and its 14 branches, 12 on Long Island and two in Manhattan, will remain open for business as usual. Holders of insured accounts are not affected by the action, which was taken by OTS to protect insured depositors and the interests of the thrift insurance fund.

OTS initiated the action because Central Federal was operating in an unsafe and unsound condition in that it had insufficient capital, with no prospect of replenishment without federal assistance.

Central was seized after the institution unsuccessfully sought a temporary restraining order in Brooklyn, N.Y., Federal court to block the takeover. The order was denied today by U.S. District Court Judge Arthur Spratt. A hearing on Central's request for preliminary injunction is scheduled for Dec. 18.

Central Federal's condition is due primarily to a high level of non- earning assets, deferred losses, and a substantial amount of goodwill assumed in the 1981 acquisition of Expressway Federal Savings and Loan Association, Ronkonkoma, N.Y.

The institution never was able to recover from the effects of rising interest rates in the early 1980s. A deferred loss of $47 million on the sale of low-interest mortgage-backed securities during that period further eroded the thrift's net worth.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - At 4 p.m., EST, today, Dean S. Marriott, senior deputy comptroller for bank supervision, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC), declared First National Bank of Rowlett, Rowlett, Texas, insolvent, and appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) as receiver. First National Bank of Rowlett received a national bank charter in 1982. As of Sept. 30, 1990, it had total assets of approximately $21 million.

The bank became a matter of serious concern to the OCC in 1988. The OCC determined, as a result of examinations of the bank, that the poor lending practices of management coupled with an imprudent concentration in real estate loans led to a substantial deterioration in the bank's loan portfolio. This coupled with inadequate oversight of the bank by the board of directors caused the bank's condition to deteriorate.

The OCC obtained commitments from the board of directors in 1988 to undertake measures to correct the bank's problems. However, the bank was unable to resolve its problems and losses finally exhausted the bank's capital funds, resulting in its insolvency. The FDIC is expected to release additional information later today.

TORONTO (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Roman Corporation Limited today announced a loss of $48,376,000, or $4.88 per common share, for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1990, compared with a net loss of $1,678,000, or $0.17 per common share, a year earlier.

This brought the loss for the first nine months of 1990 to $97,305,000, or $9.82 per common share, compared with net earnings of $6,350,000, or $0.64 per common share, for the corresponding 1989 period.

Helen Roman-Barber, Roman Corporation's chairman and chief executive officer, attributed the 1990 results "primarily to three separate write- downs totaling $89,419,000, which more than offset improved third- quarter performances by Denison Mines Limited, Lawson Mardon Group Limited and Strathcona Paper Company."

Write-downs of $24,493,000 to reflect Roman Corporation's share of a restatement of the six-month results of Standard Trustco and of $20,320,000 to reflect Roman Corporation's share of a write-down by Denison Mines of its Italian oil properties were taken in the second quarter.

"The most significant factor contributing to the third-quarter 1990 results was a $44,606,000 write-down of Roman Corporation's interest in Standard Trustco to reflect the decline in the market price of that company's common shares," Roman-Barber said.

Standard Trustco reported a loss of $8.6 million in the third quarter of 1990, compared with earnings of $4.2 million a year earlier, and announced that it was suspending dividend payments on its common shares until further notice.

Denison Mines reported net income of $7.5 million for the third quarter of 1990, compared with a loss of $4 million for the third quarter of 1989. Lawson Mardon's third-quarter profit rose to $8.3 million in 1990 from $5 million a year earlier. Strathcona, Roman Corporation's wholly owned operating division, also reported higher third-quarter earnings.

Roman-Barber said that Roman Corporation, which announced last month that it was selling its interest in Lawson Mardon, "expects to complete the sale during the first half of 1991 and will use the proceeds to repay debt and build a capital reserve."

CLEVELAND, (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Lincoln Electric Company today shared year-end profits with employees for the 57th consecutive year.

The discretionary bonus amounting to $56,223,952 was paid to 2,701 people.

George E. Willis, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, stated that this was the second highest bonus paid in the history of the company. He attributed the company's success to its continuing implementation of its total incentive system. This has resulted in record sales for the domestic company with a significant part of this being increased export sales fueled by global expansion.

Lincoln now has 22 manufacturing sites in 15 countries, which places considerable demand on U.S. operations for component parts and finished goods.

D.F. Hastings, president, emphasized that new product development and the need to meet a variety of worldwide standards have increased materially the challenges faced with varying degrees of success in all operations here and abroad. Therefore, he challenged fellow workers to continue to search for and to find more efficient manufacturing and operating procedures.

Vice Chairman Harry Carlson concluded the bonus presentation meeting by sharing information pertaining to Lincoln's expansion of its new world headquarters in Euclid, Ohio, scheduled to be finished late next summer. He stated that Lincoln's decision to keep its world headquarters in the greater Cleveland area was based to a large degree on the outstanding improvements in Cleveland's financial and other problem areas since its low period in the 1970s, plus retention and improvement of those things that have traditionally made Cleveland an attractive place to live.

The company is the leading worldwide manufacturer of arc welding products, and a major producer of premium quality industrial electric motors and plasma and oxyfuel cutting equipment.

CHARLOTTE, NC (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Duke Power (NYSE: DUK) officials said today that preliminary estimates of 1991 expenses may run as much as $100 million higher than estimates made in Jan. 1990.

"The figures are both conservatively high and preliminary," Duke Senior Vice President and General Counsel Steve C. Griffith said, "but we are nonetheless treating them seriously and are taking several steps to reduce those higher costs. For example, we have set a goal to reduce the workforce by about 3 percent during 1991 by taking advantage of the company's normal attrition rate. And we have underway a comprehensive in-house study of our operations to find and implement more productive and cost effective ways to do business," he said.

"When we finalize the 1991 budget in January, we expect the figure to be substantially less than $100 million," Griffith said.

A combination of factors are contributing to the higher expenses, according to Griffith. Duke is adding some 30,000 to 40,000 customers a year, and the resources to meet that growth -- the people, the plant, the conservation technologies -- all are more expensive today than they were yesterday.

"There are additional items, such as an increase in fees charged by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and additional medical benefits costs, that are adding to our expenses," Griffith said.

"Rate increases are sometimes necessary -- we'll be asking for one in 1991, when our Bad Creek Hydroelectric Station begins producing electricity for our customers -- but rate increases cannot be a subsitute for managing costs," he said.

"In light of an overall budget of some $2 billion, we are taking the appropriate steps to reduce our expenses," Griffith said.

UPPER SADDLE RIVER, N.J. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Union Corporation (NYSE: WU) announced that an amendment to its registration statement covering its cash tender offer for its outstanding 19-1/4 percent senior secured notes and 16 percent notes was declared effective today by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In the tender offer, which commenced on Nov. 29 and will remain open until midnight, Dec. 27, 1990, the company is offering to purchase a minimum of $250 million and a maximum of $350 million principal amount of the outstanding 19-1/4 percent and 16 percent Notes for a cash purchase price of $500 per $1,000 principal amount of notes and is soliciting consents from holders of the 19-1/4 percent notes to add certain new restrictive covenants and to modify or remove certain existing covenants contained in its 19-1/4 percent note indenture.

The proposed amendments to the 19-1/4 percent note indenture have been revised so as to eliminate from the presently existing collateral only those assets to be conveyed to AT&T as part of the pending sale of most of Western Union's Business Services unit. Also, several modifications have been made in the proposed restrictive covenants as compared with the proposals contained in the company's prospectus dated Nov. 29, 1990. These revisions reflect discussions between the company and members of a group of holders of the 19-1/4 percent notes.

Western Union has been advised by Donaldson Lufkin & Jenrette, the financial advisor to the holders of 19-1/4 percent Notes, that a substantial majority of the members of this group have indicated that issues formerly in dispute have been resolved and that they intend to consent to the revised proposed amendments to the 19-1/4 percent note indenture as set forth in the amendment to the tender offer that became effective today.

The foregoing is not and shall not be deemed an offer, including an offer of any security, or a solicitation of any vote or consent in connection with the tender offer. Any such offer or solicitation will be made only by means of Western Union's offer to purchase, consent solicitation and prospectus dated Nov. 29, 1990, as amended by post- effective amendment Number 2 to the corporation's registration statement filed with and declared effective by the Securities and Exchange Commission, which amendment includes a supplement being distributed to noteholders beginning today.

#90341p1371 12/07/1990 ~PR Newswire

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Oversight Board for the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC) today approved a revised seller financing policy establishing a pilot program for the sale of illiquid assets.

Under the program, $7 billion of the approximately $142 billion in assets now held by the RTC will become eligible for seller financing. This policy replaces the $3 billion in seller financing previously approved by the Board but continues to allocate not less than $250 million for affordable housing.

"This policy gives the RTC the additional financing authority which it requested to sell its more illiquid assets," said Peter H. Monroe, Oversight Board president.

"The goals of the program are to speed asset sales and increase the value to the taxpayers from such sales," continued Monroe. "Since this is a demonstration program, its effectiveness in achieving these goals will be carefully monitored by the Oversight Board."

The RTC will determine what assets are classified as illiquid under two criteria established by the Oversight Board. First, the RTC must determine that there is not a ready market for the asset because of the unavailability of commercial financing on acceptable terms. Second, the RTC must document that value will be maximized using seller financing instead of such alternatives as cash sale, securitization or holding the asset until markets improve.

The new policy will apply uniformly to all RTC illiquid assets whether in conservatorship or receivership. Although it supersedes existing policy No. 13, adopted in October, the affordable housing provisions of the earlier policy remain in force and not less than $250 million in seller financing will remain available for financing or affordable housing for low- and moderate-income buyers.

The loans will be structured to achieve: -- Substantial equity commitment by the buyer to provide strong incentives for performance.

The Oversight Board, established by the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 (FIRREA), formulates the policy, approves the funding and provides the general oversight of the Resolution Trust Corporation.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (DEC. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Barnett Banks, Inc. (NYSE: BBI) today assumed the deposits and purchased some assets of Haven Federal Savings and Loan Association, F.A. from the Resolution Trust Corporation.

All of Haven's $125 million in deposits are being assumed. As offsetting assets, Barnett acquired consumer and mortgage loans, subject to return to the RTC after review. Barnett paid a premium of $1.15 million.

Haven, based in Winter Haven, Fla., has five offices throughout Polk County. Branches are located in Haines City, Lakeland and Auburndale as well as Winter Haven. The thrift was declared insolvent and put into receivership by the RTC earlier this year.

The Haven offices will reopen Monday as branches of Barnett Bank of Polk County. All Haven customers become Barnett customers. They should continue to use their Haven checks and savings passbooks as well as their automatic teller machine cards. Loan customers should continue to make regular payments.

"We look forward to welcoming Haven customers to the Barnett family," said Andrew B. Cheney, president and chief executive of the Barnett Bank of Polk County. "Like Haven, Barnett has a long history of service to Polk County residents. We think that Haven customers will enjoy our level of service and diversity of product offerings."

The purchase enhances Barnett's market leadership in Polk County where Florida's leading bank has more than 21 percent of the bank deposits.

Three of Haven's offices are located close to Barnett branches and could be closed next year. Customer accounts would automatically be transferred to nearby Barnett offices.

Haven employed about 70 people. Most of those will be offered employment at Barnett for the next two months while the bank completes the conversion of Haven accounts into Barnett's system. During that time, the bank will assist them in finding jobs within the Barnett system or at other employers.

The transaction is Barnett's eighth purchase of assets and liabilities of a failed financial institution this year. These transactions totalled almost $3 billion in deposits.

(DEC. 7) UPI - President Bush and Secretary of State Baker Thursday welcomed Iraq's decision to release all hostages in Iraq and Kuwait. But they said freeing the hostages won't soften U-S insistence that Iraq conform to all U-N resolutions demanding full withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait. The exact number of foreign nationals in Iraq and Kuwait has never been precisely established. But it is thought there are around 900 Americans, including 88 held as human shields at key installations around Iraq. In addition, there are an estimated five-thousand other foreigners.

The head of the World Council of Churches warns that war is NOT the ''right solution'' to the Persian Gulf crisis. Reverend Emilio Castro, general secretary of the world council, says- quote- ''NO big power should be allowed to impose its will on a small one.'' But Castro says a war in the region might ''wipe out'' Kuwait. Castro heads the international council of 311 Protestant and Orthodox churches in more than 100 countries.

In Italy, authorities are investigating the crash of a small Italian air force training plane that slammed into a school on the outskirts of Bologna Thursday. 12 people were killed and at least 62 others were injured. The pilot ejected from the plane after radioing that the aircraft's engine was on fire and its controls were NOT working. Witnesses told police the plane's fuselage was engulfed in flames.

Laboratory tests show a potential new AIDS drug may be as powerful as the government-approved drug A-Z-T. Researchers from University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester and Boehringer Ingelheim Pharmaceuticals in Ridgefield, Connecticut, say the drug, dubbed BR- GZ-T. They say they hope to begin testing the promising compound on humans early next year.

Thousands of blacks marched through the streets of several South African cities Thursday... heeding a call by the African National Congress to keep the pressure on the white minority government for racial reform. Winnie Mandela, the wife of A-N-C leader Nelson Mandela, led some five-thousand marchers in Pretoria. Mandela delivered a petition demanding, among other things, the government release all political prisoners and suspendf all political trials before Christmas.

(DEC. 7) UPI - Secretary of State Baker told the House Foreign Affairs Committee Thursday that the Iraqi Foreign Ministry has confirmed officially that all foreign nationals being held in Iraq will be permitted to leave.

President Bush travels from Chile to Venezuela Friday. At a joint news conference Thursday, Bush and Chilean President Patricio Aylwin sought to put years of antagonistic relations behind them.

A deadlock over farm subisidies still exists as world trade talks enter their final day in Brussels Friday. The European Community Thursday rejected a compromise plan, calling it wholly unacceptable.

Directors of more than three-thousand state-run enterprises met in Moscow Thursday to press for continued central control of the economy. They were assured by Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov that the state sector will remain a key in the Soviet system.

Researchers from University of Massachusetts Medical School say laboratory tests show that a potential new AIDS drug may be as powerful as A-Z-T, the only government-authorized drug to fight the AIDS virus.

(DEC. 7) UPI - There's no place like home, even if it took the Sacramento Kings 11 months to realize it.

The Kings beat the Washington Bullets 104-86 Thursday night, recording consecutive home victories for the first time since January.

''They worked pretty hard and it is nice to see them execute against a pretty good team,'' Kings Coach Dick Motta said. ''Our inside game and our intensity was very good.''

Wayman Tisdale scored 27 points on 12 of 13 shooting and grabbed 12 rebounds. Rookie guard Travis Mays contributed a professional-high 26 points - including three 3-pointers - for the Kings, who hadn't won two straight games in Arco Arena since Jan. 22 and 24, when they beat the Los Angeles Clippers and Golden State Warriors.

''I wanted to have a good game after coming off a back problem last game,'' Mays said. ''I knew I had to get into the game right away. I'm ready to play the Pistons (Saturday night at home).''

''If you're looking for me to make excuses on how we played, you've got the wrong guy,'' Bullets Coach Wes Unseld said. ''I knew Travis Mays was good, but I think we made him look a lot better tonight.''

The game also marked center Pervis Ellison's first appearance in Sacramento since being traded by the Kings to the Bullets last June.

Ellison, who Sacramento chose as the NBA's first pick in the 1989 college draft, was injury-plagued and played sparingly in his one season with the Kings.

Ellison, who scored 2 points and didn't get a rebound in nine minutes as a reserve, was booed during player introductions and several times during the game.

Bernard King, the NBA's third-leading scorer, paced Washington with 25 points.

''We never got our offense into the game,'' the Bullets' Darrell Walker said. ''And they kept us on the perimeter.''

In other games, the Los Angeles Lakers downed Minnesota 83-73, Seattle nipped Miami 105-103 and Houston outlasted Charlotte 116-110.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

Lakers 83, Wolves 73

At Minneapolis, Magic Johnson survived a sub-par shooting performance to score 21 points and collect 11 assists to lead Los Angeles to its eighth straight victory. Johnson surpassed 16,000 career points to become the 40th player in the NBA to reach that plateau. He is the second player, along with Oscar Robertson, to have 16,000 points and 9, 000 assists. Tony Campbell scored 23 points and Pooh Richardson added 22 for the Timberwolves.

SuperSonics 105, Miami 103

At Miami, Sedale Threatt scored 18 points, including four in the last 90 seconds, and added 11 assists for Seattle. Heat guard Glen Rice had a chance to tie the score 104-104 with three seconds left, but missed the second of two free throws. Seattle's Nate McMillen was fouled on the next play and hit 1 of 2 free throws to account for the final margin.

Rockets 116, Hornets 110

At Houston, Akeem Olajuwon scored 39 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to lead the Rockets. Eric ''Sleepy'' Floyd added 20 points to back Olajuwon, who had at least 20 rebounds for the fourth time this season and 36th time in his career. Armon Gilliam had 31 points and 21 rebounds and Johnny Newman scored 26 points for the Hornets, 8-8.

The North Carolina Tar Heels justified their place in the ratings and preserved some measure of pride for the ACC on their home court.

Senior forward Rick Fox scored 18 points and sophomore forward George Lynch added 12 Thursday night to lead No. 10 North Carolina to a 79-64 win over No. 11 Connecticut in the ACC-Big East Challenge.

It was only the second victory for an ACC team in the four-day, eight-game matchup between the two East Coast conferences.

Coach Dean Smith used his tall, deep bench to wear down the Huskies, who sent the Tar Heels to the free-throw line 32 times, and North Carolina converted on 25 of the attempts.

The Huskies, 3-1, were led by junior guard Chris Smith, the game-high scorer with 21 points, and senior guard John Gwynn, who added 11 points.

In another ACC-Big East Challenge game, Lance Miller scored 23 points and forward Arron Bain added 21 to lead Villanova to a 91-82 victory over Wake Forest. The Big East dominated the series 6-2.

The Huskies blitzed to a 13-1 lead before North Carolina, 4-1, finally got into the game. Freshmen Eric Montross and Clifford Rozier paced an 11-5 run and the Tar Heels cut the lead to 18-14 at the 9:59 mark.

Gwynn hit two jumpers and the Huskies went up 25-14 with 7:15 left in the half. North Carolina's depth took its toll and the Tar Heels were 9- 11 at the free-throw line and cut the lead to 28-26 with 3:55 left in the half.

Gwynn and junior forward Rod Sellers paced Connecticut on a 12-7 run that gave the Huskies a 40-33 lead at the intermission.

Lynch sparked a 17-8 Tar Heel run to open the second half, including a jumper at the 9:44 mark to tie the game at 50-50.

North Carolina took its first lead at 54-52 with 6:59 left in the game when senior forward Pete Chilcutt grabbed an offensive rebound and jammed it in.

Lynch scored 5 points for North Carolina and the Tar Heels ripped off a 15-7 run to take a 69-59 lead with 2:36 left in the game.

Connecticut was forced to foul from that point and North Carolina was 6-7 from the line in the last two minutes of the game.

In the Villanova-Wake Forest game, Rodney Rogers nailed a three- pointer to pull the Deacons, 3-2, within 74-73 but Miller and Bain led a Wildcat charge and a 23-18 run to end the game. Villanova raised its record to 4-1. Chris King of Wake Forest led all scorers with 26 points and Rogers hit for 20, all in the second half.

In other games Thursday night, No. 13 Pittsburgh trounced Marshall 105-75, Tennessee Tech defeated No. 16 Southern Mississippi 84-78 and Purdue nipped California 66-65.

At Pittsburgh, Brian Shorter scored 17 of his 20 points in the second half to lead the 5-1 Panthers. Pitt started the game with full-court pressure on defense, jumping to leads of 18-3 and 27-7. Marshall, 3-3, turned the ball over 10 times in the first half. Darelle Porter had 17 points, 10 rebounds, eight assists and three steals.

At Memphis, Tenn., Dan Usher pumped in 17 points and handed out 11 assists to lead Tennessee Tech to the upset. An 8-1 second-half run built a 65-62 edge into a 73-63 bulge with 4:12 left. Usher scored 4 points in the run. Tennessee Tech hit seven of 10 free throws in the Final 3:30 to put the game away. Couples and Bruce Oglesby scored 15 points apiece for Tennessee Tech, 3-2. Russell Johnson Led Southern Mississippi, 2-1, with 19 points and Clarence Weatherspoon added 14.

At Berkeley, Calif., Woody Austin scored a career-high 31 points, including a three-pointer with just nine seconds left, lifting Purdue. Austin's efforts offset a record-setting performance by Cal's Ryan Drew. The senior guard hit five three-point shots in the contest to give him 181 in his career, eclipsing the Pac-10 career mark of 179 set by Oregon State's Gary Payton.

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA (DEC. 7) UPI - Tunku Abdul Rahman, the ''father of Malaysia'' and the nation's first prime minister, died at the age of 87, and a national day of mourning was declared by the government he opposed.

Rahman died Thursday night at the Kuala Lumpur General Hospital, where he had been kept on a life-support system since Wednesday after slipping into a coma.

The former leader, who stepped down as prime minister in 1970, was admitted to the hospital a week ago, suffering from dehydration, anemia, fever and intestinal bleeding.

His body was placed in a flag-draped coffin and brought to Malaysia's parliament, while throngs of weeping citizens lined the streets of the capital.

The coffin was later taken to a military airport to be flown to Rahman's home in the northern state of Kedah, where he will be interred at the Langgar Royal Mausoleum.

The government of Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad ordered all official and government functions canceled and declared a national day of mourning for Rahaman, who led the campaign for Malaysia's independence from Britain in 1957 and became its first prime minister.

''He was a statesman of the first rank and a man of vision,'' said Albert Talalla, Malaysia's ambassador to the United States.

After retiring in 1970, Rahman became secretary-general of the Organization of Islamic Conference, which comprises 40 nations and served at the headquarters in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia.

He also is credited with inspiring the formation of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations in 1961, comprised of the non-communist countries of Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philipines, Thailand and Brunei. It stands today as one of the most viable regional groupings.

Although confined to a wheelchair in recent years due to frail health, Rahaman had remained active in the political coalition opposed to the government of his longtime rival Mahathir, who Rahaman once called a dictator.

In campaigning before the October general election, Rahaman urged voters to oust Mahathir and vote for the opposition led by former Trade and Industry Minister Tengku Razaleigh Hamzah.

Mahathir won a resounding victory for a third, five-year term.

PARIS (DEC. 7) UPI - A French Mirage jet crashed in Saudi Arabia while on a reconnaissance mission Friday, killing the pilot, Defense Ministry sources reported.

The pilot, who was not immediately identified, was the second French military officer killed in Saudi Arabia since Paris sent some 5,500 troops to the desert kingdom, according to the sources.

In November a French officer was killed in an automobile accident in the Saudi city of Khaled. Another officer was wounded in the accident.

France had eight Mirage F1CR jets like the one that crashed Friday. It also has eight Jaguar jet fighters and another eight Mirage 2000 planes, the sources said.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (DEC. 7) UPI - Gunmen fired with automatic weapons on pedestrians, motorists and houses in the black township of Evaton south of Johannesburg overnight, killing three people and injuring at least five in a surge of factional violence, police said Friday.

In the township of Bekkersdal, to the west, police found the bodies of five men with hack and stab wounds after another overnight flare-up of internecine strife.

Police spokesman Capt. Piet van Deventer said an unknown number of black gunmen ''opened fire, possibly with AK-47s, at various spots in Evaton from about 9 p.m. until after midnight.'' They fatally shot three people and injured at least five in their attacks on homes and in streets, he said.

''We're believe that this was black factional violence but we're not sure exactly who was involved,'' van Deventer added.

Patrols discovered the bodies in Bekkersdal before 4 a.m. Friday, another spokesman said. ''They were not all in one spot ... it looked like there was some kind of small battle with knives and axes,'' he said.

He said the fighting ''was more of the so-called internecine conflict ... possibly tribal.''

Fighting among black factions tore through four townships east of Johannesburg on Sunday and Monday, leaving at least 71 people dead, but abated after the imposition of an overnight curfew and other emergency measures, officials said.

Both the African National Congress and the rival Zulu Inkatha movement warned Tuesday that the latest conflict threatened to undermine efforts to negotiate a power-sharing deal with the white-minority government but continued to blame each other for the violence.

Supporters of the ANC and Inkatha clashed in townships around Johannesburg during six weeks in August and September, leaving up to 800 people dead in South Africa's worst outbreak of urban factional fighting.

(DEC. 7) UPI - Iraq's news agency says the Iraqi National Assembly today gave its official approval to yesterday's order by President Saddam Hussein to release all foreign hostages. In a special session held on the Moslem day of prayer, the assembly voted unanimously to immediately lift all travel restrictions for the thousands of Japanese and Western nationals still trapped in the troubled area.

The Pentagon says despite the hostage release order, Iraq continued this week to build up its military forces in the region, indicating that Saddam is not ready to meet the two other U-N objectives- Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and restoration of Kuwait's legitimate government.

The Philippines and the United States today adjourned talks on the future of strategic U-S military bases and decided to meet again next month in a final attempt to hammer out a new agreement. A joint statement released at the close of the three-day, third round of talks said ''progress was made on very complex issues, while acknowledging that much remains to be done.''

Ground controllers have taken control of the the space observatory aboard the space shuttle Columbia. Three of Columbia's four telescopes were knocked out of action yesterday when the second of two critical payload computers overheated and failed. But all three telescopes were back in action early Friday, although at reduced efficiency.

The man named as the Soviet Union's first ambassador to South Korea arrived today to assume his diplomatic post. Oleg Sokolov is to present his credentials to President Roh Tae-woo early next week and fly back to the Soviet Union to be present when Roh arrives in Moscow for a four-day visit. South Korea and the Soviet Union established full diplomatic relations on September 30th for the first time in their history.

Four years of world trade talks involving 107 nations were on the verge of collapse today in Brussels after the European Community rejected a compromise proposal on farm subsidies. Many officials said the best possible result was for trade ministers to agree to a ''cooling-off'' period in hopes of a better negotiating atmosphere in January. The talks are due to end today.

The man called the ''father of Malaysia'' has died at the age of 87. Tunku Abdul Rahman died last night at the Kuala Lumpur General Hospital, where he had been kept on a life-support system since Wednesday after slipping into a coma. The former leader stepped down as prime minister in 1970. He led the campaign for Malaysia's independence from Britain in 1957 and became its first prime minister.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - The nation's unemployment rate rose to 5.9 percent in November from 5.7 percent last month and reached the highest level since October 1987, the Labor Department said Friday.

In yet another sign of the weakness spreading throughout the U.S. economy, employment levels fell sharply last month with non-farm payrolls losing 265,000 jobs. Manufacturing, construction and retail jobs were hardest hit.

The monthly job loss was the greatest since the recession of 1982 and the second consecutive large monthly decline.

The number of unemployed workers swelled by 300,000 to 7.4 million during the month. Most of the newly jobless were adult men. Unemployment rates for adult men have increased steadily through the year to reach 5. 4 percent in November.

Unemployment rates for other categories also increased. The adult women unemployment rate reached 5.1 percent last month; teenagers, 16.5 percent; whites, 5.1 percent; blacks, 12.4 percent and Hispanics, 8.6 percent.

Reflecting the increase number of factory layoffs, the unemployment rate for manufacturing workers rose nearly a percentage point last month to 6.6 percent. The construction industry, strapped by the nation's economic slowdown and tighter credit standards by lenders, posted an unemployment rate of 13.6 percent.

Layoffs accounted for much of the job losses in these industries. The number of job losers, who now make up more than half of the unemployed, rose by nearly 300,000 last month and by about 700,000 since June, the government said.

The number of people who recently lost their jobs and those who have been unemployed for more than 27 weeks also increased last month.

Total civilian employment declined by 450,000 to 117.3 million, continuing a downward trend that began in June. Employment among teenagers has been declining even longer, since March. The civilian labor force has changed little at 124.6 million.

Non-farm payroll showed a ''marked deterioration,'' the Labor Department said, with a decline of 265,000 jobs in November and a 180, 000 decline the month before.

Only mining and the service industry added jobs during the month.

The decline in manufacturing totaled 200,000, with reductions widespread throughout the industry. The greatest decline came from the automobile industry, which cut 55,000 jobs in November. Most of this reduction came from temporary plant shutdowns to avoid excessive inventory, the government said.

But when the auto companies shave jobs, the impact is felt down the line. Jobs were lost last month in several other industries that supply automakers, including fabricated metals, rubber and plastics.

The construction industry continued to wallow last month, trimming 60,000 jobs. In the past six months, the industry has shed about 250,000 jobs.

The average workweek for production and non-supervisory workers rose by 0.2 hours in November to 34.4 hours, after declining by 0.5 hours the month before.

The manufacturing workweek decreased by 0.2 hours to 40.5 hours and factory overtime declined by 0.1 hour to 3.5 hours.

Average hourly earnings for production and non-supervisory workers remained essentially unchanged in November. Average hourly earnings rose by 0.7 percent because of the rebound in hours worked. Average weekly earnings edged down to $348.49.

Over the year, average hourly earnings have increased by 3.6 percent and average weekly earnings have gained 3 percent.

ATLANTA (DEC. 7) UPI - Former President Jimmy Carter will lead a 33-member international delegation to monitor elections in Haiti later this month.

The Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, a populist priest, is considered the front-runner among 11 contenders in the the Caribbean country's Dec. 16 presidential election. The election was marred by the deaths of seven people Wendesday in an attack on a campaign rally.

''For too long, the people of Haiti have been denied by a small violent group their opportunity to elect leaders,'' Carter said Thursday. ''Yesterday's deplorable violence indicates that this group is still trying to intimidate the Haitian people. We will not be deterred from our efforts to support the Haitians who continue to aspire to democracy.

''We are hoping these elections will provide the historical breakthrough that the people of Haiti want,'' he said.

Observers blamed Wednesday's violence on the Tonton Macoutes, a private militia that terrorized the Haitian populace during the Duvalier regime.

The international delegation will travel to Haiti under the sponsorship of The Carter Center's Council of Freely Elected Heads of Government in Atlanta and the National Democratic Institute for International Affairs in Washington.

The team includes 33 members from 13 countries, including Belize Prime Minister George Price, former U.S. Deputy Secretary of State John Whitehead and representatives of heads of state in Venezuela, Jamaica, Barbados and Canada.

The delegation will arrive in Port-au-Prince Dec. 14 and remain in the country until the day after the election, Carter officials said. Members will work closely with teams from the Organization of American States and the United Nations to conduct a ''quick count'' of election results.

''We have already received assurances from the leadership of the armed forces and the government that they will help make this a free and fair election,'' Carter said. ''More important, the army and the government have been collaborating toward this end.''

The Council of Freely Elected Heads of Government is a group of 18 hemispheric leaders whose goal is to reinforce democracy. The group has observed elections in Panama, Nicaragua, the Dominican Republic, and has been asked to monitor election in Guyana next year.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - The nation's labor market took a ''substantial and widespread'' hit last month as the unemployment rate rose 0.2 percent to 5.9 percent, the highest level in more than two years, the Labor Department said Friday.

In yet another sign of the weakness spreading throughout the U.S. economy, employment levels fell sharply last month with non-farm payrolls losing 267,000 jobs. Manufacturing, construction and retail jobs were hardest hit.

The monthly job loss was the greatest since the recession of 1982 and the second consecutive large monthly decline.

''In summary, the November labor market data show a substantial and widespread over-the-month deterioration,'' said Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Norwood told the congressional Joint Economic Committee that sharp employment declines were spread throught the goods and services sectors of the economy, with the greatest hits in manufacturing and construction.

''Employment fell sharply and in nearly every industry,'' she said.

The number of unemployed workers swelled by 300,000 to 7.4 million during the month. Most of the newly jobless were adult men. Unemployment rates for adult men have increased steadily through the year to reach 5. 4 percent in November.

LONDON (DEC. 7) UPI - Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir ended a one-day visit to Britain Friday, calling on the U.N. Security Council not to reward Iraq for releasing hostages.

Shamir is scheduled to arrive in Washington Friday afternoon. He is to talk with President Bush on Tuesday.

After a brief meeting Thursday with British Prime Minister John Major, Shamir said the imminent release of hostages by Iraq still left other issues unresolved.

''In my opinion it doesn't change anything,'' Shamir said in a radio interview. ''It's a usual step of people who use blackmail.

''He (Saddam Hussein) took the hostages without any justification. Taking hostages was the outrageous act of a dictatorial power and now he's going to, maybe going to, release them and he wants to get paid for it,'' he said.

Pressure on Iraq should be maintained until it fulfilled all the U.N. resolutions, which include demands that Iraq withdraw unconditionally from Kuwait and restore the ousted emir of Kuwait's government.

The British Broadcasting Corp. reported that the United States had proposed to the permanent members of the U.N. Security Council that they arrange a Middle East peace conference. Iraq has called for its invasion of Kuwait to be linked to the Palestinian cause.

Both Bush and Baker denied the BBC report and have rejected any link between the Kuwait invasion and the Palestinians.

Major told Shamir of Britain's support for a Middle East peace conference, but the Israeli leader said a conference would be unacceptable.

''An international conference is not the way to solve our conflict with the Arab world,'' he said. ''It will be rather a dictate to us by a automatic majority of interested countries.''

Shamir denied that his country wishes to see a war to eliminate the Iraqi military threat to Israel.

''Israel doesn't want any war with any country in the world. We have our immense tasks now before us and we want to carry out our tasks in peace.

''We are aware of the danger Iraq constitutes for all the region, including us but we do not like to have a war. We are not pushing anybody towards a war.''

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (DEC. 7) UPI - Plans to complete the massive U.S. troop buildup in the Persian Gulf are unchanged by Iraq's statement that all hostages will be released, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said Friday.

Cheney, at a meeting of NATO defense ministers, also requested that U.S. allies send additional heavy combat troops to the gulf, as well as artillery and air defense systems.

''We have no plans to alter the deployment now under way,'' Cheney said. ''If the hostages are released, we welcome that, but we don't think Saddam Hussein deserves praise for having decided to release people held in violation of every norm of international behavior.

''We have no plans whatsoever to change our course or our objectives or our policy,'' Cheney told a news conference after a joint meeting of NATO's Defense Planning Committee and Nuclear Planning Group.

Cheney said the additional 150,000 U.S. troops ordered to the gulf last month will be ''sufficient to give us offensive military capability should it be required,'' but he asked other NATO countries to send troops if possible.

''Most valuable at this point,'' he said, would be self-sustaining heavy combat units ''ready to support themselves and not be a logistical drain'' on existing supply networks, but still part of an integrated command structure.

He also asked for additional sealift and airlift support to transport troops and supplies.

Cheney said his requests to other NATO defense ministers were ''generalized,'' and did not seek an immediate response.

''I did not come with specific requests, saying, 'I want Country X to commit an additional brigade,''' he said.

Cheney rejected any settlement of the gulf crisis that would allow Iraq to keep part of Kuwait.

''To allow Saddam Hussein to benefit from his aggression, by saying he's able to keep 10 percent of what he stole or 20 percent of what he stole or 30 percent of what he stole, would do fundamental violence to the very principles that are at stake here,'' he said.

''Such a settlement would be reminiscent of historial precedents where we've seen appeasement of dictators in the past,'' Cheney said.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (DEC. 7) UPI - Fleet/Norstar Financial Group Inc. said Friday it had begun laying off 500 employees, or almost 3 percent of its workforce, as recession continued to take its toll on New England banking companies.

The across-the-board staff cuts at Fleet should be substantially completed next week, said Robert Lougee Jr., a company spokesman.

Fleet, the region's No. 2 banking company after Bank of Boston Corp., also said it plans to slash $75 million in annual expenses through the layoffs and a range of other cost-saving measures.

These economies include cutting pay raises to about 4 percent from an average 5.5 percent annually, extending the wait for raises to 18 months from one year slashing outside costs such as legal fees, and eliminating bonuses for senior managment, Lougee said.

The company started informing laid-off employees over the past week and ''others will be notified in the next week. Most of these terminations will be effective immediately,'' he said.

In what Lougee said would be mostly a ''symbolic gesture,'' the company also will cut its directors' pay from $18,000 a year to $12,000 annually.

The layoffs, which will be concentrated in the company's banks, will reduce employment to 17,800 from about 18,300 currently, Lougee said.

''This action relates more directly to the slumping economy in the Northeast and I guess we're clearly in a recession now and maybe the nation is in a recession,'' he said.

In November, Fleet slashed its stock dividend to 20 cents a share from 35 cents, saying ''many ecnomic undertainties loom on the horizon.''

Fleet/Norstar, with $31 billion in assets, owns five New York State banks operating under variations of the Norstar name, and four in New England, three under the Fleet name and United Bank in Connecticut.

For the first nine months of 1990, Fleet earned just $434,000, well down from$279 milllion in the first nine months last year. Nonperforming assets grew $254 million in the first three quarters this year.

LAS VEGAS, NV (DEC. 7) UPI - Lloyds Bank of London is the new owner of the shuttered, 498-room Landmark hotel-casino a block east of the famed Las Vegas Strip. The resort closed in August when no bids were tendered in a public auction.

The bank paid a reported $20 million for the property to protect a $25 million loan made in 1988 to former owner William Morris. The sale places a $6 million debt owed by Morris to Imperial Palace hotel-casino owner Ralph Engelstad in limbo, along with another $1.7 million owed to taxicab company owner Charles Frias.

Reno attorney Lee Molof, representing the bank, declined to say Thursday what the financial institution planned to do with the resort.

The Landmark hotel-casino, a space-needle shaped resort once owned by the late billionaire Howard Hughes, is located on a choice piece of real estate across the street from the busy Las Vegas Convention Center.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (DEC. 7) UPI - NATO plans to approve by next spring an overhauled strategy that dramatically reduces nuclear weapons and the size of standing forces, alliance defense ministers said Friday.

The defense ministers, concluding a two-day meeting of NATO's Defense Planning Committee and Nuclear Planning Group, said the alliance must adapt to the past year's stunning changes in Europe.

''The risks the allies now face in Europe arise principally not from the likelihood of deliberate aggression against allied territory, but rather as unforeseeable consequences of instabilities that might emerge in a period of rapid and widespread political, social and economic transformation,'' they said in a final communique.

NATO's new force structure, the defense ministers said, must be able to respond quickly to localized conflicts in Europe.

''Our future force posture will be based on smaller, more mobile and flexible active forces,'' many of them comprised of multinational units, they said.

There will also be ''further dramatic reductions in the number of NATO's nuclear weapons retained in Europe,'' the NATO ministers said.

NATO strategy for decades was based on the now-obsolete policies of ''forward defense'' and ''flexible response,'' which called for the use of nuclear weapons if necessary to repel an overwhelming conventional attack.

Those policies, said NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner, have ''been largely overtaken by events,'' including the signing last month of a massive conventional arms treaty that eliminates risk of a surprise attack in Europe.

But Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said other risks remain, including the residual Soviet military threat and the proliferation of chemical and biological weapons.

''I can assure you the United States will maintain substantial nuclear and conventional forces in Europe,'' Cheney said at a news conference.

The defense ministers again endorsed a 1988 decision to construct a new air base at Crotone in southern Italy, which would replace a base in Spain as headquarters for NATO's 401st Tactical Fighter Wing in the alliance's southern region.

Congress, citing the new era of East-West harmony, has questioned whether the costly base is still needed. The defense ministers did not discuss changing the base's funding formula, which requires the United States to pay the largest share.

NATO's strategic review began last summer, after the July NATO summit in London.

''Work on the stategy review is proceeding well and we expect to be in a position to approve the new strategic concept next spring,'' the defense ministers said.

HONOLULU (DEC. 7) UPI - Forty-nine years ago Friday the Imperial Japanese Navy attacked the American fleet at anchor in Pearl Harbor and catapulted the United States into war.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in asking Congress to declare a state of war, called Dec. 7, 1941, ''a date which will live in infamy.''

Silent ever since that day nearly a half-century ago, the sunken battleship USS Arizona with nearly 1,200 men entombed in her hull was the focal point of commemorations Friday.

Throughout the day, American flags were to be raised briefly and then lowered over the battleship and offered to each state to be used next year during the 50th anniversary of the attack.

Ceremonies over the harbor were to include a flyover of fighter jets and the playing of taps.

In Chicago, meanwhile, a Marine-turned-lawnmower repairman was crusading to make Dec. 7 a national holiday.

''I'll bet you less than 25 percent of the people know about it (the anniversary of the attack), and that number is getting less all the time,'' Richard Foltynewicz, 65, told the Chicago Tribune.

Foltynewicz created the Foundation for a National Pearl Harbor Day and has been trying to persuade business leaders and the public. He also began a fund-raising drive, Pennies for Pearl, for a commemorative 50th anniversary plaque to be placed at the Arizona Memorial.

In Fullerton, Calif., retired Navy Cmdr. George Pierson, 78, was affixing his letters with upside-down flag stamps - the international naval distress signal.

Pierson, a pilot, was at Pearl Harbor for the attack. The stamps are his small gesture at remembering America's most infamous military setback.

In Indianapolis, a bell from the World War II battleship USS Indianapolis was to be rung 2,403 times - once for each American killed in the sneak attack.

Six battleships and several smaller vessels were sunk and many othersseriously damaged in the attack. Officials have estimated that it took the U.S. Navy a year to recover from the disaster.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 7) UPI - The military clamped curfews on much of the Israeli-occupied territories Friday in advance of the third anniversary of the Palestinian uprising, which one analyst maintains cannot die down because it has ''no alternative.''

This weekend marks two important dates in the uprising - two months on Saturday since Israeli police opened fire and killed at least 17 Palestinians on the Temple Mount in Jerusalem's Old City and the third anniversary on Sunday of the intifada, the Arabic name given to the Palestinian uprising.

Recent leaflets by Palestinian nationalist and Moslem fundamentalist underground leaders called on Palestinians to fight the Israeli occupation with ''all forms of struggle.'' Israeli officials have interpreted the phrase to mean a possible rise in the use of guns and other weapons, which Palestinians generally have refrained from using against Israelis during most of the uprising.

In the wake of the slayings on the Temple Mount, Islam's third holiest site, Arabs carried out a series of stabbing attacks against Israelis. Four Israelis were killed and several were wounded.

Two Palestinian teenagers from the West Bank were arrested in Jerusalem's Old City Friday in possession of knives, police said. During interrogation, the teenagers told police they had planned to stab soldiers or policemen, a police spokesman said.

Police also detained a 14-year-old Jewish religious academy student carrying a kitchen knife in the Old City at the entrance to the Western Wall, Judaism's holiest site. Army Radio reported the teenager said he was carrying the knife for self-defense.

''The intifada is not dying down and will not die down in the near future simply because it has no alternative,'' Israeli commentator Ron Ben-Yishai wrote in the Yediot Ahronot newspaper. ''At the moment, the Palestinians, the official Israel and the international community do not have a practical proposal for a solution.''

Palestinians in the occupied territories proclaimed general strikes for Saturday and Sunday. In an effort to stem violence on the anniversaries, the military imposed curfews on an estimated 20 Palestinian communities and refugee camps in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, confining more than 400,000 Arabs to their homes.

The West Bank town of Ramallah also was declared a closed military zone. Military closures and curfews in the West Bank and Gaza Strip have become routine during the 3-year-old Palestinian uprising, with the army sealing off the occupied territories for the first time since 1967 on March 28, 1988.

During the closures, journalists are forbidden from entering the area.

In his commentary on the Palestinian uprising, Ben-Yishai said restrained optimism at the start of the uprising's third year had edged toward despair.

''A large part of their political achievements in the first two years of the uprising were lost (in 1990),'' Ben-Yishai wrote.

''The bases of power that they had in the international arena have collapsed, the economic situation of the territory residents has significantly deteriorated, the internal murders have harmed their self- image in their relations between themselves and between the Israeli public,'' Ben-Yishai wrote.

According to military statistics, more than 310 Palestinians have been killed by other Palestinians while 625 Palestinians have been killed by soldiers since the uprising began Dec. 9, 1987.

In the West Bank village of El Bireh, north of Jerusalem, masked men shot and wounded the deputy mayor Friday and residents said the attack likely was motivated by suspicions the Arab was collaborating with Israeli authorities, Army Radio reported.

OTTAWA (DEC. 7) UPI - Canada's jobless rate soared 0.3 percent last month to hit 9.1 percent, with huge declines in employment posted in the manufacturing and construction sectors, Statistics Canada reported Friday.

The federal government's data gathering agency said the rate was at its highest since May, 1987. Men were hardest hit as well as those over 25 years of age.

The unemployment rate rose to 9.3 percent among men, but edge down slightly to 8.8 percent for women.

The manufacturing sector has suffered an 8.9 percent decline in employment since November, 1989 while the construction sector lost 7.9 percent. There was a 1.4 percent increase in service sector jobs in the last 12 months, with the largest gains in trade, finance, insurance and real estate.

BELGRADE (DEC. 7) UPI - Serbian opposition leaders reiterated Friday fears that the ruling communists plan to win the first multi-party elections in Yugoslavia's largest republic since 1945 through fraud and intimidation.

''I'm sure we shall discover that the dead have voted,'' Vuk Draskovic, the head of the nationalist Serbian Renewal Movement and the main opposition candidate for president, told a news conference.

More than 6.86 million people are eligible to vote Sunday for a president and 250-member assembly in an election expected to help determine Yugoslavia's political future through its impact on a dispute over the shape of a new federal constitution.

Nationalist governments elected earlier this year in Slovenia and Croatia are demanding that Yugoslavia be transformed into a confederation of independent states linked by trade.

Serbia's ruling communists support the continuation of a federation of six republics unless Serbia is enlarged to include Serbian enclaves now outside its borders. They have refused to negotiate on the issue, while the main Serbian opposition groups say they will hold talks with Slovenian and Croatian leaders.

The communist regime of Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic is facing a stiff challenge for re-election, although it is given an advantage by most experts because of its tight grip on the media, bureaucracy and economy.

Draskovic and several other prominent opposition leaders said Milosevic and his party would be unable to win fair elections and are being supported by the communist-led Yugoslav military.

Ivan Djuric, a history professor and presidential candidate of federal Prime Minister Ante Markovic's Alliance of Reformist Forces, charged that opposition supporters have been ''arrested, ill-treated and intimidated'' by police.

''The first multi-party elections are being held in an atmosphere of fear ... and terror,'' said Draskovic.

The leaders expressed concerns about a decision by the republic Election Commission to permit people unable to vote Sunday to cast ballots Friday and Saturday.

They said those votes would be cast without monitoring by opposition poll-watchers and that the Election Commission failed to provide stringent guidelines on determining qualifications for early voting.

''We have already protested to the republic Election Commission,'' said Dragoljub Micunovic, the leader of the Democratic Party.

The Milosevic government, however, said opposition representatives were allowed to monitor the early voting.

Micunovic said the Election Commission is also allowing unsupervised voting before Sunday by hospital patients, members of the communist-led military and police posted in the restive province of Kosovo, where ethnic Albanians have been agitating for more self-rule.

The leaders said they are demanding that officials not permit voting to begin Sunday until all early ballots are counted.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (DEC. 7) UPI - World trade talks involving 107 nations adjourned Friday in turmoil over an acrimonious dispute on farm subsidies between the United States and the European Community.

The talks, marred by finger-pointing and hopelessly deadlocked, will resume early next year in Geneva following a ''cooling-off'' period.

Four years of talks under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade were to conclude Friday with a sweeping trade-liberalization agreement, but little progress was made during a final week of negotiations as the 12-nation EC resisted calls by U.S. officials for deep cuts in farm supports, particularly market-distorting export subsidies.

The U.S. position was backed by the 14-nation Cairns Group of farm exporters, among them Australia, Brazil and Argentina.

The agriculture impasse stalled negotiations in 14 other negotiating areas.

''The talks have been prolonged into next year,'' a GATT spokesman announced at midday, and frustrated trade ministers packed their bags to go home.

No date was set for resumption of talks among lower-level officials, which will be held at GATT headquarters in Geneva.

Not much time remains, however, because any GATT agreement must be submitted to the U.S. Congress by March 1 under the ''fast-track'' authority that requires Congress to vote on the package as a whole rather than line-by-line.

Failure of the talks, it is feared, will spark an ugly trade war at a time when much of the world is slipping into recession. World trade totaled nearly $4 trillion last year.

The United States and the EC predictably blamed each other for this week's fiasco.

''Too many people came here wishing to walk away, and unfortunately Monday and Tuesday were spent trying to orchestrate to precipitate a crisis,'' said EC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said the EC was ''not prepared to negotiate fundamental agricultural reforms.''

''We wasted our time,'' said U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, who said the EC never offered subsidy-slashing commitments in ''tons and pounds.''

The EC trade commissioner, Frans Andriessen, said ''negotiation is give and take. There was no give and take in agriculture.''

GATT, established in 1947, now covers only merchandise trade.

The current round of GATT talks, known as the Uruguay Round after the country where negotiations began in 1986, seeks to extend world trade rules to critical new areas including services, textiles, investment, agriculture and copyright protection.

The United States insisted deep cuts in farm subsidies were essential because developing countries that produce food cheaply will not otherwise agree to new trade rules in the other areas.

EC officials said hefty subsidies are necessary to protect the Community's 10 million farmers, mostly small landowners. There are about 2 million farmers in the United States.

The Canadian trade minister, John Crosbie, urged all sides to reexamine their positions on agriculture in hopes of finding a compromise when talks resume.

''Since this is a key issue, the EC bears a heavy responsibility,'' he said. ''This is not a recrimination. Its a statement of fact. The EC will have to take a serious look at what it can do. Others can take a serious look at lowering their expectations.''

The EC proposed a 30 percent cut in farm supports from 1986 when subsidies were at their peak. The United States sought cuts in agriculture supports of 75 percent, including a 90 percent slash in export subsidies.

A final attempt to find common ground failed dramatically on Thursday night.

A compromise proposed by the Swedish chairman of the agriculture negotiating committee called for subsidy cuts of 30 percent over a five- year period beginning in 1991.

Following initial signs of optimism, the EC adamantly rejected the Swedish proposal on grounds it ignored subsidy cuts since 1986.

Early Friday, GATT Director General Arthur Dunkel concluded that further talks at this time would be fruitless.

More than 2,500 delegates participated in this week's GATT talks at the site of the 1958 World's Fair. Nearby is Belgium's national stadium, site of another disaster - the 1985 soccer riot in which 39 people were killed.

#90341u1002 12/07/1990 ~United Press International

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - The General Accounting Office said Friday a more equitable formula for distributing federal Medicaid dollars to the states would result in 30 states losing money but 19 needier states receiving more money.

The funding formula for Medicaid, the government's health insurance plan for the poor, is unfair because it is based on states' per capita income, Janet Shikles of the GAO told a House Government Operations subcommittee.

Shikles said a more accurate picture of a state's ability to fund its share of Medicaid could be drawn if the formula considered states' total revenue income and poverty rates - not per capita income. It also suggested the federal government's guaranteed share be reduced from 50 percent to 40 percent.

Under the GAO scenario, 30 states would be losers and 19 states winners, with figures unavailable for Arizona or the District of Columbia. Nine of the 19 would receive an additional $100 million or more.

Under the proposal, Arkansas would be the biggest winner, netting 35. 5 percent more, and Wyoming the biggest loser, receiving 61.7 percent less.

The GAO has been presenting its view on the ''unfairness'' of the formula to Congress since 1983. And it may continue to speak out in vain, subcommittee Chairman Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said, because governors from the 30 states on the losing end would put up a battle.

''It might pose problems. Whenever a formula changes, the first thing people do is say, 'How will it affect my state?''' Weiss said.

And Gail Wilensky, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicaid, said said no changes in the formula should occur until there are discussions for overhauling the entire program.

Arkansas Gov. William Clinton, who testified he wants the federal government to halt Medicaid mandates for two years, said he is all in favor of the formula change, acknowledging that it would hurt many states.

''The formula should be changed,'' Clinton said in an interview. ''If you do it on a per capita basis, it obscures the (existence) of poor people in New York and California,'' he said, referring to two of the 19 states that would see increases in federal dollars under the proposed formula.

To explain why per capita is a poor indicator of a state's poverty level, Shikles paired Arkansas and Utah, which have almost the same average per capita income. The formula treats them as if they had the same poverty rate, but census data show Arkansas' poverty rate is 32 percent and Utah's is 20 percent.

The 19 states that would receive more money under the GAO proposal are:

Alabama (19.6 percent increase), Arkansas (35.5 percent), California (8.8 percent), Delaware (9.9 percent), Florida (51 percent), Georgia (35.8 percent) Kentucky (16.2 percent), Louisiana (9.4 percent), Maine (15.5 percent), Mississippi (28.9 percent), Missouri (5.3 percent), New Mexico (19.1 percent), New York (12.1 percent), North Carolina (7.9 percent), South Carolina (15.2 percent), South Dakota (8.5 percent), Tennessee (16.4 percent), Texas (27 percent) and Virginia (6.6 percent).

The 30 states that would lose money under the scenario are:

Alaska (39.6 percent decrease), Colorado (12.6 percent), Connecticut (35 percent), Hawaii (15.2 percent), Idaho (2.1 percent), Illinois (9.2 percent), Indiana (31.2 percent), Iowa (35.7 percent), Kansas (7.5 percent), Maryland (23.7 percent), Massachusetts (35.4 percent), Michigan (14.4 percent), Minnesota (22 percent), Montana (14.3 percent).

Nebraska (15.5 percent), Nevada (20.7 percent), New Hampshire (21.5 percent),

New Jersey (35 percent), North Dakota (4.8 percent), Ohio (23. 1 percent), Oklahoma (1.8 percent), Oregon (0.7 percent), Pennsylvania (9 percent), Rhode Island (5.3 percent), Utah (28.6 percent), Vermont (3.1 percent), Washington (4.4 percent), West Virginia (9.4 percent), Wisconsin (38.4 percent) and Wyoming (61.7 percent).

KITTERY, Maine (DEC. 7) UPI - Portsmouth Naval Shipyard has received permission from the Pentagon to lay off 1,400 employees by next spring because of a declining workload, the facility's administrative officer said Friday.

The layoffs had been anticipated for some time, but had not received final approval.

''In order to remain a viable and competitive organization, (the shipyard) has implemented an aggressive outplacement program as compensations for the inadequacy of normal attrition to balance the workforce size to the projected workload,'' said Lt. Cmdr. Heather Chambers, the shipyard's administrative officer.

Workers to lose their jobs will be notified in February and the layoffs will be completed by April.

The job cuts will be across-the-board.

About 7,900 workers are employed at the shipyard. Most of the workers live in Maine and New Hampshire, but some are from Massachusetts.

WARSAW, POLAND (DEC. 7) UPI - The government Friday said an expected influx of refugees from the economically troubled Soviet Union would put tremendous strain on Poland and that the Eastern European nation may need Western aid.

Col. Zbigniew Skoczylas, the Interior Ministry official in charge of refugees, said Poland respects the 1951 United Nations Convention on Refugees and will do its best to help them.

But he said if the neighboring Soviet Union dissolves into chaos, the Polish economy will collapse, especially without Western help.

''Annual feeding and accommodation would cost Poland some $1.2 billion and it would mean the collapse of Polish economy,'' he said.

Skoczylas said the government is developing three scenarios to provide assistance, each depending on developments in the Soviet Union.

Scenario No. 1 envisages restrictions, such as an obligation to change $20 per day by those trying to cross the border, followed by the introduction of visas. That would be tantamount to closing the border if number of those who wanted to come approached 8 million, as envisaged.

About 3 million Soviet citizens visited Poland in the last 10 months to do shopping and the estimates are their number would grow to 4 million by the end of 1990.

Scenario No. 2 takes into account the possibility of the imposition of martial law in the Soviet Union or on the part of its territory to suppress growing unrest.

Skoczylas said if martial law were declared, perhaps some Soviet citizens staying in Poland for shopping and trading would declare they are political refugees.

The worst scenario anticipates the outbreak of revolution, in which case some 2 million people could flee into Polish territory on their way to Western Europe.

''The third scenario is of a nightmarish and science fiction character,'' he said. ''If this horror came through, the Polish state would collapse and would cause a domino effect moving westward.''

He said Poland could accommodate some refugees in four Polish provinces, where most of the vacation centers are, for some time, but the cost would have to be shared by the all of Europe.

Skoczylas said a nightmare can be prevented by aiding the Soviet Union now.

''Europe must help the Soviet Union whether we like it or not,'' he said.

(DEC. 7) UPI - The hostages may be home for Christmas. That distinct possibility comes after Iraq's rubber-stamp National Assembly approved Saddam Hussein's suggestion that all foreigners held against their will in Iraq and occupied Kuwait be allowed to go home. The move took the rest of the world by surprise and officials are now scrambling for ways to get the hostages out. It may be NO small project. The State Department says there are an estimated six-thousand foreign nationals trapped in the area.

A leading Iranian religious leader denies charges Iran is violating human rights. Ayatollah Mohammad Yazdi, who doubles as Iran's judiciary chief, said NObody is held prisoner in Iran for ideological reasons. His remarks were broadcast by Tehran radio. Yazdi called the charges ''an utter lie.'' A U-N committee and Amnesty International both have accused Iran of violating human rights.

Unemployment is up to its highest since October of 1987. The Labor Department is out with its November readings on the number of people working and they show unemployment up two-tenths of one percent from October to five-point-nine percent of the work force. That means 117- point-three-Million workers had jobs to go to last month and seven- point-four-Million did NOT. Hardest hit were the manufacturing, construction and retail industries.

A deadlock over high European farm subsidy levels has led to the temporary collapse of four years of trade talks. The European Community refuses to make further cuts in heavy subsidies given to its farmers. And that led to a formal adjournment of the talks in Brussels without any agreement. But the 107 countries did agree to try to get the talks going again at an unspecified date in Geneva, Switzerland.

The Philippines and the United States have adjourned another series of talks over the future of U-S military bases in the Philippines. They said they made some progress, but did NOT reach an agreement. They will meet again next month. The United States wants to reduce its forces in the Philippines gradually over the next 10 to 12 years and keep only a small force after that.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - The General Accounting Office said Friday a more equitable formula for distributing federal Medicaid dollars to the states would result in 30 states losing money but 19 needier states receiving more money.

The funding formula for Medicaid, the government's health insurance plan for the poor, is unfair because it is based on states' per capita income, Janet Shikles of the GAO told a House Government Operations subcommittee.

Shikles said a more accurate picture of a state's ability to fund its share of Medicaid could be drawn if the formula considered states' total revenue income and poverty rates - not per capita income. It also suggested the federal government's guaranteed share be reduced from 50 percent to 40 percent.

Under the GAO scenario, 30 states would be losers and 19 states winners, with figures unavailable for Arizona or the District of Columbia. Nine of the 19 would receive an additional $100 million or more.

Under the proposal, Arkansas would be the biggest winner, netting 35. 5 percent more, and Wyoming the biggest loser, receiving 61.7 percent less.

The GAO has been presenting its view on the ''unfairness'' of the formula to Congress since 1983. And it may continue to speak out in vain, subcommittee Chairman Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., said, because governors from the 30 states on the losing end would put up a battle.

''It might pose problems. Whenever a formula changes, the first thing people do is say, 'How will it affect my state?''' Weiss said.

And Gail Wilensky, administrator of the Health Care Financing Administration, which runs Medicaid, said said no changes in the formula should occur until there are discussions for overhauling the entire program.

Arkansas Gov. William Clinton, who testified he wants the federal government to halt Medicaid mandates for two years, said he is all in favor of the formula change, acknowledging that it would hurt many states.

''The formula should be changed,'' Clinton said in an interview. ''If you do it on a per capita basis, it obscures the (existence) of poor people in New York and California,'' he said, referring to two of the 19 states that would see increases in federal dollars under the proposed formula.

To explain why per capita is a poor indicator of a state's poverty level, Shikles paired Arkansas and Utah, which have almost the same average per capita income. The formula treats them as if they had the same poverty rate, but census data show Arkansas' poverty rate is 32 percent and Utah's is 20 percent.

The 19 states that would receive more money under the GAO proposal are:

Alabama (19.6 percent increase), Arkansas (35.5 percent), California (8.8 percent), Delaware (9.9 percent), Florida (51 percent), Georgia (35.8 percent) Kentucky (16.2 percent), Louisiana (9.4 percent), Maine (15.5 percent), Mississippi (28.9 percent), Missouri (5.3 percent), New Mexico (19.1 percent), New York (12.1 percent), North Carolina (7.9 percent), South Carolina (15.2 percent), South Dakota (8.5 percent), Tennessee (16.4 percent), Texas (27 percent) and Virginia (6.6 percent).

The 30 states that would lose money under the scenario are:

Alaska (39.6 percent decrease), Colorado (12.6 percent), Connecticut (35 percent), Hawaii (15.2 percent), Idaho (2.1 percent), Illinois (9.2 percent), Indiana (31.2 percent), Iowa (35.7 percent), Kansas (7.5 percent), Maryland (23.7 percent), Massachusetts (35.4 percent), Michigan (14.4 percent), Minnesota (22 percent), Montana (14.3 percent).

Nebraska (15.5 percent), Nevada (20.7 percent), New Hampshire (21.5 percent), New Jersey (35 percent), North Dakota (4.8 percent), Ohio (23. 1 percent), Oklahoma (1.8 percent), Oregon (0.7 percent), Pennsylvania (9 percent), Rhode Island (5.3 percent), Utah (28.6 percent), Vermont (3.1 percent), Washington (4.4 percent), West Virginia (9.4 percent), Wisconsin (38.4 percent) and Wyoming (61.7 percent).

BRUSSELS, Belgium (DEC. 7) UPI - World trade talks involving 107 nations adjourned Friday in turmoil over an acrimonious dispute on farm subsidies between the United States and the European Community.

The deadlocked talks, involving more than 2,500 delegates and marred by finger-pointing, will resume early next year in Geneva following a ''cooling-off'' period.

Failure of the talks, it is feared, will spark an ugly trade war at a time when much of the world is slipping into recession. World trade totaled nearly $4 trillion last year.

Four years of talks under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade were supposed to conclude Friday with a sweeping trade-liberalization agreement, but little progress was made during a final week of negotiations as the 12-nation EC resisted calls by U.S. officials for deep cuts in farm supports, particularly in market-distorting export subsidies.

The U.S. position was backed by the 14-nation Cairns Group of farm exporters, among them Australia, Brazil and Argentina.

The agriculture impasse stalled negotiations in 14 other negotiating areas.

''The talks have been prolonged into next year,'' a GATT spokesman announced at midday, and frustrated trade ministers packed their bags to go home.

No date was set for resumption of talks among lower-level officials, which will be held at GATT headquarters in Geneva.

Not much time remains, however, because any GATT agreement must be submitted to the U.S. Congress by March 1 under the ''fast-track'' authority that requires Congress to vote on the package as a whole rather than on a line-by-line basis.

Predictably, the United States and the EC blamed each other for this week's fiasco.

''Too many people came here wishing to walk away, and unfortunately Monday and Tuesday were spent trying to orchestrate to precipitate a crisis,'' said EC Agriculture Commissioner Ray MacSharry.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said the EC was ''not prepared to negotiate fundamental agricultural reforms.''

''We wasted our time,'' said U.S. Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter, charging the EC never offered subsidy-slashing commitments in ''tons and pounds.''

Frans Adriessen, the EC's trade commissioner, said ''negotiation is give and take. There was no give and take in agriculture.''

Later, the head of the U.S. Council for International Business urged renewed efforts to break the deadlock.

''There is simply too much at stake for the world economy and the future prosperity of each country to permit these negotiations to fail,'' said Joseph E. Connor, chairman and president of the U.S. Council, an affiliate of the International Chamber of Commerce.

''The fact that the negotiations have not been terminated still holds out some hope that constructive agreements dealing with all the issues can yet be reached in time to meet the effective deadline of March 1 within the American legal mandate,'' said Connor, chairman of Price Waterhouse World Firm, in New York. ''Given the impasse over agriculture, it is understandable why so many countries are unwilling to proceed in other areas of negotiation. This logjam must be broken.''

GATT, established in 1947, now covers only merchandise trade. The current round of GATT talks, known as the Uruguay Round after the country where negotiations began in 1986, has sought to extend world trade rules to critical new areas, including services, textiles, investment, agriculture and copyright protection.

The United States insisted deep cuts in farm subsidies were essential because developing countries that produce food cheaply will not otherwise agree to new trade rules in the other areas.

But EC officials said hefty subsidies are necessary to protect the Community's 10 million farmers, mostly small landowners. There are about 2 million farmers in the United States.

John Crosbie, the Canadian trade minister, urged all sides to reexamine their positions on agriculture in hopes of finding a compromise when talks resume.

''Since this is a key issue, the EC bears a heavy responsibility,'' he said. ''This is not a recrimination. It's a statement of fact. The EC will have to take a serious look at what it can do. Others can take a serious look at lowering their expectations.''

While in Venezuela, President Bush issued a statement renewing the U. S. commitment to ''a timely and successful conclusion'' of the talks.

Bush said that he hoped the ''participants, especially the EC, will take this opportunity to reflect upon their position on agriculture and develop the political will to negotiate real market-opening agreements while there is still time to do so.''

The EC proposed a 30 percent cut in farm supports from 1986, when subsidies were at their peak. The United States sought cuts in agriculture supports of 75 percent, including a 90 percent slash in export subsidies.

A final attempt to find common ground failed dramatically Thursday night.

A compromise proposed by the Swedish chairman of the agriculture negotiating committee called for subsidy cuts of 30 percent over a five- year period beginning in 1991.

Following initial signs of optimism, the EC adamantly rejected the Swedish proposal on grounds it ignored subsidy cuts since 1986.

Early Friday, GATT Director General Arthur Dunkel concluded that further talks would be fruitless.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - Southwest Bank of St. Louis, frequently a leader in reducing the prime lending rate, Friday said it will trim that benchmark for commercial and consumer loans to 9.75 percent from 10 percent as of Monday.

''We think it's good for the economy, good for the bank, good for our customers,'' said I.A. Long, chairman emeritus of the Missouri bank long known for leading the way in slashing the prime lending rate.

''I think that it's prime time for a prime cut,'' said economist David Brinner who follows business and consumer issues for Data Resources Inc. of Lexington Mass., a McGraw-Hill Inc. unit. ''It's appropriate. I believe the large banks will have to follow, if not this week then next.''

But Long, 91, said he not only doubted big banks would rapidly follow, but he didn't mind a bit. ''We get awfully good public relations as a result of being the lowest prime rate in the nation,'' he averred.

Southwest's cut was matched later Friday by Manufacturers & Traders Bank of Buffalo, N.Y., a unit of First Empire State Corp., and First Fidelity Bancorp of Lawrenceville, N.J., but no major banks dropped the rate.

The last time Southwest and other banks cut the prime rate, offered to their most creditworthy commercial clients and frequently the basis for setting home equity and other consumer lending rates, was Jan. 8. At that time the prime was brought down to 10 percent from 10.5 percent.

Since then, the Federal Reserve has lowered the key Federal funds rate, which banks charge each other for the short-term use of reserve funds and serves as a building block for other rates, to 7.50 percent from 8.25 percent.

That means the spread, or margin, between the Fed funds rate and the prime has widened to 2.50 percent from 1.75 percent for banks which haven't followed Southwest in its quarter-point prime cut. Banks have been slow to narrow that spread, say analysts, because their profits are so poor.

While the Fed has eased credit three times in 1990, Long said, banks haven't kept pace on the prime. ''We felt it was very much in order ... to give our commercial customers the benefit of this at this time,'' he said.

Banks usually bring the prime down in half-point steps. But Long said he and his associates thought it ''appropriate'' to trim it by 25 basis points, as the Fed has been easing its funds rate by quarter-point increments.

Southwest's easing came soon after the Fed announced it was relaxing reserve requirements for banks. Banks soon will start earning interest on nearly $14 billion which they previously had to hold in reserve in their vaults as cash or place on interest-free deposit with the central bank.

The Fed made clear that in giving banks use of such funds, it hoped to boost bank profits, help rebuild capital and encourage institutions to start lending again to creditworthy customers to end a ''credit crunch.'' Many business people say banks have been refusing loans even to good customers.

Long said he hoped that besides encouraging borrowing by small businesses and middle-market companies, a lower prime is ''another factor that will help slow down this decline in the economy which seems to be gaining momentum.''

''Every industry and every company of any consequence does some borrowing, so immediately it has some effect,'' he said.

DRI/McGraw-Hill's Brinner agreed.

''A quarter point is not going to eliminate a recession,'' he said. ''But if it is the first of several steps, it will limit the depth and duration of a recession.''

Declining interest rates, combined with plunging oil prices and reduced fears of a Mideast war, should help end the recession by spring, he said.

Brinner noted that one-year Treasury note yields have declined to around 7.15 percent from 8.15 percent in early 1990. As they descend beneath 7 percent in early 1991, homeowners with adjustable mortgages tied to the government note could see their payments shrink by nearly 10 percent.

''It will help us pay our fuel oil bills and gasoline bills,'' he said, and put more money into the economy to stimulate business.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Hoping to help salvage the political career of a friend she met when he was an altar boy in the 1940s, Arizona Gov. Rose Mofford went before the Senate ethics committee Friday to defend the ''excellent reputation'' of Sen. Dennis DeConcini, one of the so-called Keating Five senators.

Mofford was the lone witness before the panel on its 14th day of hearings to determine whether DeConcini, D-Ariz., and Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., John Glenn, D-Ohio, John McCain, R-Ariz., and Donald Riegle, D-Mich., applied improper pressure on bank regulators to benefit a major political contributor, indicted savings and loan operator Charles Keating Jr.

Influence-peddling allegations by witnesses increasingly have focused on DeConcini and Cranston. Mofford, a Democrat, is one of a series of character witnesses DeConcini says he will present to the six panel members in an effort to deflect a litany of damaging testimony by current and former S&L regulators.

Mofford told the committee her family knew the DeConcini family in the 1940s and ''I first met Dennis when he was an altar boy in St. Gregory's church in Phoenix'' when DeConcini was about 10 or 11 years old. ''Our relationship has been an affectionate one,'' she said, tracing DeConcini's career through his days as a lawyer and prosecutor before being elected to the Senate in 1976.

James Hamilton, the senator's lawyer, asked Mofford: ''Do you know Senator DeConcini's reputation for truth and veracity in Arizona?''

''He has an excellent reputation,'' she responded. ''His word is his bond.''

Three bank regulators have accused DeConcini of offering a deal to benefit Keating's failing Lincoln Savings and Loan, whose parent company was based in Phoenix, during two meetings in April 1987 with regulators. The deal involved regulators agreeing to look the other way on Lincoln's $600 million violation of regulations limiting risky direct thrift investments in exchange for Lincoln making more home loans.

The regulators also allege DeConcini sought to make them take steps in their probe of Lincoln that would have greatly delayed their examination report, which eventually urged seizing the thrift from Keating. Lincoln's 1989 failure is the biggest in the nation's S&L scandal and will cost American taxpayers $2 billion to bail out.

DeConcini claims all his actions regarding Keating were mere constituent service for an important home-state businessman.

''Dennis, better than any other public official I know, works at making the system work for the constituent,'' Mofford testified.

Mofford pointed out that Lincoln's parent company, American Continental Corp., was ''a major component'' of the state's economy, saying that at the time of the meetings with regulators the company was the sixth-largest revenue generator in the state.

The governor also said Keating was not regarded as a villain in 1987.

''He was considered a very successful businessman and very charitable,'' she said.

Keating has been indicted on state securities and fraud charges in California and is the target of a continuing federal grand jury investigation.

DeConcini said he was ''most grateful'' to Mofford for her testimony.

Mofford did not speak on behalf of McCain. Committee special counsel Robert Bennett has already recommended McCain be cleared of any wrongdoing.

Mofford suggested she was not trying to slight McCain. ''But my work with Senator DeConcini stands over many more years than with Senator McCain,'' she said after her testimony.

SAN SALVADOR, EL SALVADOR (DEC. 7) UPI - Increased sabotage of El Salvador's electrical system by leftist rebels has made it impossible for utility companies to meet the country's power needs, officials said Friday.

''The electricity situation is dramatic,'' a spokesman for the Electrical Lighting Commission of San Salvador told United Press International. ''Every time we repair four sabotaged lines, within hours they knock down eight more.''

The spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said the situation is so critical in the capital that the state-owned power company could not advise customers of its rationing schedule.

He said rebels of the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front used explosives to knock out eight 115,000-volt transmission lines Friday.

A spokesman for the Hydroelectric Commission said the country would have only 44 percent of its energy capacity Friday.

Electricity rationing has been in effect all over this small Central American country since rebels intensified attacks on the U.S.-supported Salvadoran government Nov. 20. Rebels say the limited offensive was launched to force the government of President Alfredo Cristiani to make concessions in peace talks.

Sections of the capital are without power for up to eight hours a day.

Traffic jams are widespread as drivers try to bully their way through unregulated intersections. Businesses and industries frequently have to shut down and wait for the lights to come back on.

With the upscaled campaign straining the military's resources, most police have long since been diverted from directing traffic to guarding against unpredictable guerrilla attacks.

The government estimates that it has spent more than $55 million repairing sabotaged power lines during a decade of civil war that has cost more than 72,000 lives, mostly civilians. The economic cost has been estimated at $4 billion, or close to El Salvador's gross domestic product in a bad year.

PARIS (DEC. 7) UPI - President Francois Mitterrand and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl called Friday for the establishment of a common European defense policy and an enhanced role for the European Parliament and the European Council.

In a joint letter to the 10 other members of the European Economic Community ahead of next week's EC summit in Rome, the two leaders said that European political unity should ''include a truly European security policy that will in time lead to a common defense.''

Kohl and Mitterrand proposed an examination of the relationships between the 12 EC countries, the Western European Union, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

''We are convinced that the Atlantic Alliance in its entirety will be reinforced by a growth in the role and responsibility of the Europeans and by the construction in its center of a European pillar,'' the two leaders wrote.

Kohl and Mitterrand said a common European foreign policy should eventually extend to all areas, but they suggested that it could be immediately put into practice in areas including the EC's relations with the Soviet Union and the East European countries and arms negotiations.

The two leaders, who met Wednesday evening for a private dinner at the presidential Elysee Palace in Paris, appeared to be trying to take advantage of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's resignation to breathe new life into the creation of a European monetary and political union, according to political sources in Paris.

Kohl and Mitterrand said in their letter that the European Council, made up of the 12 heads of state that make up the EC, should see its role and mission enlarged.

The two leaders suggested that the European Council adopt the rule of majority vote for most issues, with exceptions limited to a small number of sectors.

Currently, decisions taken by the European Council must be voted unanimously, a situation that has led to difficulties in the past when one member, such as Britain under Thatcher, opposed a decision on monetary unity or other matters.

Concerning the European Parliament, whose current powers are now limited to voting on the EC budget, Kohl and Mitterrand suggest that as a first step the Commission president be confirmed by the Parliament, with the other Commission members submitted to the same procedure in the future.

They also urged that the Parliament have the right to approve the European Council's decisions if they are deemed to be of a legislative nature. Under current practice Commission decisions automatically become law.

As the 12 EC members move toward the elimination of internal trade barriers after 1992, the EC Commission has seen its powers increased substantially, leading to concern that the European integration process is short on democratic institutions.

The project to enhance the role of the Parliament and to subject the EC Commissioners to Parliamentary approval was seen by EC observers as an effort to increase the Commission's accountability to elected officials.

Kohl and Mitterrand also suggested that the EC be given increased powers in areas such as the environment, health, energy and consumer protection.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - James Bias apologized to the audience gathered to hear a discussion about gun violence. ''I have to leave here and bury my son.''

Jay Bias, 20, brother of fallen basketball star Len Bias, was gunned down in suburban Washington Tuesday, cementing the area's notorious reputation as the nation's murder capital.

James Bias took time out Friday from making arrangements for his son's funeral to plead for a national campaign to limit the sale and ownership of guns, which he called ''instruments of death.''

''When you buy a gun, you buy it for the purpose of killing,'' he said. And then in a rapid-fire burst of emotion he blurted: ''Tomorrow when you pick up the paper ... it might be yours. It's my son this time - it could be yours next time.''

The panelists, assembled on Capitol Hill by the Coalition to Stop Gun Violence maintained that prompt action is needed to break the death grip that guns have on America.

Julian Bond, civil rights activist and former Georgia state legislator, noted that the discussion was taking place 10 years to the day that John Lennon was shot to death in front of his New York City apartment.

In the decade since then, Bond said, guns have claimed the lives of 200,000

Americans - a number greater than the combined American war dead in Korea, Vietnam, Grenada and Panama.

''And still the violence continues,'' he said.

Most of panelists called for legislation to limit the availability of guns and for a national campaign to change violent behavior. All expressed alarm that disputes are frequently being settled with gunfire.

''Violence is a learned behavior,'' James Bias said. ''Nobody is born violent.''

Police say a dispute was apparently at the center of Jay Bias's death. He was confronted in a jewerly store Tuesday afternoon by a man who claimed he was flirting with the man's common-law wife, a clerk at the store.

The man later shot Bias in the back outside the jewelry store in Hyattsville, Md., a suburb of Washington. He was pronounced dead at a hospital less than two hours later.

Jay Bias was just 16 when his brother, Len, a University of Maryland basketball star, died of a cocaine overdose June 19, 1986, just three days after he was drafted in the first round by the Boston Celtics. The death brought national attention to the dangers of cocaine. James Bias said he hoped the death of Jay Bias do the same for gun violence.

''It's time to make some moves and get some things done,'' he said. ''Make the phone jump off the hook. If you don't, there will be more Jay Biases.''

Dr. Beverly Coleman-Miller, assistant to the District of Columbia commissioner of public health, said violence is becoming so commonplace in Washington that some teenagers go to three or four funerals a week. She recalled seeing one teenager who attended a funeral in casual clothes while eating a hamburger.

She added that there has been no public outcry over the violence because ''people do not believe that this level of crime is going to touch them.''

Jesse Jackson, who accompanied James Bias to the hearing, said, ''We must change our tolerance level for violence. We must put this issue of drugs and violence at the center of the '92 campaign.''

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - The jury showed signs of progress Friday in the eighth day of deliberations at the Central Park jogger trial, turning its focus to the written confession of the second youth on trial for rape and attempted murder.

For the first time, the jurors in State Supreme Court in Manhattan asked for evidence tied to Kharey Wise, 18, requesting his written confession about the night of random violence in Central Park on April 19, 1989.

This came after nearly a week of concentrating on the other defendant Kevin Richardson, 16.

Both teenagers are accused of gang-raping a woman jogger, beating her into a coma and leaving her for dead in a muddy gully. They are accused of being part of a gang of up to 30 youths that roamed the moonlit park, randomly beating and robbing joggers and bicyclists.

Nine victims were attacked during the one-hour ''wilding'' spree. The most seriously injured victim was the 30-year-old investment banker. She suffered two skull fractures and lost three-quarters of her blood before she was discovered hours after the attack.

Richardson is free on $25,000 bail. Wise has been held at Rikers Island on $50,000 bail since his arrest days after the attack.

As the five-man, seven-woman jury entered its second week of deliberation, the lawyers, reporters and the families of the youths milled about the hallways, waiting for a verdict.

Justice Thomas Galligan has given up the solitude of his chambers for the activity of the courtroom, where he sat on the bench sketching reporters and jurors.

The prosecutor's most powerful tool is the videotaped confessions of Richardson and Wise. Richardson admits getting scratched by the woman, but claims he was trying to stop the attack. Wise admits ''playing with her leg'' while the rape was under way.

The jury also asked to look at glossy photographs of the jogger's injuries and the crime scene off a jogging path near the park's 102nd Street Transverse.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - With a Middle East war apparently delayed until at least Jan. 15, currently overflowing oil supplies are more than ample to carry consuming nations through the winter, a major oil company estimated Friday.

Because of last week's U.N. ultimatum authorizing the use of force unless Iraq leaves occupied Kuwait by Jan. 15, ''the situation looks adequate in terms of supplies for the winter under anything but the most extreme combination of circumstances,'' a senior executive for a major oil company said.

By that date, all supplies needed through March will have been loaded on tankers for the 45 day trip from the Persian Gulf to the United States and other western nations, said the executive, whose company closely tracks the movement of Middle East oil.

''From a volumetric point of view, you've loaded basically all of your winter oil by Jan. 15, the U.N. cutoff date,'' said the executive, who requested anonymity.

He said that the 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is pumping about 1 million barrels more daily than the 22.5 million barrel-a-day limit the cartel set for itself in July before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion.

Thanks to higher output from Iran and Saudi Arabia, the OPEC cartel has more than made up for the 4.2 million barrels lost daily as a result of the U.N. embargo of Iraqi and Kuwaiti exports imposed after the invasion.

Iran, in particular, is saddled with 30 million to 60 million excess barrels of crude it's had to store on tankers because it failed last month to read lower market demand and reduce prices for heavy crude, the executive said.

Depending on whether you only count tankers being used to store crude or include tankers enroute to markets with as-yet-unsold oil, Iran's excess crude could vary from 30 to 60 million barrels, he said.

''Either number says that Iran has been producing oil it has not been able to sell and storing it on ships - a significant amount of oil and it's primarily heavy crude.''

He said the Saudia Arabia has the same problem to a much lesser extent. ''There's no real evidence'' the Saudis are having to store on ships crude overflowing their on-land storage tanks.

''But there may be stuff they would have liked to have sold by now that's steaming toward markets,'' the executive said.

Saudi prices have been by-and-large more responsive to the real markets than the Iranians have, he said. ''They changed their heavy crude prices last month while the Iranians weren't as fast in their reaction.''

The Iranians have since lowered their prices, ''but we still don't seen an awful lot of action'' buying their crude, the executive said.

If something happens to interrupt world production both the Iranians and the consuming nations will be glad of the excess stocks, he said.

His company estimated November crude output for Iran at 3.4 million barrels a day and that for Saudi Arabia between 8.1 million and 8.2 million barrels daily, up from October Saudi output of 7.7 million barrels daily, the executive said.

Saudi Arabia had been pumping about 5.6 million barrels of crude daily prior to the invasion and may have reached the limit of its production capability although it ''may be able to squeeze out a couple of hundred thousand barrels a day more,'' he said.

The executive said his company was forecasting the same 23.5 million barrels-a-day OPEC output for December as in November with maybe a slight rise in Saudi production and a slight decline in that of Iran.

Daily output of the United Arab Emirates, another OPEC member with excess capacity, has remained relatively constant over the last few months at 2.3 million barrels, several hundred thousand barrels higher than its pre-invasion production.

(DEC. 7) UPI - The rubber-stamp Iraqi National Assembly, carrying out President Saddam Hussein's order, voted Friday to free all foreign nationals held hostage in Iraq and occupied Kuwait, the official Iraqi news agency INA said.

In a special session on the Moslem day of prayer, the assembly voted 235-15 to lift all travel restrictions for about 6,000 Western and Japanese nationals still trapped in the troubled area, INA said.

But the Iraqis did not say when the hostages would be freed.

A British Airways Boeing 767 left London for Baghdad Friday, but its crew did not know when they would return with the first load of 1,125 British hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait.

In Santiago, Chile, where President Bush was visiting on his five- country tour of South America, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said: ''We obviously welcome the vote of the assembly and hope the release of our hostages can be carried out as quickly and effectively as possible.''

Fitzwater said charge d'affaires Joseph Wilson would be meeting with Iraqi Foreign Ministry officials to discuss the logistics of the release.

The State Department is urging Americans still hiding inside Iraq and Kuwait to out of sight until Iraq makes clear when and how they can leave.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said if all Americans in Kuwait are allowed to leave, the U.S. Embassy would be vacated but would not be formally closed.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, asked on the ABC-TV progam ''Nightline'' if the hostages would be free by Christmas, replied: ''Well, I hope so. Yes, I think that by Christmas, everybody could ... could leave.''

Aziz said if the embassy in Kuwait is vacated, the United States ''will be given all the guarantees they are asking for. The building will be secure and there would be no problem about that ....''

Asked if foreigners still hiding in Kuwait are included in the release, Aziz said, ''Yes, yes, absolutely. They shouldn't be in hiding now after the decision taken by the National Assembly.''

Last month, Saddam said he would free the hostages in batches beginning Christmas Day and ending March 25.

In a message Thursday to the speaker of Iraq's National Assembly, Saddam told the parliament to ''lift the ban on the travel of all foreigners whose travel abroad has been restricted and to take a decision to this effect,'' according to the Iraqi News Agency.

Proponents of the release called the assembly vote a gesture of peace, the agency said.

Freedom for all foreign nationals held by Iraq since its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait would meet one of the three U.N. objectives for resolving the 4-month-old Persian Gulf crisis.

But Pentagon officials said Iraq continued this week to build up its military forces in the region, indicating Saddam is not ready to meet the two other U.N. objectives - unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and restoration of Kuwait's legitimate government.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said plans to complete the massive U.S. troop buildup in the Persian Gulf are not affected by the hostage issue. He told a meeting Friday of NATO defense ministers in Brussels that the additional 150,000 U.S. troops ordered to the gulf last month will be ''sufficient to give us offensive military capability should it be required.''

''We have no plans to alter the deployment now under way,'' Cheney said. ''If the hostages are released, we welcome that, but we don't think Saddam Hussein deserves praise for having decided to release people held in violation of every norm of international behavior.''

He also urged NATO members to send more combat troops to the gulf, as well as artillery and air defense systems.

A U.N. Security Council resolution passed Nov. 29 authorizes a U.S.- led multinational force arrayed in the Persian Gulf to forcibly dislodge Iraq from Kuwait after Jan. 15 unless Iraqi withdraws before then.

Iraq and the United States are preparing for top-level talks Bush called for Nov. 30. Baker is to travel to Baghdad to speak with Saddam and Aziz will meet with Bush in Washington.

Bush and Secretary of State James Baker said Saddam's announcement demonstrated that international military and diplomatic pressure against Iraq ''is working.''

Saddam's decision to free the hostages reportedly was made on a suggestion Wednesday of three of his few remaining Arab allies - Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat, Jordan's King Hussein and the vice president of Yemen.

The exact number of foreign hostages has never been established, partly because some remained in hiding. But the State Department's latest estimate indicates 900 U.S. citizens, including 88 ''human shields'' at key Iraqi installations, and about 5,000 from other countries.

This tally does not including Arab nationals who chose to stay.

Iraq has released many hostages and recently agreed to allow some 3, 300 Soviet captives to leave the country.

MOSCOW (DEC. 7) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev defended perestroika Friday from attacks by state enterprise bosses demanding a return to strong central control, saying state-run businesses are as much to blame for the crippled economy as the government.

Gorbachev acknowledged in a speech to about 3,000 directors of state enterprises that there have been blunders on the road to economic reforms but he said the Soviet Union cannot turn back.

The Soviet president also used the speech to announce the latest personnel shakeup in his government reorganization plan - with new appointments to the posts of justice minister, chief prosecutor and other positions designed to strengthen law and order and deal with economic disputes.

Justice Minister Veniamin Yakovlev was replaced and appointed the country's chief arbiter, heading a little publicized government department that is supposed to rule on economic disputes between enterprises and other public bodies.

Sergei Lushchikov, the deputy chairman of the Parliament committee on legislation, will replace Yakovlev as justice minister and Russian republic chief prosecutor Nikolai Turbin was appointed chief Soviet prosecutor, Tass said.

The moves followed the replacement last week of moderate Interior Minister Vadim Bakatin as part of a plan by Gorbachev to restructure the government to place more power directly under the president to deal with the myriad economic and political crisises in the country.

During the two-day meeting of leaders of state enterprises, most of them conservative communists, speaker after speaker lashed out at reforms they said destroyed the state control system and led to the economic crisis.

''Gorbachev took issue with allegations that the entire economic policy of the current leadership was flawed,'' Tass said of the meeting.

The Soviet leader acknowledged that ''in the course of economic reform serious blunders were made that led to commodity and monetary imbalances and a growing budget deficit,'' but he stressed that the move toward a market system ''was and remains the only true course.''

The directorships of state enterprises are generally limited to loyal communists and the group that filled a hall at the Kremlin Thursday and Friday reflected the conservative wing of the party.

''It was not accidental that the audience responded with indignation to Mikhail Gorbachev's remark that enterprise managers were no less to blame for the lamentable state of the country's economy than the government,'' Tass said in a commentary.

Conservatives have been calling for a return to strict central control, blaming food shortages and other economic ills on reforms while disregarding evidence that 70 years of communism crippled the economic system.

''The meeting was also useful for critics of the president and the government who have been calling for a faster transition to the market,'' Tass said in its commentary, ''because the gathering showed vividly the thick layer of misunderstanding and incompetence the country had yet to overcome to normalize its economy.''

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (DEC. 7) UPI - Working around a computer failure, the Columbia astronauts resumed probing the heavens Friday, beaming back a torrent of priceless data and teaching an astronomy lesson encouraging kids to study math and science.

After studying the shattered remnants of an exploded star, energetic galaxies and other high-priority targets, the shuttle astronomers focused their instruments on the moons of Jupiter to learn more about their composition.

''We've had a lot of setbacks, but success is at hand here,'' said astronomer Arthur Davidsen. ''This is not a failure by anybody's stretch of the imagination. We're making so much progress it's unbelievable. I think we're winning this game now.''

Late Friday, mission scientist Ted Gull summed up the day by telling reporters ''there is great science coming down and we are excited to say the least.''

With elated researchers poring over a flood of data, payload communicator Debbie Underwood radioed Columbia: ''It looks like every observation is a first down and every new discovery is a touchdown.''

''What a great analogy,'' Durrance replied. ''That sounds good.''

Closer to home, Columbia's crew planned to attempt seeing NASA's Galileo probe Saturday as the unmanned spacecraft raced past Earth on a convoluted path to Jupiter, although at a distance of 2,162 miles, the probe will be difficult to see. Meanwhile, the work in orbit continued.

After implementing an emergency plan switching control of Columbia's three ultraviolet telescopes to the ground, priceless data from the space shuttle has been flowing back to Earth in a steady stream, thrilling researchers who have been on an emotional roller coaster since launch Sunday.

''This has been quite an interesting and dynamic mission,'' astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman said in a telecast from space that was beamed into school rooms across the nation. ''We've shown that in spaceflight, you have to be extremely adaptable and able to accommodate things that fail. ''

Three of Columbia's four telescopes were knocked out of action Thursday when the second of two critical payload computers overheated and failed, leaving the astronauts with no way to aim their ultraviolet telescopes.

A fourth telescope, one sensitive to X-rays, was not affected by the computer problem and was able to gather data throughout the troubleshooting.

To salvage the glitch-plagued flight, the astronauts and scientists on Earth quickly improvised a way to let ground controllers, working by remote control, to aim the telescopes in the general direction of a given target.

After that, the astronauts were able to zoom in using a joystick controller to make critical science observations, achieving levels of efficiency rivaling what they expected before the computer failures.

''We are holding real steady (on the target) and want to congratulate you for doing an outstanding job,'' Underwood radioed the crew at one point Friday from the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala.

''Why thank you. We aim to please,'' Durrance replied.

Durrance, 47, Hoffman, 46, Ronald Parise, 39, and Robert Parker, 53, are professional astronomers by training. Their three crewmates - commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42, John ''Mike'' Lounge, 44 - are responsible for keeping Columbia pointed in the right direction.

Landing is scheduled for Tuesday night at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

The revised operating plan is tedious and the astronauts' ultimate efficiency has yet to be seen. But they are continuing to gather valuable data about the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe after a dismal start.

''Most of the mission so far has been fairly tedious,'' Parise said, answering a student's question. ''In our case, unfortunately we've had some failures with some computer terminals that have caused us to redo the way we operate this mission.

''It's quite tedious and time consuming to try to figure out how to do that. But we're slowly working around everything and we're getting science data and doing our jobs.''

Since blastoff Sunday, Columbia's mission has been beset by technical glitches and hardware failures that derailed the crew's carefully planned schedule and severely limited the number of astronomical observations they were able to accomplish during the first half of the mission.

The most serious problem was the failure Sunday and Thursday of the shuttle's two payload computers, electronic brains that allowed the astronauts to issue orders to a complex computerized telescope mount needed to aim their ultraviolet telescopes.

The crippling computer shutdown occurred about 7:15 a.m. Thursday after the crew noticed a burning smell similar to the odor that preceded the failure of an identical computer nine hours after liftoff Sunday on the 38th shuttle mission.

The astronauts removed an access panel on the computer that failed Sunday and found its ventilation ducts clogged with dust, which probably caused it to overheat. After the vents were vacuumed, the astronauts attempted to restart the computer, but they quickly smelled a burning odor and shut it off.

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Finally realizing Christa McAuliffe's dream, the shuttle Columbia's crew taught a lesson from orbit Friday, explaining the wonders of astronomy and urging school kids to study math and science.

The lessons from space were televised and beamed down to classrooms across the nation in a project to show students how astronauts live and work in orbit and to describe the value of studying the entire electromagnetic spectrum to learn more about the structure and evolution of the cosmos.

''I'm talking to you from the space shuttle Columbia orbiting 200 miles above the surface of the Earth,'' astronomer Samuel Durrance said as he began the space lesson from Columbia. ''I'd like to talk to you today about space, astronomy and the electromagnetic spectrum.

''The universe is playing a kind of symphony in the light that it produces. Up here in space, telescopes can see all the radiation to better understand the universe. In the shuttle, we're above the Earth's atmosphere. This allows the shuttle's telescopes to see the unseen, the invisible radiation.''

The goal of the 38th shuttle mission is to study X-rays and ultraviolet light from deep space targets that cannot penetrate Earth's atmosphere. Such radiation is invisible to the unaided eye and the astronauts' lesson focused on explaining the value of studying all forms of light.

''Looking at the stars or other objects in just visible light is sort of like listening to the piano with only a few working keys,'' Durrance said. ''You miss most of the song. To understand the stars, we must look at the invisible as well as the visible radiation.''

Select groups of middle school students - seventh and eighth graders - were gathered at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., and the Goddard Space Flight Center in Greenbelt, Md., to observe the lesson firsthand.

Students across the nation were able to pick up the lesson through satellite dishes to watch it live in their classrooms in an unprecedented effort to highlight science education.

The 20-minute lesson, entitled ''Space Classroom: Assignment the Stars,'' was taught by Durrance and astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman, who took their students on a brief tour of the shuttle. Questions from the students later were answered by astronaut Robert Parker and astronomer Ronald Parise.

''If you are interested in this sort of work and would like to learn something about it yourself and perhaps participate in the space age in the future, my recommendation for all of you students listening is to continue to study hard ... read a lot about astronomy and space and maybe you can help answer some of these questions that we've been talking about,'' said Hoffman, wearing a shirt and tie.

''Some of the things we're studying now are things that a generation ago, many people didn't even think about. And I'm sure that some of you will end up studying questions that we don't even think about now.''

In a pre-launch interview, Hoffman said he wanted to ''excite students about careers in science, engineering and mathematics.''

''We hope this will be a demonstration of the tremendous potential we have using shuttle flights to really contact students and get them excited,'' he said.

McAuliffe, who was killed along with six fellow crewmembers in the 1986 Challenger explosion, was selected as NASA's Teacher in Space and was to have taught several lessons while in orbit.

Although her dream was finally realized through the Columbia lessons, NASA officials said the idea for the project dated back many years.

''There have been a lot of people within NASA interested in education for a long time, and it just seems that this was an idea whose time had finally come '' said NASA spokesman Dave Drachlis.

Columbia carried aloft a payload of four sophisticated telescopes to examine space in the ultraviolet and X-ray wavelengths.

''The fundamental thing we'd like to get across to students is that the universe is sending us information in the broad spectrum of radiation, and we only see the tiniest bit of that when we look at it from the Earth,'' Hoffman said.

''It opens the students' minds up to the idea of the electromagnetic spectrum. That is a great vehicle for talking about radioactivity, microwaves, ultraviolet, X-rays - things which we know about in other parts of our lives, but which you might not think of in terms of astronomy.''

SANTA MONICA, CA (DEC. 7) UPI - A judge Friday told lawyers in the murder case against actor Marlon Brando's son that he may ask French authorities in Tahiti for help in returning the suspect's half sister to testify at his trial.

Superior Court Judge Joel Rudof also said, however, that he may change his mind after reviewing written arguments he requested from attorneys for Cheyenne Brando who contend she is mentally and physically incompetent to testify.

Both prosecutors and defense attorneys agree that Cheyenne's testimony is central to their cases.

Deputy District Attorney Steven Barshop conceded time is running short. Lawyers planned to ask that Christian Brando's trial begin sometime in January. He said prosecutors are prepared for trial with or without Cheyenne.

Cheyenne Brando, 20, told police her half brother Christian, 32, had premeditated the slaying of her Tahitian lover, Dag Drollet, 26, who was shot in the face at Marlon Brando's mountaintop mansion in Los Angeles on May 16.

Police said Cheyenne told them Christian had talked about killing Drollet and on the night of the slaying he picked up a gun at the home of his girlfriend. She said she heard Christian shoot Drollet, who was the father of the baby Cheyenne gave birth to a few weeks after the incident.

Christian, the screen legend's eldest son, has admitted killing Drollet, but claims it was an accident.

After the killing, Cheyenne flew to Tahiti, where authorities have been investigating her as a possible accomplice in the slaying of Drollet, the son of a powerful Tahitian political figure.

Cheyenne's lawyers told Rudof that Tahitian authorities had on Thursday declared Cheyenne incompetent to handle her own affairs and placed her and her baby under the guardianship of her mother.

Cheyenne twice has attempted suicide since returning to Tahiti and is currently confined to a hospital. Her attorneys contend she is in no condition to leave Tahiti and would be incompetent to testify at Christian's trial.

Richard Hirsch, one of her lawyers, said, ''We feel this is a cruel and inhuman attitude the district attorney has taken'' in pursuing the return of Cheyenne.

Barshop told reporters there is a difference in Tahitian law between civil incompetence and incompetence to testify and he wants psychiatrists to examine Cheyenne.

Rudof, asked by prosecutors to intervene in writing to French authorities in Tahiti for their assistance in returning Cheyenne, tentatively agreed. However he told Cheyenne's attorneys to submit documents detailing why Cheyenne should be allowed to remain in Tahiti.

The judge indicated he would consider the issue further later in the month.

If convicted as charged of first-degree murder, Christian could be sentenced to 25 years to life in prison.

MEXICO CITY (DEC. 7) UPI - OPEC Secretary General Subroto told a meeting of independent oil producers that a meeting with members of his cartel was possible as an attempt to stabilize world prices, a Mexican official said Friday.

Subroto mentioned the possibile joint meeting to the independent producers Thursday at their conference being held in the resort town of Cancun, 775 miles east of Mexico City, said Avel Magana, a spokesman for Mexico's Energy Ministry.

Subroto said his 13-nation Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries alone could not stabilize oil prices.

OPEC needs cooperation from the independent oil producers that produce 37 million barrels of oil a day, 14 million barrels a day more than countries belonging to the cartel, Subroto was quoted as saying.

OPEC members such as Saudi Arabia, Iran and the United Arab Emirates, however, have most of the world's excess production capacity and the abilty to raise output to meet rising demand.

Indonesia's Subroto is attending the final day of the two-day, closed-door talks of the independent producers as an observer.

He also met in Mexico City Thursday with Mexican Energy Minister Fernando Hiriart and Francisco Rojas, director general of Mexico's Pemex national oil company.

Subroto said high oil prices that have resulted from Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, could hurt the world economy in the long term, despite short-term benefits to oil-exporting countries, the Energy Ministry said in a statement.

Representatives from the 12 non-OPEC independent producers countries, in their first conference since the invasion threw world oil markets into turmoil, have been meeting in Cancun to discuss ways to stabilize world prices.

They include government officials and oil experts from Angola, China, Colombia Egypt, Malaysia, Mexico, Norway, Oman, the Soviet Union and Yemen. Experts from the states of Texas and Alaska and the Canadian province of Alberta also are attending the meeting.

Mexican Deputy Energy Minister Alberto Escofet told reporters Thursday that the so-called independent producers do not want to form a competing cartel to OPEC. Escofet said the meeting was trying to find ways to stabilize, not fix, world oil prices.

OPEC, which is scheduled to hold its semiannual meeting starting Wednesday in Vienna, has attempted to control world prices in the past by limiting the output of its members.

The Iraqi invasion and the subsequent U.N. embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti exports, however, have thrown the cartel's quota mechanism and world oil markets into disarry.

(DEC. 7) UPI - The Galileo probe closed in on Earth Friday, hurtling toward a velocity-boosting flyby Saturday just 600 miles above the Atlantic Ocean, the first of two such encounters needed to put the craft on course for distant Jupiter .

As of noon Friday, the $1.5 billion nuclear-powered probe was 584,539 miles from Earth, on track for a 3:35 p.m. EST Saturday flyby after a similar encounter with Venus on Feb. 10.

As Galileo races by, Earth's gravity will bend the craft's trajectory and boost its speed 11,620 mph - from 67,240 mph to 78,860 mph relative to the sun.The action will fling the spacecraft into a long orbit carrying it out into the asteroid belt before falling back toward a second Earth flyby in two years.

Passing a scant 200 miles above South Africa on Dec. 8, 1992, Galileo's velocity will be boosted 8,280 mph to a blistering 87,190 mph - fast enough to finally begin the long voyage to Jupiter, some 480 million miles from the sun.

Galileo was launched from the space shuttle Atlantis on Oct. 18, 1989, on an unprecedented mission to drop a probe into Jupiter's stormy atmosphere before going into orbit for humanity's first long-term study of the solar system's largest planet.

Sailing through a ballet of ever-changing orbits, Galileo's electronic ears and eyes will study Jupiter's atmosphere, its whirling moons and its space environment in exquisite detail, beaming back close- up photographs 20 to 1,000 times better than the spectacular pictures taken by the Voyager probes.

NASA originally intended to fire Galileo directly to Jupiter using a hydrogen-fueled Centaur rocket, but the program was canceled in the wake of the Challenger disaster, forcing mission planners to rely instead on a less-powerful solid-fuel ''inertial upper stage'' booster.

The IUS did not have enough power to boost Galileo directly to its target, so the probe was launched to Venus for the first of three velocity-boosting flybys.

On Feb. 10, Galileo used the gravity of Venus to increase its speed from 83,750 mph relative to the sun to 88,740 mph. The maneuver put Galileo into a new orbit, one carrying it back to Earth for the first of its two flybys.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Instead of slicing open 5-year-old plastic ration pouches, the troops on patrol at the front lines in Saudi Arabia soon will be able to eat meals as fresh as packaged preservative-laced food can be.

The Pentagon has placed a $260 million order for nearly 190,000,000 entree side dish packs for its basic battlefield ration in a move to both preserve and build up dwindling supplies of the food soldiers carry into battle.

Just in case the intelligence analysts in Baghdad are counting, that's about a six-month supply of food for a force of 400,000 eating three meals a day.

The contracts were let this week to seven different food suppliers throughout the country and cover everything from spaghetti with meat sauce to ham slices, chicken ala king, omelets with ham and chicken stew and beef stew.

The troops at the front have been using up the meals at the rate of about 1 million a month, and Lorraine Netzko, a spokeswoman for the Defense Personnel

Support Center in Philadelphia, which issued the contracts, said officials decided that although they had stockpiles for the event of war and had no supply concerns for a year, they should start building up the stockpiles again.

In addition to having businesses around the country cranking out more of what are known as ''meals, ready to eat'' or MRE in the military shorthand, food service officials also are assembling packages of food off the supermarket shelves with such items as cups of noodles that reconstitute with hot water, meats, packs of pudding and the like. Those fresher meals are know as MORE meals, for ''meal, operational ready to eat.''

With the soldiers eating the MORE meals the stockpiles of battlefield rations do not fall as quickly, and with the contracts for additional fresh supplies of the MREs, food service officials can both send the newest rations to the front and start rebuilding the stockpile.

Although two varieties contain pork, a food prohibited under Islamic dietary law, the Saudi government looks the other way when ships unload huge pallets of the cartons of MREs, each with 12 different main courses per carton.

''We've got enough (MREs) to take us through December (1991) and beyond, but the idea is to build back up the reserves, even if everything ended tomorrow '' said Netzko.

Once the new meals start coming out some will go into the stockpile and others will be sent to the front, Netzko said.

Until now, the Defense Logistics Agency has been shipping out meals assembled in 1987, 1988 and 1989. Some troops took with them meals put together in 1984 and 1985. The newer meals have more variety and taste better, but the older meals are servicable.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - One of three known autographs of baseball player ''Shoeless'' Joe Jackson has been sold for $23,100, the highest price ever paid at auction for a 19th or 20th century autograph, it was reported Friday.

The autograph was purchased Wednesday at a private auction at the Sheraton City Squire hotel by Joshua Evans, owner of Lelands, a sports memorabilia auction house. Evans said he made the purchase with a potential customer in mind.

''We paid more than it would cost to buy a complete set of every presidential signature from Washington to Bush combined,'' Evans said. ''But we were quite confident in buying this because of the historical significance of the autograph and the nation's fascination with Shoeless Joe.''

Jackson was banned from baseball for life in 1919 after he was charged with conspiring with eight other Chicago White Sox players, renamed the ''Black Sox '' to throw the World Series to Cincinnati, although scholars believe Jackson had nothing to do with the scandal.

His character was recently depicted in two films, ''Eight Men Out'' and ''Field of Dreams.''

Evans explained that Jackson was illiterate and could write his name only by copying someone else's writing of it.

The autograph he purchased is on a piece of paper cut from a legal document signed in April, 1936, originally obtained from a member of the Jackson family. The other two known signatures remain in the possession of the family, he said.

The world record for any signature is $56,000 for an autograph of Button Gwinnett, a signer of the Declaration of Independence who died in a duel in 1777, less than a year after the signing.

CHICAGO (DEC. 7) UPI - Dwight Evans, the star outfielder who has spent his 19-year career with the Boston Red Sox, signed a 1-year contract with the Baltimore Orioles.

The deal, completed Thursday night, could be worth up to $1.3 million, depending on how many games Evans plays.

Evans, 39, suffered from a bad back last year and was used mostly as a designated hitter. The Orioles sought assurances on his health before signing him.

Evans hit .306 in the last six weeks of last season, helping Boston win the American League East. He finished the season hitting .249 with 13 homers and 63 RBI. He has won eight Gold Gloves and still has one of the best arms in baseball.

''In the next season, I feel like I've got to be an all-round player, and that means playing in the outfield,'' Evans said.

''This is a step in the right direction,'' said Orioles Manager Frank Robinson. ''We've played the youngsters the past couple of years. We made a big step forward and then fell back. We just feel like we can use the experience of a player of Dwight's caliber. We feel he can give us some production and some leadership.''

Evans, who began his career with the Red Sox in 1972, has a .272 lifetime batting average, 379 home runs and 1,346 runs batted in. His best season was in 1987 when he batted .305, hit 34 home runs and drove in 123 runs.

Said General Manager Roland Hemond: ''To have someone of his stature join our club is a big plus. He's such a fine all-round player, he's a future Hall of Famer.''

MIAMI (DEC. 7) UPI - The failure of the current round of world trade talks would make it more difficult for the Bush administration to pursue several important trade initiatives in Latin America, a top U.S. trade official said Friday.

Myles Frechette, an assistant U.S. trade representative for Latin America and the Caribbean, said the collapse of the 4-year-old talks would strengthen the hand of those who favor protectionist trade policies.

The administration's Enterprise for the Americas initiative, which President Bush has promoted during a trip to South America this week, could suffer as a result, he said.

Frechette said Bush conceived of the initiative as a complement to the Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

As a result, the outcome of those talks ''will have a major impact on how far and how fast we can push ahead,'' he said.

Stalled talks could also affect the administration's ability to conclude a free trade agreement with Mexico, he said.

The trade talks adjourned Friday in Brussels, Belgium, after a frustrating week of clashes between the United States and the European Community over farm subsidies.

Officials said the Uruguay Round will resume sometime next year in Geneva.

''We are concerned that, like a bicycle, if the world trading system does not continue to move forward, it will fall sideways,'' Frechette told a gathering at the 14th annual Miami Conference on the Caribbean.

''Without the commitment of governments to the multilateral system, protectionist and unilateral policies will be more appealing,'' he said.

Bush's enterprise initiative and the possibility of a free trade pact between the United States and Mexico have dominated discussions during the four-day Miami conference.

Many participants from smaller countries in Central America and the Caribbean fear the loss of their preferential trading status under current U.S. law.

Some have suggested that Mexico and the United States instead should pursue a multilateral pact, but Frechette said the administration is cool to the idea.

Other countries or trading blocks in the hemisphere that are interested in freer trade with the United States should seek bilateral agreements, he said.

Six countries, including Costa Rica and Honduras, have signed trade and investment framework agreements with the United States, in what is seen as the first step in that process, Frechette said.

At the same time, Frechette said, the administration intends to promote integration among nations and trading blocks, to avoid a trading system based on a web of bilateral agreements tying each country to the United States.

Bush's intiative also drew a strong endorsement Friday from Enrique Iglesias, the president of the Inter-American Development Bank.

''This is perhaps the most important challenge ever put to Latin America and the Caribbean in the history of our relations,'' Iglesias said. ''It is the first time we have received an invitation to talk collectively.''

However, both Iglesias and Frechette warned developing countries in the region that they must undertake economic reforms and improve their national investment climates if they want to take advantage of the program.

CHICAGO (DEC. 7) UPI - Wheat futures rallied on commercial buying but other grain and soybean futures were lower at the close Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Most of the demand for wheat was based on the overnight sale of 200, 000 tons to Egypt. However, gains were limited by the weakness on the rest of the floor.

Both corn and soybeans were pressured by the lack of near-term export business but had underlying support from fairly good sales during the past week.

Heavy deliveries of December corn also weighed on corn values.

Prices in the soybean complex fell to session lows about midday, but the market recovered some of its losses late in the day.

Country movement of corn and soybeans was light during the session.

Interior and Gulf basis levels were mostly lower.

At the close, corn was up 1/4s to off 1 1/4, soybeans down 1 1/2 to 4, wheat up 2 1/4 to 6 and oats off 1/2 to 1 1/2.

SOFIA, Bulgaria (DEC. 7) UPI - Parliament approved the nomination Friday of the chairman of the Sofia Municipal Court as prime minister-designate, filling the void left by the collapse of Bulgaria's Socialist-led government.

Judge Dimitar Popov was nominated by President Zhelyu Zhelev earlier in the day and a week after Socialist Prime Minister Andrei Loukanov stepped down under pressure.

Popov is expected to present his new Cabinet to parliament, the Grand National Assembly, next Wednesday.

Loukanov's Nov. 30 resignation followed strikes and four days of street demonstrations by independent trade unions and members of the opposition Union of Democratic Forces protesting price hikes and what they regard as the slow pace of democratic and free-market reform.

''We accepted his candidacy because we agreed the prime minister must be neutral and he is such a person,'' Zhelev told Parliament, adding Popov is to lead a government of ''national hope.''

Feeble applause greeted the nomination of the little-known jurist, who was vice-chairman of the Central Election Committee during the country's democratic parliamentary elections last June.

The majority socialists - formerly the communists - and the opposition UDF had been locked in discussion for a week on choosing a replacement for Loukanov.

Alexander Jordanov, a spokesman for UDF, said Friday he was unhappy with the announcement.

''I do not think Popov is the right man for the job. We firmly believe he cannot be neutral. If he is prime minister the next government will be weak. Only those who wish to slow down the democratic process have an interest in a weak government,'' Jordanov said.

In his speech to Parliament, Zhelev also said local elections would be held by the end of February and parliamentary elections by the end of May.

He said Pparliament would be dissolved by the end of March but that before then it would vote on a new constitution and eight ''vitally important laws'' on economic and government reforms.

These include laws on free-market economic reforms, including privatizing state-owned businesses and land, a law on banking, new commercial and tax codes and laws on social guarantees, as well as an election law and laws on local government and administrative reform.

Zhelev called on Parliament to make ''a maximum effort to work more efficiently,'' and praised Loukanov for his efforts, but said his party had been doomed to retire.

''I would like to say Andrei Loukanov did not step down because of political incompetence,'' Popov told Parliament. ''He is the most competent man in his party. He stepped down not for lack of merit but because he led a government of a party that was doomed to part with power.''

Popov now faces a difficult job, with Bulgaria locked in a downward economic spiral. Food, gas and electricity are rationed. No meat is available in Sofia, farmers cannot get feed for their livestock and hospitals are critically short of vital medicine, including anesthetics and antibiotics.

The Soviet Union has cut back deliveries of crude oil and other essential raw materials, and the country has stopped payment on its $10. 2 billion foreign debt, effectively halting imports.

The gray-haired Popov, 63, speaking without notes, said he could only implement necessary reforms if he ''received wide support from all forces in the political spectrum and only if goodwill prevails.''

He pledged to restore to Bulgarian government ''the prestige without which no society can function, and to quickly implement the necessary reforms for transition to democracy.''

CAIRO, Egypt (DEC. 7) UPI - President Hosni Mubarak's ruling National Democratic Party won the lion's share of votes in runoff elections for the country's 444-seat Parliament, with independents, including Moslem fundamentalists, a distant second, press reports said Friday.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency said the Western-oriented NDP clinched 348 seats or 79.6 percent of the vote, while independents took 19 percent or 83 seats.

Most of the independents who won were right-wing former members of the NDP and some were Islamic fundamentalists.

The Marxist-oriented National Progressive Unionist Rally clinched 1.4 percent of the vote or six seats, including one for party leader Khaled Mohieddin.

Arab radio stations said the vote was an endorsement of Mubarak's handling of the Persian Gulf crisis although the large number of independents elected was a reminder that Egypt's economy still suffers from over-centralization, inflation and unemployment.

Some independents called on Mubarak to come off the fence between leftist Nasserites and free marketeers in his own party and take the risk of lifting subsidies on basic food items and promoting more private enterprise.

Late Egyptian President Anwar Saddat tried to import more consumer goods after the years of leftist rule by Gamal Abdel Nasser but Mubarak has cautiously trodden the more difficult path of trying to reform Egyptian industry.

State-run Egyptian enterprises are labor-intensive because of the country's large population and government pledges to provide jobs for all university graduates.

MENA quoted the Interior Ministry as saying there would further runoff elections for seven parliamentary seats in Cairo and the Nile area because no candidate got a majority.

Thursday's runoff elections were marred by violence and at least nine people were killed and hundreds injured in clashes with security forces.

There were also allegations of vote-rigging from major opposition parties that boycotted the election.

Mubarak called the elections in October after the country's Supreme Court ruled the last elections, in 1987, were invalid because too many candidates had been elected on a party ticket.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Consumer installment credit rose by $1.46 billion in October after gaining $2.8 billion the month before, the Federal Reserve said Friday.

Growth in revolving credit slowed in October, outstanding automobile loans declined as did loans for mobile homes, the Fed said.

All other forms of outstanding consumer loans increased at about the same rate in October as in the previous month.

At the end of October, outstanding consumer credit totaled $736.6 billion, with automobile loans accounting for $284.4 billion; credit cards and other revolving credit, $218.3 billion; mobile home loans, $22.4 billion and all other forms of credit, $211.3 billion, the Fed said.

UNITED NATIONS (DEC. 7) UPI - A top advisor to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev said Friday the Persian Gulf crisis could have escalated into another Cuban missile crisis if the Cold War had not ended.

Georgi Arbatov said the crisis points out the benefits of East-West cooperation and the need for a greater role for the United Nations in resolving international problems.

''One has to think how happy we are that this did not happen during the Cold War because it could have had very dangerous consequences,'' said Arbatov, chief advisor to Gorbachev on North American affairs.

''It could have been a situation like the Cuban missile crisis, maybe perhaps without such a happy outcome,'' he said.

Arbatov said the United Nations was ''lucky to survive'' the Cold War, during which every crisis became a U.S.-Soviet challenge. One of the grave results, he said, was the militarization of the superpowers and a ''poor man's arms race'' in the Third World.

''It was a situation in which every enemy of an enemy became a friend,'' Arbatov said. ''This situation I hope has passed away forever. ''

With declining East-West tensions, Arbatov said he expects most nations, including the United States, to ''shed imperialism. We've had enough of all of it,'' he said.

Instead, he said, the United Nations needs to be activated and strengthened as countries turn inward to face long-neglected domestic problems.

''In every country - rich and poor, big and small - the internal problems are No.1 on the list of priorities,'' Arbatov said.

Arbatov, who has advised Gorbachev at each U.S.-Soviet summit, said Kremlin leaders went through a ''painful proces'' recognizing that national security cannot be achieved without the cooperation of the other superpower.

And, he said, the withdrawal of Soviet troops from Afghanistan taught the leadership an important lesson.

''It is much easier to make decisions to send your troops somewhere than to bring them home,'' Arbatov said. ''And it involves much more courage from the statesmen.''

(DEC. 7) UPI - Glum retailers, fearing Santa Claus will pass them by, slashed prices to post-Christmas clearance levels Friday, hoping to entice reluctant customers and prevent Christmas spirits from evaporating.

Sears Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, and both Toys ''R'' Us and Child World, the two largest toy-store chains, announced massive discounting programs, reducing prices as much as 75 percent to get the Christmas shopping season out of the doldrums.

Retailers normally chalk up 20 percent of their annual sales during the Christmas season, but sales are lagging badly this year.

After reviewing sales for the Thanksgiving weekend - traditionally the year's busiest shopping period - Sears executives decided drastic steps were needed to get shoppers into the stores.

''Sears believes the retail environment during this holiday season is the most competitive ever, and Sears intends to respond quickly by bringing better values and promotions to our customers now,'' said Sears spokesman Perry Chlan.

So, the retailer has launched what Chlan called its ''biggest pre- Christmas sale ever.''

''Consumers are concerned about the economy and the Middle East situation, and that's had a negative impact on sales, as has the warmer than usual weather in many parts of the country,'' Chlan said. ''So we're taking several steps to respond to those conditions.

''From now through Christmas Eve, Sears is moving up its traditional after-Christmas apparel sale by reducing prices 20 to 40 percent on apparel such as swearters, men's flannel shirts, women's fall shoes and boots and outerwear,'' Chlan said.

The retail giant also is offering special, limited-time promotions.

On Friday and Saturday, Sears is reducing prices up to $500 on big- ticket items like washers and dryers, dishwashers, video recorders and televisions in its Brand Central electronics and appliance department, Chlan said.

And offering additional discounts of 10 percent to customers with discount coupons who shop during the first two hours of shopping Saturday - 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. local time.

Next Tuesday and Wednesday, Chlan said, Sears will offer zero percent financing on select merchandise such as home electronics, jewelry and furniture.

''Sears has totally revamped its marketing strategy and we produced new print and television ads last weekend. The ads began airing last night,'' Chlan said. ''It's quite a move for a retailer this large to act this quickly and we're doing that because we need to respond very quickly to customers needs.

Toys ''R'' Us, the world's largest toy retailer, Friday announced an inventory ''clearance'' offering reductions of up to 75 percent on selected items.

''It has been a bit slower than usual,'' said Angela Bourdon, a spokeswoman for the Paramus, N.J.-based retailer - which operates 451 stores nationwide and accounts for 36 percent of all toy sales.

So, she said, the chain decided on a series of big markdowns to get customers into stores. The price cuts, she said, represent a cut of $100 million on the stores' inventory. She was unable to provide the total inventory value.

The sale applies to ''older items'' such as the ''Double Dare'' board game; hand-held electronic games; some Fisher Price items; and some Nintendo software, Bourdon said.

Examples of new prices are a talking baseball, reduced to $19.98 from $99.99; some hand-held electronic games marked down to $12.98 from $17. 99, and some Nintendo software reduced to $19.98 from $40.98.

The clearance will continue until the items are sold, Bourdon said.

She said that, while most customers do their Christmas shopping in the last week, ''it would be a good idea for them to start (now).''

Rival Child World, a 182-store chain that accounts for about 6 percent of all U.S. toy sales, said it is cutting prices as much 50 percent on a wide variety of toys, dolls and games, including 267 titles of Nintendo video games and more than 100 titles of Atari and Sega video games.

MOSCOW (DEC. 7) UPI - Church bells rang throughout Armenia at 11:41 a.m. Friday to mark the moment two years ago when a massive earthquake leveled towns and villages and killed nearly 25,000 people.

Reconstruction efforts financed partly from the outpouring of international emergency aid continued to slowly rebuild the devastated area of the southern Soviet republic, where thousands are still homeless.

Residents observed a day of mourning Friday with church services, visits to graves and the unveiling of monuments to those who died in the Dec. 7, 1988, quake that measured 7 on the Richter scale.

More than $500 million in foreign aid poured into the Soviet Union after the quake that destroyed the towns of Spitak, Leninakan, Kumairi, Stepanavan and Nalband.

In much of the area, however, many residents are still living in shantytowns and the rebuilding's slow pace has drawn sharp criticism.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 7) UPI - A judge issued an arrest warrant Friday for actor

Corey Feldman upon learning he had been arrested hours earlier for driving without a license and had been suspended from a live-in drug program, prosecutors said.

Arrangments were being made for Feldman, 19, to surrender next week on the no-bail warrant, the District Attorney's Office said.

Deputy District Attorney Peter Cagney said Superior Court Judge Gordon Ringer issued the warrant upon being informed Feldman was arrested Thursday night and that he had been suspended for rules violations from the live-in drug program he entered in October.

Sgt. Pat Findlay said police stopped Feldman in his 1989 BMW in Hollywood at 10:50 p.m. Thursday. Feldman did not show his drivers license when he was asked for it and police discovered it had been suspended, Findlay said.

Feldman, whose voice is heard in the film ''Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles,'' and who appeared in ''Stand by Me,'' ''Goonies'' and ''Lost Boys,'' was released earlier Friday after posting a bond of $528.

Feldman was arrested Sept. 20 for outstanding traffic warrants and charged with heroin possession when packets of the drug were discovered in his socks during a booking search.

At the time, Feldman had just finished a drug rehabilitation program after he was charged in March with possessing 25 balloons of heroin and cocaine. That arrest also came after he was stopped for a traffic violation.

Both drug cases have been combined. Ringer gave Feldman permission to enter the drug program and stay out of jail while the cases were pending, as long as he complied with the program's rules, Cagney said.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - The dollar took a dive again in New York trading Friday on a sharp rise in U.S. unemployment and Federal Reserve moves to lower short-term interest rates, but market caution prevented a free fall.

The Labor Department said the national jobless rate vaulted to 5.9 percent in November from 5.7 percent in October, as 265,000 jobs were pared from the nation's payrolls - the worst employment drop since 1982.

Later, the Fed bought $1.5 billion in government securities, injecting money into the bank reserve system so as to guide the closely watched Fed funds rate on short-term interbank loans to 7.25 percent from 7.5 percent.

Currency traders said the jobs data was worse than expected, and the Fed move came sooner than most market players were expecting. Both developments were seen as highly negative for the already weak dollar.

''Barring any (central bank) intervention I would expect the dollar to go even lower than this,'' said senior trader William English of the Banca Nazionale dell'Agricoltura in New York.

In late New York dealings, the dollar was at 1.4715 German marks, down from 1.4875 marks Thursday, and at 130.65 Japanese yen, off from 132.20. That mark price was close to the record low of 1.4705 marks set Nov. 16.

The British pound moved up to $1.9540 from $1.9400.

Other New York dollar rates: $1.2535 Swiss francs, off from 1.2716; 4.9990 French francs, down from 5.0500; and 1,110.75 Italian lire, off from 1,121.75.

English noted, though, that the dollar's drop, while large, was not as sharp as it might have been. He said players moved carefully in the thin, volatile year-end market and did not sell dollars aggressively.

''Actually there was a very cautious response to the (jobs) number,'' confirmed Shearson Lehman Brothers analyst Lisa Finstrom. She cited rumors that the Fed was checking dealer prices - sometimes a veiled intervention threat.

The Mideast crisis still loomed, despite peace overtures. BNA's English cited ''fear of events in the Gulf flaring up, adding, ''We really don't know if the talks (set for mid-month) will produce ''for mid-m

In Europe, the dollar closed lower amid reduced Persian Gulf tensions and the largest monthly rise in U.S. unemployment since 1982, which boded continuing declines in U.S. short-term interest rates.

With a Mideast war less likely, investors were paying more attention to signs the U.S. economy is in a steep recessionary decline. ''The dollar looks to me (to be) fundamentally soft,'' declared one money trader.

In Frankfurt, the dollar slipped to 1.4830 German marks vs. 1.4875 Thursday. In Zurich, it fell to 1.2640 Swiss francs from 1.2705.

In London, Britain's pound firmed to $1.9510 from $1.9390.

The dollar also fell in in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to 5.0375 French francs vs. 5.0540, 30.61 Belgian francs vs. 30.96 and 1,119 Italian lire vs 1,125.50.

In Tokyo earlier, the dollar sank against the yen on news Iraq would let the 6,000 foreign hostages go home, closing at 132.17 yen vs. 134. 05.

Iraq's announcement boosted market expectations of a peaceful resolution to the Gulf crisis, prompting sales of the dollar, dealers said.

In Zurich, gold closed higher at $371.50 an ounce from $368.50, and also was higher in London at $371 an ounce from $370.

Silver in Zurich closed unchanged at $4.15 an ounce. In London, silver closed higher at $4.15 an ounce from $4.12.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $369.75 an ounce, off from $370.75 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold contracts at $370.30 an ounce, down from $371.70.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.075 an ounce, off from $4.145. Comex silver ended dealings at $4.055 an ounce, a decline from $4.121.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - The IRS said Friday soldiers in Operation Desert Shield and those around the world will have until June 15 to file and pay their taxes, a full two months more than those within the United States.

Also Friday, Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said that when the new Congress convenes next month he will introduce legislation waiving interest penalties for servicemen in the Persian Gulf who file their taxes after April 15.

An IRS spokesman said that although the tax collecting agency had authority to provide extra time for servicemen oveaseas to file their returns and could even extend the time further if necessary, it did not have the legal authority to waive the interest penalties so Dole's legislation would be required to provide a further benefit for service personnel.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (DEC. 7) UPI - New England Patriots wide receiver Irving Fryar was cleared by a grand jury Friday of a weapons charge stemming from a nightclub melee in October and a bouncer at the club was cleared of assaulting Fryar's teammate, Hart Lee Dykes.

The bouncer was convicted Thursday, however, of violating his probation by inciting the brawl. He was sentenced to 18 months in prison, the attorney general's office said.

The Providence County grand jury returned ''no true bill'' of indictment in the cases of Fryar, a 28-year-old veteran whose career has been marred by off-field trouble, and the bouncer, 6-foot-7-inch, 300- pound William Earley.

Police took Fryar into custody the early morning of Oct. 10 after a brawl outside the Club Shalimar on South Main Street in Providence, in which Dykes suffered a serious eye injury.

Later in the day, authorities charged Fryar with illegally possessing a 9mm semiautomatic Smith & Wesson handgun.

Witnesses at the scene told police that Fryar brandished the gun during the fight, but the wide receiver said he was only trying to help Dykes when he saw him on the ground and bleeding.

Fryar had a Massachusetts license for the gun, but police said that did not entitle him to use it in Rhode Island.

In a prepared statement, the attorney general's office said it is not a violation of Rhode Island law for someone with a gun licensed in another state to ''temporarily transport'' the weapon through Rhode Island.

''After hearing testimony concerning the facts of the disturbance at (the club), the grand jury voted a no true bill on a charge of carrying a pistol without a license,'' the attorney general's office said.

Earley was charged with hitting Dykes outside the club, reportedly with a crutch. He denied the charge and, according to the attorney general's office, Newport Superior Court Judge Richard Israel was not convinced Earley hit the receiver.

But the judge was convinced that Earley ''incited and orchestrated'' the brawl the attorney general's office said. On Thursday, the judge ruled Earley violated his probation on a 1982 Newport robbery conviction and sentenced him to jail.

The 18-month sentence was recommended by a state prosecutor after negotiations with Earley's lawyer, the statement said.

Dykes, 24, a second-year receiver from Bay City, Texas, was sidelined because of the eye injury and placed on the Patriots' nonfootball-injury reserve list.

The fight apparently started with a dispute over whether Fryar and Dykes were taking too much time in leaving the nightclub, police said.

Dykes testified at a probation violation hearing for Earley that Fryar was driving him from Massachusetts to Dykes's home in Cumberland, R.I., when they decided to stop at Club Shalimar.

City Detective Capt. Bernard Gannon said he did not want to criticize the grand jury's decision on Fryar, but still felt the star receiver had violated the law.

''We worked with the attorney general on the case and decided (Fryar) was not merely transporting the gun through the city in as much as he went to his car and took it out and was brandishing it,'' Gannon said.

Fryar's lawyer, Joseph Cavanagh Jr., said he and his client were ''delighted'' and ''not surprised'' by the grand jury action.

''My personal observation is that I had a client who did a brave thing that night in trying to help a teammate. But because of who he was and because of the technicality of having a gun in Rhode Island instead of Massachusetts, the bravery and courage he showed were overshadowed by this technical charge,'' Cavanagh said.

(DEC. 7) UPI - Employment levels fell sharply last month and they did so in almost every industry in the country. The results increased unemployment two-tenths of one percent to five-point-nine percent, the highest in over two years. Employment declines were widespread throughout both the goods and services parts of the economy with the largest declines in manufacturing and construction. The government figures show seven-point- eight-Million unemployed last month. And the average earnings of those with jobs was 348 dollars 49 cents a week.

The new role for NATO in a rapidly changing world should be outlined and in place by next spring. That's the word from Brussels where alliance defense ministers are finishing up a two-day meeting. And the outcome should be a reduction in the size of military forces in Europe along with cuts in nuclear capabilities. The defense ministers say they want a new force structure that could respond quickly to localized conflicts should the need arise.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - New York Stock Exchange member firms that do business with the public Friday reported an after-tax loss of $124 million in the third quarter, prompting fears of further layoffs and cost cutting on Wall Street.

The result compared with an after-tax profit of $471 million recorded in the same period last year, the NYSE said.

Profits for the first nine months of 1990 plunged 98.3 percent to $22 million from $1.276 billion in the first nine months of 1989.

About 48 percent of the 334 member firms reporting for the latest quarter were profitable, posting total pre-tax earnings of $445 million, the NYSE said. The 173 unprofitable firms reported a total loss of $633 million before taxes.

The firms, including such well-known names as Merrill Lynch and Shearson Lehman Hutton, are reeling from falloffs in income from trading, investment banking, interest income and underwriting.

As a result, they may have to cut costs further, including laying off more employees, a respected analyst said.

Perrin Long, analyst at Lipper Analytical Securities, said he believed Wall Street would have to make deeper cuts in its work force as a result of being in straitened circumstances and could end the first quarter of 1991 with 6,000 fewer workers than there were as of last Sept. 30.

The major problem, Long said, is that costs are too high relative to revenue leading him to forecast that the fourth quarter will be in the red both before and after taxes.

The NYSE firms reported third-quarter revenues of nearly $13.09 billion, down 13.4 percent from the same period in 1989.

The third-quarter after-tax loss represented a 1.4 percent annual loss on the member firms' average net worth of $36.46 billion during the period, the NYSE said.

This contrasts with an after-tax profit during last year's third quarter representing a 4.8 percent annual return on the member firms' average net worth of almost $39.13 billion for the three months.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Six key House members, including Democratic leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Budget Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., urged President Bush Friday to provide direct food and medical aid to the Soviet Union.

In a letter to Bush, the congressmen said, ''We would remind you that the United States remains the richest agricultural producer in the world. Our farmers would be glad of the opportunity to share their wealth with the victms of the Soviet system.

''It is clear that time is of the essence,'' they said.

In addition to Gephardt and Panetta, the letter was signed by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, Rep E de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger and Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan. chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains.

They wrote Bush that the United States must join Germany, the European Community and international relief organizations ''as quickly as possible to send technical assistance, advisers and emergency medical and food assistance to the Soviet Union.''

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - Three cases of violence related to the 44-day Daily News strike were reported Friday by police in the wake of a management charge that authorities were not cracking down on "a criminal conspiracy."

The early morning incidents in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn involved attacks on three News delivery trucks and their drivers and, in one case, on two News security guards, according to Officer Hugh Barry, a police spokesman.

Five people were arrested on charges of assault in the third degree in an altercation in a residential area of Manhattan's west midtown, Barry said. They were a News truckdriver, his assistant, two security guards, and an electrician from Queens, who began an argument with them.

In all three cases, the News trucks were damaged, Barry said. Windows of two trucks were broken and the third truck, in Bensonhurst, Brooklyn, was damaged by a firebomb hurled onto its roof by three men in a silver Subaru station wagon.

On Thursday, News publisher James Hogue claimed at a press conference that there have been more than 1,000 acts of violence directed against News workers and property since the strike began Oct. 25 and charged they were part of a conspiracy. "It is clear there is...advance coordination," Hoge said. "There have also been coordinated campaigns to intimidate."

Hoge said he spoke to New York Mayor David Dinkins and urged him to speak out against violence. "I submitted to the police the need to face up to the clear reality in this community that gangsters are running free," Hoge said. "Nobody is willing to say really what is occurring.

"Instead, we have public officials hiding behind technical and innocuous statements and that is not living up to the full responsibility of public officials who have been sworn to uphold the law," said the publisher.

"I'm hopeful the mayor understands clearly ... the true size and seriousness of the campaign of violence now underway," he said. "I submit to you that it is unacceptable ... that we must continue to be here continually fighting, pretty much on our own (against) a criminal conspiracy."

Union officials have denied that there is a conspiracy and police authorities speaking at a recent hearing on the issue denied that there was any orchestrated effort. They said their investigations show the violence is random.

George McDonald, head of the Allied Printing Trades Council, the umbrella group for eight of nine striking unions, said, "We know nothing about it." "We don't condonecondone any violence," McDonald said. "We haven't condoned any. There's no orchestrated violence."

Police said Friday's Manhattan incident at a newsstand at 301 West 57th St. started when driver Paul Akins, 35, of 117-37 Marden St., Jamaica, Queens, and his assistant, Donald Neil, 52, of 117-23 230th St., Queens, were confronted by six men who began arguing with them.

Akins called two News security guards who were in the neighborhood for help, Officer Barry said, and the men left. Another man, identified as John McByrne, 31, an electrician of 162-05 71st Ave., Flushng, Queens, then appeared and started a violent argument with News employees.

When police arrived, all five were arrested. The guards were identified as James Carmen, 40, and Richard Yoos, 39, who both gave his address as 1000 Spring St., Elizabeth, N.J., said by police to be a hotel where out-of-state private guards hired by the News are being put up.

The Bronx incident involved an attack on a News truck at 43-35 Webster Ave. by five men armed with pipes and bats, Barry said. The driver sustained minor injuries in the attack and was taken to Our Lady of Mercy Hospital for treatment. The attackers escaped in a 1979 white Cougar. Three men were involved in the firebomb attack on a News truck in Brooklyn, according to to Barry. The driver escaped the truck uninjured.

About 2,500 members of the Guild and eight unions represented by the Allied Printing Trades Council walked off their jobs at the News Oct. 25 after ten months of fruitless contract negotiations. Since then there have been sporadic talks between union negotiators and managment with federal mediators in attendance.

Before the strike, The News, founded in 1919, was the largest-circulation local newspaper in New York and largest U.S. tabloid. It is owned by the Tribune Co., the Chicago-based publishing, broadcasting and entertainment conglomerate.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - A Connecticut laboratory has pleaded guilty to making false statements to the Environmental Protection Agency in analyzing sample material taken from Superfund toxic waste sites, the EPA said Friday.

YWC Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of SRK Holding Inc., was fined $500,000 in the first criminal conviction of an environmental laboratory resulting from a nationwide EPA crackdown on fraudulent testing practices among contractors for the agency.

EPA officals said York Laboratories Division, a part of YWC Inc., was a participant in the agency's Contract Laboratory Program, under which private laboratories receive federal contracts to identify contaminants in waste samples. Proper identification of pollutants is essential so effective cleanup plans for Superfund sites can be formulated.

In analyzing the samples, laboratories are supposed to complete their workups within a set period of time to ensure samples do not degrade. The ''holding time'' is designed to ensure a waste sample accurately reflects conditions at a Superfund site.

The EPA said that in May 1987 York Laboratories backdated their reports on some samples to make it appear the work had been completed within the ''holding time.''

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - It is safe for people to drink milk produced with use of a genetically engineered hormone, a panel of experts said Friday, but there should be research into the "remote possibility" of ill effects on infants.

The conclusion by the panel, which was recruited by the National Institutes of Health, was the same as that of the Food and Drug Administration five years ago. FDA is conducting field tests to determine whether to license the substance, bovine somatatropine.

BST may increase a cow's milk output by at least 10 percent. Milk from herds involved in BST field trials is being sold in some parts of the country. Critics disputed the panel's report as soon as it was distributed.

Jeremy Rifkin, a longtime biotechnology skeptic, interrupted the panel's news conference to criticize its findings. Samuel Epstein, a University of Illinois professor, accused the panel of a whitewash that "trivialized" reports, such as his, about adverse effects on the health of dairy cows.

FDA officials have said a decision whether to approve use of BST is unlikely during 1991. "The panel ... feels milk and meat from cows receiving BST is safe for human consumption," said Dr. Melvin Grumbach, a pediatrics professor and chairman of the panel.

The panel's conclusions were based on two days of testimony and the scientific material available on BST. The panel said the FDA has a large amount of information on the impact of BST on cows but it was not available for their review.

Earlier this week, Consumers Union said the FDA should reopen its investigation of human safety questions as well as barring any sale of milk produced with BST. It said more information was needed about the insulin-like growth factor, a hormone that mediates many of the effects of growth hormones. Milk produced with BST contains higher levels of the growth factor than untreated milk.

Panel members said the amounts still are far smaller than those produced by the body, one reason why they doubted it posed a risk. They suggested research into how much of the growth factor the body produces at different ages and what effects it has on the stomach, throat, and small intestines.

"What we're talking about is the remote possibility that this increment ... might have a direct, local impact on the upper gastrointestinal tract," Grumbach said.

Dr. David Rush, a health professor at Tufts University, said the growth factor "in our judgment is likely to prove to be not a problem" because of the small amount involved. In addition, Rush said, infants should be fed formula, not whole milk.

Cows' milk contains from three parts per billion to ten parts per billion of the growth factor. Milk from cows treated with BST contains five parts per billion to 15 parts per billion of the growth factor. Adults swallow slightly more of the growth factor in their saliva each day as is found in a quart of milk, the report said.

In addition to asking for more research into the health safety of BST milk, critics contend its use increases the occurence of udder inflamations. More inflamations, they say, will prompt more use of antibiotics and increase the risk of drug residues in milk.

Opponents also say BST could lead to a deluge of surplus milk that would drive some producers - small, family farmers in their view - out of business. With milk in surplus, they say, there is no need to introduce new methods to boost production.

The panel did not weigh the likely impact BST would have on farmers or rural America. The National Farmers Union and a number of consumer and farm activist organizations say BST should not be licensed unless the FDA can show it will have no harmful economic impacts.

James Clark of Ellicott City, Md., the only farmer on the panel of medical and veterinary experts, said he began the week with an open mind about BST but now felt BST "can be an excellent tool for the small dairy farmer." "They're the ones that have excellent management in most cases," Clark said. "There's no cost to get into this other than the cost of the drug." Wisconsin and Minnesota have enacted temporary bans against commercial use of BST.

TORONTO (DEC. 7) UPI - Onex Corp., an investment company, said Friday it will sell its Norex Leasing Inc. subsidiary to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce for $48.9 million. The deal is expected to close later in December.

Bruce Clark, president of Norex, Canada's largest independent leasing company, said the deal was good for the company and its employees and will strengthen Norex's position in the marketplace.

The sale price is for all of Norex's shares, subject to pre-closing adjustments and to an interest-bearing holdback of $4.25 million for up to five years. Onex, members of Norex's senior management and other investors paid $42.5 million to acquire Norex's equity in mid-1987.

Onex said its share of the sale proceeds will be used to meet certain commitments and for general corporate purposes. "Norex has greater value for a financial institution than it does for us," said Gerald W. Schwartz, president of Onex, in explaining the deal.

"The current and forseeable business conditions and the recent changes in tax laws have significantly reduced the potential returns Norex could provide to Onex," Schwartz added.

Onex is a diversified company with holdings in a number of autonomous subsidiaries including Sky Chefs, Ball Packaging, Beatrice Foods, and Purolator Courier.

Onex also operates a number of acquisition partnerships including TMB Industries and Hidden Creek Industries. Earlier this week, Hidden Creek acquired two divisions of Wickes Manufacturing Co., a subsidiary of Wickes Cos. Inc. of Santa Monica, Cal., including five plants in the United States and one in Mexico.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Hartz Mountain Corp. has agreed to pay $45,000 in penalties to settle a civil complaint charging the company failed to disclose reports that pets suffered ill effects from its flea and tick spray, the EPA said Friday.

Environmental Protection Agency officials said the Harrison, N.J., company failed to tell the EPA that it had received reports from veterinarians and pet owners of adverse effects to animals from pesticides used in the sprays.

The EPA filed an 18-count civil complaint against Hartz in January over the failure to inform the agency of the allegedly harmful effects of ''Hartz Blockade Dog Flea and Tick Repellent'' and the same brand cat spray.

Under federal law, companies with pesticide products must inform the EPA of unreasonable adverse effects within a specified period of time after receiving such reports.

The EPA said Hartz had taken action to respond to the agency's concerns over the incident and therefore the EPA had reduced the company's penalty by 50 percent from an initially proposed fine of $90, 000.

(DEC. 7) UPI - C O R R E C T I O N:

Omitting extraneous word in fifth item.

Employment levels fell sharply last month and they did so in almost every industry in the country. The results increased unemployment two- tenths of one percent to five-point-nine percent, the highest in over two years. Employment declines were widespread throughout both the goods and services parts of the economy with the largest declines in manufacturing and construction. The government figures show seven-point- eight-Million unemployed last month. And the average earnings of those with jobs was 348 dollars 49 cents a week.

The new role for NATO in a rapidly changing world should be outlined and in place by next spring. That's the word from Brussels where alliance defense ministers are finishing up a two-day meeting. And the outcome should be a reduction in the size of military forces in Europe along with cuts in nuclear capabilities. The defense ministers say they want a new force structure that could respond quickly to localized conflicts should the need arise.

The Bulgarian parliament has approved the nomination of Dimatar Popov as prime minister-designate. The 63-year-old Popov has been a judge on the municipal court in Sofia, Bulgaria's capital. Socialist Prime Minister Andrei Loukanov resigned a week ago after protests by trade unions who said he was NOT bringing about reforms fast enough.

Youngsters in classrooms across the nation had an astronomy lesson today- telecast directly from the shuttle Columbia. The astronauts showed their pupils how they are coping with the failure of two computers that have left them unable to control four telescopes. The telescopes are being operated from the ground. Astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman said- ''This has been quite an interesting and dynamic mission.''

A tight military curfew has been clamped on an estimated 20 Palestinian communities and refugee camps in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip keeping 400-thousand people confined to their homes. Palestinians in the occupied territories have proclaimed two days of general strikes beginning tomorrow as they prepare to mark Sunday's third anniversary of the Palestinian uprising.

This is still the ''Day of Infamy'' but the numbers of those who truly remember the events of the day are growing smaller every year. Today marks the 49th anniversary of Japan's sneak attack on the U-S naval might drawn up in what was supposed to be the security of Pearl Harbor. The focal point of the commemorations is the battleship Arizona. It has remained a silent reminder of what went on the day when nearly 12-hundred men became entombed within its sunken hull.

Indiana health authorities say an area of Highland, Indiana, that was flooded last week may be contaminated with cancerous P-C-B's. They have declared it unsafe and ordered residents NOT to return to their homes. The U-S Environmental Protection Agency has found P-C-B's in oil and water in the streets. An official said homeowners may have been using contaminated heating oil.

Oil markets took a breather with prices mixed in quiet, listless trading Friday after crude lost one-fifth of its value over the previous seven trading sessions on news pointing to possible peace in the Middle East.

''It was taking a rest after the big selloff we've had. It was a kind of sideways day with most of the news already written into the market,'' said Tom Bentz, director of trading at United Energy Inc. in New York.

The U.S. benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for January delivery inched up 18 cents to end the day on the New York Mercantile Exchange at $26.58 a barrel, $6.70, or 20.1 percent, less than its $33.28 closing price Wednesday Nov. 28. Volume was a light 67,702 contracts.

January futures for home heating oil slipped Friday 0.54 cent to 79. 17 cents a gallon, a decline of 13.2 cents, or 14.3 percent, over the seven trading sessions.

January unleaded gasoline finished the day on the Merc down 0.13 cent to 66.47 cents a gallon, a drop of 16.58 cents, or 19.8 percent, from the Nov. 28 settlement price.

The plunge started last week when the U.N. Security Council voted military action if Iraq had not evacuated Kuwait by Jan. 15 and President Bush said he would send Secretary of State James Baker to Iraq to talk with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and invited Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to Washington.

The momentum of the market's new ''peace psychology'' was added to Thursday when Saddam announced the freeing of all foreign hostages held since Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait triggered the Persian Gulf crisis.

Even though U.S. crude inched up Friday, one analyst said major oil companies were selling WTI, indicating there may be selling pressure on the benchmark crude Monday.

WTI also failed to trade up through a resistance level at $27.10 a barrel indicating some weakness on the buying side, the analyst said.

But Bentz said, ''If we don't have peace immediately, the market may trade sideways or start to move higher as we move closer to the Jan. 15 U.N. ultimatum deadline.''

On the European spot market, where crude barrels are bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent moved up 30 cents to $28.25 a barrel, $6.40, or 18.5 percent, less than its quote Nov. 28.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai Light - the important Middle East crude shipped mainly to the Far East - also rose 30 cents Friday to $22. 70 a barrel which was still a drop of $6.95, or 24.3 percent, over the last seven trading days.

(DEC. 7) UPI - The State Department says it hopes some American can leave Iraq today... but everything is up to the Iraqi government. Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler says some Americans may be able to leave on scheduled flights to Amman, Jordan. She says the State Department is rounding up charter planes to take out others possibly beginning tomorrow.

The General Accounting Office says 30 states will lose money but 19 will gain if the formula for distributing Medicaid dollars is written more fairly. A G-A-O spokeswoman told a congressional committee the present system is not fair because it is based on states' per capita income. She said the formula should consider states' total revenue income and poverty rates.

American Airlines says it flew more passengers more miles in November than a year ago. Revenue passenger miles were up six-point-two percent. American credits strong growth in international flights for its increase. Baseed on revenue passenger miles, American claims to be the largest U-S airline.

The probe into the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie adjourned in Scotland today until January 22nd. One mystery that remains UNsolved is why there apparently was a 13th crew member on board the doomed flight that was bound for New York. Usually there are 12. 270 people died on the plane and on the ground.

Weeping Malaysians are mourning the death of their first prime minister. 87-year-old Tunku Abdul Rahman died last night at a Kuala Lumpur hospital, where he had been on a life-support system since Wednesday after slipping into a coma. Rahman led the campaign for independence from Britain in 1957.

The Episcopal Church is taking up the issue of a Martin Luther King holiday. Presiding Episcopal Bishop Edmond Browning says the denomination will use its General Convention in Phoenix next year to push for enactment of the holiday. Arizona voters in November defeated a referendum to honor the slain civil rights leader.

An Indianapolis tax preparer was sentenced to two years in prison today for his role in the filing of 19 false federal income tax returns. In one case, Johnny Lee Motley listed a client's pet cat as a dependent worth more than 23-hundred dollars in child care credits and deductions.

A Manhattan building has been cited for whistling too loudly. Neighbors hav e complained about a high-pitched whistle given off by the 72-story Cityspire near Lincoln Center. When the wind blows, some people say the building sounds like somebody blowing across the top of an open bottle- only louder. The city's Department of Environmental Protection has issued a noise violation citation.

ANOKA, MN (DEC. 7) UPI - A 24-year-old man who claimed he was sexually abused by his parish priest for eight years was awarded $3.56 million in damages by a jury Friday.

The verdict by the six-member Anoka County District Court jury was a major victory for the man, who had sought $5.5 million in damages. Attorneys for the Archdiocese of St. Paul-Minneapolis and the Diocese of Winona had sought to limit any award to no more than $326,000 in compensatory damages.

A court spokeswoman said five of the six jurors concurred in the decision to give the man $855,000 in damages for past and future medical and therapy expenses, loss of earnings, embarrassment and emotional distress.

The jury awarded him $2.7 million in punitive damages.

The jury found the archdiocese and the diocese were 85 percent responsible for the abuse inflicted by the Rev. Thomas Adamson. The other 15 percent was attributed to the plaintiff, his father and his mother.

The jury said there was clear and convincing evidence of willful indifference or lack of concern on the part of the church officials and that they were reckless in employing the priest, who had a 24-year history of abusing boys.

The verdict came near the end of the jury's fourth day of deliberations, following a five-week trial.

In his closing arguments early this week, Jeffrey Anderson, the attorney for the young man, said a large damage award was justified because the church officials deliberately refused to respond to knowledge of Adamson's problem.

''They didn't approve of sex abuse ... they didn't want that to happen,'' Anderson said. ''They weren't malicious, but they made deliberate decisions. They were more than negligent .. they were reckless.''

Adamson has admitted sexual misconduct with boys in the Winona diocese beginning in 1961 and in the archdiocese after his transfer there in 1975.

John Hoffman, the archdiocese's attorney, said that while the defendants admitted negligence in not properly handling the priest but that there was no willful indifference to anyone's safety that would justify punitive damages.

''We made mistakes, but there was no disregard for the safety of others,'' he said in his closing statement. ''Our biggest mistake was believing in this priest. He lied to them (authorities).''

Adamson is living in the Eau Claire, Wis., area and is working as a clerk. Adamson's attorney, Theodore Collins, said the priest has been banished from the Winona diocese and the archdiocese.

TUCSON, Ariz. (DEC. 7) UPI - Tucson Electric Power Co. said Friday it eliminated all preferred stock dividends indefinitely in order to improve the utility's liquidity position by nearly $10 million a year.

The dividends would have been paid starting next February.

The previously declared dividend on the Auction Series A scheduled for paymentDec. 14 will be paid, the company said.

In a statement, Tucson Electric said the possibility of eliminating preferred stock dividends has been discussed in reports filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission during the last year.

Ira Adler, senior vice president and chief financial officer, said the action is one of several steps being taken by the company to improve its liquidity situation.

Last January, according to Tucson Electric, the board of directors voted to eliminate the common stock dividend, saving an estimated $100 million annually and has since cut capital spending and its work force and has been trying to restructure contract and credit obligations.

The preferred stock affected by Friday's announcement includes: 20, 000 shares in the 4.75 percent series; 58,000 shares of 5.10 percent series; 50,000 shares of 4.80 percent series; and 770 shares of no par on the Auction series A.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Regulators Friday closed two more Texas banks, bringing to 100 the number of bank failures in the state and 159 in the nation this year.

Last year, 133 banks failed in Texas and 206 in the nation.

Closed Friday were Heights Bank in Harker Heights, Texas, and First National Bank of Rowlett in Rowlett, Texas.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said Heights Bank had assets of $30.3 million. It will be acquired by a newly chartered bank to be called Heights State Bank.

Heights State will assume $26.3 million in 7,400 deposit accounts and purchase $17.1 million of the failed bank's assets at a discount of $146,400. The FDIC will adavnce $10.3 million to the assuming bank as part of the transaction.

First National had assets of $22.6 million. The FDIC arranged the transfer of its insured deposits and secured liabilities to U.S. Trust Co. of Texas, National Association, a newly chartered bank subsidiary of U.S. Trust Corp. of New York.

First National had deposits of $22.1 million in 3,900 deposit accounts, including about $410,000 in 21 accounts that exceeded the federal insurance limit of $100,000. The FDIC said the uninsured depositors and non-deposit creditors will share proportionately with the FDIC in the proceeds realized from the liquidation of the failed bank's assets.

In the case of Heights Bank, its drive-up window will reopen Saturday and its main office on Monday. First National's sole office will reopen Monday. Both failed banks will reopen under the name of their assuming banks.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - With his company attempting to restructure a massive debt load, Meshulam Riklis resigned as E-II Holdings Inc.'s chairman and chief executive officer along with the other members of the board, E-II said Friday.

Samsonite Corp. President Steven J. Green was named to take over from Riklis - the Turkish-born husband of entertainer Pia Zadora who has been a fixture on the corporate scene for three decades and has bought and sold a wide variety of holdings - as chief executive of the deb-burdened company.

E-II also announced a complex transaction involving its stock in the McCrory's retail chain that includes transfer of some of those holdings to Riklis. In exchange, Riklis is due to pay E-II $350 million in five years if he still owns McCrory.

In a terse news announcement, Green said he believed the resignations and the McCrory actions ''will enable us to focus on the restructuring of E-II. We intend to commence discussions with the creditors of E-II.''

But E-II spokesman Paul Weiner said that Riklis had not been ousted as a result of pressure from E-II's bankers.

E-II is the corporate parent of McCrory's, luggage manufacturer Samsonite, water-purification systems manufacturer and distributor Culligan International Co. and several companies in the apparel business, including Botany 500.

Weiner refused to disclose how many other directors were on the board prior to the resignations or their identities.

E-II has outstanding about $532 million of 12.85 percent senior subordinated notes that mature in 1997 as well as $708.5 million of 13. 05 percent subordinated debentures due 1999.

E-II said the McCrory transaction involved conversion of $350 million of advances and preferred stock previously invested in McCrory Corp. into a new preferred stock and 90 percent of McCrory's common stock, leaving McCrory Parent Corp. with the other 10 percent of the common and its ownership of certain preferred stocks.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - Stocks gained ground this week, but fears about the economy reasserted themselves and cut short a midweek rally which had been fueled by peace overtures in the Mideast.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 12.38 Friday to end the week at 2590.10. It rose 30.45 for the week, or 1.19 percent.

Among broader market indexes, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 5.53 to end the week at 327.75 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index added 3.01 to end the week at 179.07.

Advances led declines 1,285-656 among the 2,182 NYSE issues traded this week. Weekly Big Board volume totaled 990,005,470 shares, compared with 757,693,840 a week earlier and 757,800,300 shares a year ago.

The market seesawed this week, gaining Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, closing mixed Thursday and closing lower Friday.

After an uneventful Monday, dovish signals from the Mideast sustained the market's rally Tuesday and Wednesday.

Prices gained Tuesday thanks to a British television report that Iraq has outlined a proposal for withdrawal from Kuwait, even though the State Department said it knew nothing about the report.

Stocks rallied Wednesday in heavy trading as optimism grew that the Persian Gulf crisis would be solved diplomatically. The State Department announced that Iraq had accepted President Bush's offer to hold talks on the Mideast crisis. The Dow surged 30 points to close above the 2600 level for the first time since Sept. 12.

The most dramatic news from the Mideast came Thursday, when Iraqi leader

Saddam Hussein said he would release all foreign hostages being held by Baghdad. While the Dow bolted 30 points on the opening, the advance faded and the blue chip average turned lower by the afternoon when IBM's stock tumbled.

Big Blue was done in by market rumors that the company had been guiding analysts' earnings estimates lower. The company denied the rumors, but to no avail. Sentiment shifted from optimism about the Mideast to fear about how company earnings would fare in the faltering economy.

The government's report on November employment Friday only served to add to the nervousness. Stocks closed lower Friday, despite an interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve and a prime rate cut by a few small banks, after the government reported a rise of 0.2 percent in the jobless rate and an unexpectedly steep drop in the number of non-farm jobs.

''Even though we were up this week, its a little disturbing because I don't believe we could have had better news than the peace offensive - the offer to exchange negotiators and the offer to release the hostages, '' said Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y.

''It's clear that we're headed toward a peaceful resolution in the Mideast and that's been a real dark cloud over the market for a long time,'' he continued. ''Now despite the fact that we've removed the ominous dark cloud, the market has not sustained its up move from earlier in the week and that means the focus has shifted back to the economy.''

Johnson said the forces this week that helped bring about that shift were a weak purchasing managers' survey, the gloomy report on car sales for the latest 10-day period and last but certainly not least, the job figures Friday.

''It's very disappointing that the market isn't responding to good news,'' Johnson said, referring not only to the Mideast news but the cut in short-term rates this week. ''The market is clearly tied in knots over the economy and I guess that's because the Fed has been very aggressive in trying to resuscitate its patient but the EKG still seems rather flat.''

And that weak heartbeat means only one thing to Wall Street - anemic corporate earnings. ''It's going to be difficult for corporate America to earn dollars in a recessionary environment,'' said Jeff Kaminsky, head of institutional sales trading at Mabon, Nugent & Co.

''The question is how much of an effect lower rates will have in stimulating the economy. I subscribe to the theory that even if rates come down that's not going to be enough to stimulate the economy if demand isn't there,'' he said.

''Many industries are cyclical and upgraded their facilities over the past decade. There's no guarantee lower rates will stimulate demand in these sectors,'' he argued.

On the trading floor this week, AT&T was the most active issue, off 2 1/4 to 29 7/8 in a week when it launched a hostile $90-a-share bid for NCR, which catapulted 35 to 91 3/4.

Citicorp followed, up 2 1/8 to 14 3/4 as financial issues recovered from their recent battering when the Fed said it would ease some bank reserve requirements. First Bank System was third, up 2 1/8 to 14 3/8.

Among the other blue chips, IBM lost 1 1/8 to 112 1/2, American Express rose 1 3/8 to 21 7/8, General Electric added 2 3/4 to 57 1/2 and Philip Morris gained 1 3/8 to 50.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index rose 4.66 to close Friday at 306.45. Advances led declines 459-357 among the 998 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 64,409,155 shares, compared with 60,448,405 traded a week earlier and 64,199,330 traded in the same week a year ago.

Continental Air led the Amex actives, sinking 1 1/8 to 2 1/4. The company Monday filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

PHILADELPHIA (DEC. 7) UPI - State Supreme Court Justice James McDermott won a $6 million judgment Friday in a libel suit he had filed against The Philadelphia Inquirer.

The jury ruled that the original series of articles titled, ''Above the Law,'' defamed the high court justice but were true. No money was awarded for that portion of the case.

But the jury decided that a reprint of the articles, which were written by reporter Daniel Biddle and included additional material, also defamed McDermott and were false. He was awarded $3 million in punitive damages and $3 million in compensatory damages.

The three-part series, which was first published in May 1983, examined the functions and judiciary problems of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court. But the full series was not part of the suit, only the portions referring to McDermott.

The justice alleged that the series implied that he fixed cases.

McDermott's attorney, James Beasley, applauded the award.

''It was a verdict in favor of Justice McDermott in the amount of $6 million and I feel damn good about it,'' he said.

The paper's attorney, William Hangley, called the verdict ''bizarre'' and said the decision will be appealed.

Biddle reacted to the decision by saying that he stands by his story.

''They were true then and they are true now,'' Biddle said. ''We will fight on.''

Biddle reported that McDermott participated in two cases involving attorneys of the Dilworth, Paxson, Kalish and Kauffman law firm. The firm was the largest contributor to McDermott's election campaign in 1981. It gave $6,100.

Biddle reported that Dilworth partner John Elliott arranged a limousine trip to Pennsylvania's coal region for McDermott and several others. Three months later McDermott voted in favor of Dilworth clients in a coal case.

Carbon County Judge John Lavelle presided over the seven-week trial in Philadelphia Common Pleas Court.

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO, Calif. (DEC. 7) UPI - Genentech Inc. will pay $29 million to settle a number of 2-year-old shareholder lawsuits alleging the company misled investors about the potential for its heart-attack drug TPA, the company said Friday.

Genentech, a pioneer in biotechnology, did not admit any wrongdoing in the case and said the settlement would have no impact on fourth- quarter earnings. A ''substantial portion'' will be paid by Genentech's insurance company and the rest will come from already established reserves, the company said.

Several stockholders sued Genentech in 1988 after the company disclosed that sales of its TPA clot-busting heart drug, touted as the first ''blockbuster'' drug of the U.S. biotechnology industry, were growing far slower than expected.

In lawsuits filed by San Diego attorney William Lerach, shareholders accused Genentech of falsifying test data regarding TPA, misrepresenting its potential and selling stock based on false information about the drug.

TPA, which costs more than $2,000 a dose, is used to dissolve blood clots immediately after a heart attack. The drug, introduced in 1987, accounted for $196.4 million of Genentech's $400.5 million in total revenue last year.

NEW YORK (DEC. 7) UPI - The Treasury bond market leaped ahead Friday on the toughest evidence to date that the U.S. economy is tumbling into recession, and on the Federal Reserve's short-term credit easing response to that.

Market-watchers said the news that U.S. unemployment rose to 5.9 percent in November, up 0.2 percent from 5.7 percent in October, added to the week's diplomatic gains in the Gulf, was very positive for bonds.

The government's benchmark 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 Treasury maturing in 2020, finished trading Friday at 106 08/32 to yield 8.19 percent - strongly ahead from last week's price of 103 26/32, yielding 8.40 percent.

The 2 3/8 point gain equals $23.75 for every $1,000 bond face value.

Bond prices generally rise amid economic distress, because such fixed-income investments are more sought as a surer financial refuge. And as interest rates fall to stimulate growth, their returns become more attractive.

Steps towards peace in the Persian Gulf calmed fears of a war that might halt the flow of oil out of the strategic region, drive oil prices through the roof and accelerate inflation which erodes bonds' fixed returns.

Economists say that unemployment approaching 6 percent puts downward pressure on inflation as wage demands are moderated. So the surge in joblessness to 5.9 percent went a long way to allaying bond market inflation fears.

But observers said the key element this week was evidence of recession, which led the Federal Reserve to take action Friday to guide the short-term Federal funds interest rate down to 7.25 percent from 7. 50 percent.

The Fed funds rate, applied on bank-to-bank loans of reserve system funds, is closely watched as a bellwether of Fed monetary policy.

''Sentiment in the long bond market has changed substantially,'' said Shannon Clyne, a Bank of America senior vice president and chief investment officer of its Investment Management Group, from fearing a hasty, inflationary Fed easing to giving ''a vote of confidence'' to central bank policy.

Clyne added, ''The economic evidence is pretty compelling that the economy, if not in recession, is slowing at a pace that requires Fed action.''

Economists thought the Fed might decide to ease again soon - possibly at the Dec. 17 meeting of its policy-setting Open Market Committee.

Or the central bank could bring the Fed funds rate down as it carries out the release, from Dec. 13 to Jan. 10, to U.S. banks of $14 billion previously held aside as reserves. The Fed will soak up most of that new liquidity to keep the funds rate from plummeting - but it could leave some slack.

Analysts note that although the Fed's reserve policy change was intended to stimulate bank lending to creditworthy borrowers, institutions initially will probably put a lot of that windfall into Treasury instruments. That is likely to help the tone of the market around year end, they said.

Many financial economists are looking for the funds rate to decline to around 6.5 percent, with the yield on the 30-year bond descending to a point between 7.5 percent and 8 percent - bond prices rising accordingly.

''We get the sense that money managers are going to continue to be interested in adding to their fixed-income portfolios at least through year-end, if not beyond,'' Smith Barney analyst Mitchell Held wrote in a newsletter.

''In local currency terms, with the exception of Australia, the U.S. Treasury market has been the best performing fixed-income market in 1990,'' he said.

But money manager Clyne cautioned that Gulf peace moves may have put a large component of euphoria into the market.

''It seems almost inevitable that something will happen to spook the market somewhere along the line,'' Clyne said. ''Prices are still very vulnerable to any setback in progress in the Mideast.''

Anyone who's already bought in is holding ''good fundamental values,'' Clyne said. But he cautioned, ''For someone who's thinking of buying there's probably going to be a better opportunity along the way.''

COLFAX, CA (DEC. 7) UPI - Sunlight shining through a stained-glass window is the cause of a shimmering image on a church wall that has drawn thousands of pilgrims for a glimpse of what many believe is an apparition of the Virgin Mary, an optics expert said Friday.

James Phelps, a physics professor who examined the image on the wall of St. Dominic's Catholic Church, said the multicolored light that has appeared above a statue of Jesus daily since Thanksgiving is a reflection of the sun through a stained-glass window that bounces off a hanging lamp.

''Light is coming through a large stained-glass window behind the pulpit,'' Phelps said. ''It hits that light fixture and bounces off onto the wall above a statue of Jesus and forms the apparition.''

Police said more than 3,000 pilgrims flocked to the tiny Sierra Nevada foothills town Friday to see the image, which some believers say is a silhouette of the head and shoulders of the Madonna. Hundreds lined up in the cold winter dawn and packed the 40-year-old church for the second week in a row.

The image stays for about one hour every morning. Phelps said the sun moving across the sky temporary shines directly through the window and reflects off the concave-shaped surface of a lamp hanging from the ceiling.

''Theres some slight focusing that happens because of the bent shape of the fixture,'' he said. ''That's why it is as intense as it is. Otherwise it would be a featureless floodlight.''

The image will disappear if sunlight becomes diffused on a cloudy, gray day, Phelps said.

''When that happens, you're not going to see it,'' said Phelps, who teaches a course in optics, the study of light.

Parish Coordinator Ed Molloy said the explanation does not mean the image is not divinely inspired.

''I don't care what the skeptics think,'' Molloy said. ''God created light. He can do with that light whatever he wants.''

''I don't care what they may discover scientifically. It happened at this particular time. There's a message for us who believe,'' he said in a telephone interview.

The only motel in the Placer County town of about 1,100 is filled and many people are camping out, said Colfax Police Chief Bill Mintline, whose seven-member police department has worked overtime to manage the huge crowds.

Bishop Francis Quinn of the Sacramento Diocese said there are three possible explanations for the image in the church, located 45 miles northeast of Sacramento.

''It might just be a natural phenomenon and nothing divinely inspired. It could be a natural phenomenon inspired by God. Some of the faithful say God works through natural means instead of direct intervention. The third possibility is direct divine intervention,'' Quinn said.

''It is a matter of belief,'' he said in a telephone interview. ''For those who believe, no explanation is necessary. For those who do not believe, no explanation is possible.''

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (DEC. 7) UPI - Duke Power Co. said Friday that preliminary estimates of 1991 expenses may run as much as $100 million higher than estimates made in January 1990.

''The figures are both conservatively high and preliminary,'' said Senior Vice President and General Counsel Steve C. Griffith. ''But we are nonetheless treating them seriously and are taking several steps to reduce those higher costs.''

He cited the utility's goal to reduce the size of its work force by about 3 percent during 1991 via attrition and a ''comprehensive, in- house study'' of operations designed to come up with ''more productive and cost-effective ways to do business.''

The final amount of the overrun is expected to come in ''substantially less than $100 million'' when firm budget figures are compiled next month, Griffith said.

A combination of factors is contributing to the higher expenses, according to Griffith.

Duke Power is adding some 30,000 to 40,000 customers a year, and the resources needed to meet this customer growth all cost more, he said.

Moreover, an increase in fees charged by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and greater medical-benefit costs are adding to expenses, Griffith said.

''In light of an overall budget of some $2 billion, we are taking the appropriate steps to reduce our expenses,'' he added.

(DEC. 7) - The rubber-stamp Iraqi National Assembly, carrying out President Saddam Hussein's order, voted Friday to free all foreign nationals held hostage in Iraq and occupied Kuwait, the official Iraqi news agency INA said.

In a special session on the Moslem day of prayer, the assembly voted 235-15 to lift all travel restrictions for about 6,000 Western and Japanese nationals still trapped in the troubled area, INA said.

But the Iraqis did not say when the hostages would be freed.

A British Airways Boeing 767 left London for Baghdad Friday, but its crew did not know when they would return with the first load of 1,125 British hostages held in Iraq and Kuwait.

In Santiago, Chile, where President Bush was visiting on his five- country tour of South America, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said: ''We obviously welcome the vote of the assembly and hope the release of our hostages can be carried out as quickly and effectively as possible.''

Fitzwater said charge d'affaires Joseph Wilson would be meeting with Iraqi Foreign Ministry officials to discuss the logistics of the release.

The State Department is urging Americans still hiding inside Iraq and Kuwait to out of sight until Iraq makes clear when and how they can leave.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said if all Americans in Kuwait are allowed to leave, the U.S. Embassy would be vacated but would not be formally closed.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, asked on the ABC-TV progam ''Nightline'' if the hostages would be free by Christmas, replied: ''Well, I hope so. Yes, I think that by Christmas, everybody could ... could leave.''

Aziz said if the embassy in Kuwait is vacated, the United States ''will be given all the guarantees they are asking for. The building will be secure and there would be no problem about that ....''

Asked if foreigners still hiding in Kuwait are included in the release, Aziz said, ''Yes, yes, absolutely. They shouldn't be in hiding now after the decision taken by the National Assembly.''

Last month, Saddam said he would free the hostages in batches beginning Christmas Day and ending March 25.

In a message Thursday to the speaker of Iraq's National Assembly, Saddam told the parliament to ''lift the ban on the travel of all foreigners whose travel abroad has been restricted and to take a decision to this effect,'' according to the Iraqi News Agency.

Proponents of the release called the assembly vote a gesture of peace, the agency said.

But later Friday in Caracas, Venezuela, Fitzwater said that the threat of war ''still exists as strong as ever,'' but noted that the latest developments indicate U.N. resolutions against Iraq have placed ''a new degree of pressure and urgency on Saddam Hussein.''

Freedom for all foreign nationals held by Iraq since its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait would meet one of the three U.N. objectives for resolving the 4-month-old Persian Gulf crisis.

But Pentagon officials said Iraq continued this week to build up its military forces in the region, indicating Saddam is not ready to meet the two other U.N. objectives - unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and restoration of Kuwait's legitimate government.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney said plans to complete the massive U.S. troop buildup in the Persian Gulf are not affected by the hostage issue. He told a meeting Friday of NATO defense ministers in Brussels that the additional 150,000 U.S. troops ordered to the gulf last month will be ''sufficient to give us offensive military capability should it be required.''

WASHINGTON (DEC. 7) UPI - Six key House members, including Democratic leader Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., and Budget Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., urged President Bush Friday to provide direct food and medical aid to the Soviet Union.

In a letter to Bush, the congressmen said, ''We would remind you that the United States remains the richest agricultural producer in the world. Our farmers would be glad of the opportunity to share their wealth with the victims of the Soviet system.

''It is clear that time is of the essence,'' they said.

The letter said the United States must join Germany, the European Community and international relief organizations ''as quickly as possible to send technical assistance, advisers and emergency medical and food assistance to the Soviet Union.''

The letter was also signed by Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, Rep E de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, chairman of the House Select Committee on Hunger and Rep. Dan Glickman, D-Kan., chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on wheat, soybeans and feed grains.

LANSING, MI (DEC. 7) UPI - Environmentalists say consumers should heed stingy old Ebenezer Scrooge when selecting holiday gifts and shy away from presents that come in big, gaudy packages.

Clean Water Action and the Public Interest Research Group in Michigan said Friday that presents in large packages leave something to remember them by for a long time - excess paper and plastic that takes up landfill space and pollutes the environment.

''The Christmas gift-giving season is cause for major planetary indigestion,'' said Kathy Aterno, Michigan director of Clean Water Action.

''The Christmas packaging binge is only to make products appear larger, slicker or somehow more attractive in an attempt to increase sales,'' she continued. ''We, the consumers, end up on Christmas Day with enough extra paper, cardboard and plastic and Styrofoam packaging to open our own packaging stores.''

The environmental groups tapped seven companies for ''Wastemaker'' awards, marking them as putting excessive packaging on their products.

The ''Wastemaker'' awards apparently were patterned after a list compiled annually by Rep. Frank Perrone, D-N.J. The list has been copied by environmental groups in many states.

Making the ''Wastemaker'' list were:

-Saranac Glove Co., Green Bay, Wis., for ''football gloves'' encased in a plastic container much larger than what is needed to hold the product.

-Fisher Price Co., East Aurora, N.Y., for its ''Smooshees Smugglers'' toy, which comes in a cardboard and plastic case.

-Polygram Records, for a compact disc that comes in a long cardboard box wrapped in plastic wrap while the disc already is held in a permanent hard plastic case.

-Cosmair Inc., New York, N.Y., for its ''Drakkar Noir'' cosmetics gift set, which places two small bottles in a hefty cardboard box with plastic inserts.

-Calvin Klein Cosmetics Co., New York, N.Y., for its ''Obsession'' gift set, which also places two small bottles in a large package,

-Carleton Cards, Cleveland, for its wrap and trim set, which places a single sheet of wrapping paper and a tiny bow in separate plastic- wrapped containers.

-Gibson Greetings Co., Memphis, Tenn., for its ''Lustra Reflections'' wrapping paper, which offers non-degradable plastic sheets for gift wrapping and wraps them in more plastic shrink wrap.

Fisher Price spokesman Jack Martin said that Smooshees have not been manufactured by the company since the summer of 1989. Meanwhile, he said, Fisher Price is trying to be smarter in how it packages Toys.

He said companies must continue to look at ''what it takes to get it there safely and what it takes to catch the consumer's eye and protect the product.''

Calvin Klein ''has always represented high standards and consumer acceptance without sacrificing product quality or safety, and we share everyone's concern for the impact consumer-packaged goods have on the environment,'' said Lucille Van Baaren, the company's regulatory-affairs director.

''We are actively developing long-range strategies to address a number of environmental issues.''

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 7) UPI - Standard & Poor's Corp. said Friday it lowered its ratings of Hilton Hotels Corp.'s senior debt and commercial paper because the chain faces industry-wide problems from a recession and increased casino competition.

The credit-rating agency also said it had removed about $275 million of Hilton's long-term securities from CreditWatch.

Hilton, which owns, operates or franchises more than 270 hotels, earned $85.2 million on revenues of $799.2 million during the first nine months of this year.

The company owns some of the nation's leading hotel properties, including the Waldorf Astoria in New York, the Palmer House in Chicago, the Hawaiian Village and four Nevada hotel-casinos.

''Weak hotel industry conditions and increasingly competitive Nevada gaming markets are expected to continue to hamper the firm's efforts to improve profitability,'' S&P said.

''While Hilton's landmark hotel properties in gateway cities hold up better in a downturn, segment operating performance may still deteriorate somewhat due to industry overcapacity and declining business travel,'' the agency said.

''Additionally, Hilton's gaming operations face intense competition in both the high-roller and middle-level gaming market segments.''

As a result, Hilton's profitability and interest coverage are likely to remain ''lackluster'' for some time, the agency said.

But it also said that over the intermediate term, earnings should improve as hotel industry oversupply diminishes.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 7) UPI - Bumble Bee Seafoods, hit with an environmental group's boycott over claims that it has continued to buy tuna using methods that kill dolphins, launched a media blitz Friday against the group.

San Diego-based Bumble Bee, the nation's third-largest tuna canner, took full-page advertisements in several newspapers, saying in the headline ''It is time to set the record straight. Bumble Bee is dolphin- safe.''

San Francisco-based Earth Island, a 9-year-old group that opposes the practice of using huge driftnets for ocean fishing, called for the boycott earlier this week. The group claimed that Bumble Bee has continued to buy tuna caught with driftnets, which catch and kill dolphins, turtles and birds in addition to fish.

Friday's advertisement did not address the driftnet issue directly, but simply insisted that the company's policies are ''dolphin-safe.''

It listed the company's previously stated claims that it has supported legislation to protect dolphins and has invited the environmental community to place an observor at the Thailand plant operated by its parent, Unicord Inc.

The advertisement also said, ''If you really want to save dolphin, support responsible environmental groups.''

But David Phillips, executive director of Earth Island, said Friday that his group continues to believe that Bumble Bee is lying about its policies. ''We continue to call for a boycott of Bumble Bee tuna,'' he said.

Bumble Bee announced in April that it would only buy tuna caught in ways that did not endanger dolphins, which often swim near schools of tuna. The No. 1 and No. 2 tuna canners, H.J. Heinz' StarKist Seafood and Van Kamp Seafood's Chicken of the Sea, also agreed to change their buying policies.

Unlike its competitors, Bumble Bee said it would need six months to end existing fishing contracts, but it began selling cans of tuna labeled ''dolphin safe'' in June.

''Bumble Bee has been deceiving the American public for the past eight months '' Phillips said.

Earth Island's allegations that Bumble Bee is violating its stated policies are based on a three-week visit to Thailand by Earth Island researcher Brenda Killian in October.

Killian has alleged that during that time Unicord bought a boatload of driftnet tuna from the Maya, an Ecuadoran boat. The company has denied the charge.

Bumble Bee's president, Mark Koob, has said that Earth Island officials have not contacted the company about their concerns. Phillips said that the group has had extensive contact with Koob on several occasions.

''In September, I had a long, heated discussion with Mark Koob about these issues,'' Phillips said.

LOS ANGELES (DEC. 7) UPI - Conglomerate Teledyne Inc. said Friday that it expects its fourth-quarter earnings will be about break-even because of a planned closing of Teledyne Monarch Rubber and overruns in certain fixed-price defense contracts.

Teledyne did not identify which contracts produced the cost overruns.

The Los Angeles-based company said it has been attempting to sell its money-losing Monarch Rubber operation in Hartville, Ohio, and has been unsuccessful in this effort so far. It said it will cost down the plant sometime during 1991 as a result.

Teledyne said it will include the estimated cost of the closure in the fourth-quarter results.

Monarch Rubber, which produces rubber and metal parts for the automotive industry and industrial tires, had sales of $135 million in 1989 and employs about 900 people.

Teledyne was hit last month with the announcement that the U.S. Justice Department had joined a whistle-blower lawusit, alleging that a subsidiary of systematically inflated its cost estimates on defense contracts.

The practice allgededly defrauded the government of more than $100 million.

Teledyne earned $94 million on sales of $2.57 billion during the first nine months of this year.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 8) - Seventeen Americans and 41 Japanese left Baghdad Saturday aboard an Iraqi aircraft chartered by a private U.S. group - the first hostages to leave Iraq since President Saddam Hussein's announcement Thursday that all "guests" could go.

Reporting this from Baghdad, the U.S. television network CNN said the U.S. embassy also chartered an Iraqi Boeing 747 to fly out 400 Americans from Kuwait and Iraq to Frankfurt on Sunday.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, interviewed by another U.S. network, ABC, said he believed that all "guests" could be flown home by Christmas. There are an estimated 2,000-3,000 foreigners still held in Iraq - mainly Britons and Americans.

Baghdad meanwhile offered its own dates for the high-level contacts recently suggested by U.S. President George Bush. The Iraqi dates included a proposal that Secretary of State James Baker go to Baghdad on January 12.

That date, far later than what Bush had suggested, is just three days before the January 15 deadline set in the United Nations Security Council resolution authorizing use of force against Iraq if it does not withdraw its troops from Kuwait.

The Iraqi leadership made clear it rejected the timetable proposed by Washington for the high-level meetings - around December 20 for a visit by Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to Washington, and January 3 for Baker to go to Baghdad.

LONDON (DEC. 8) - Driving blizzards paralyzed northwestern England late Saturday, blocking roads and causing traffic jams and accidents.

Authorities called on Britons not to take their cars out unless it was "absolutely necessary," and to take blankets and hot drinks if they did have to drive in the snow storms which hit northern and western England and the Midlands.

Several hundred drivers were trapped in their cars on the roads of the West Midlands, near Birmingham, and rescue workers and the army carried out numerous rescue operations, some using helicopters, to save drivers trapped in their cars. Some five hundred automobilists are expected to pass the night in the Birmingham bus station.

Dozens of secondary roads were blocked by snow and fallen trees, and highways in the north and in the Midlands were closed because of poor visibility. Rail service was severely affected, and airports in Birmingham and the East Midlands were closed.

BANGKOK (DEC. 8) - Burma's ruling junta accused U.S. diplomats in Rangoon of interfering in the country's internal affairs but it stopped short of threatening retaliation.

"U.S. diplomats in Rangoon have been abusing diplomatic rights and interfering in Burmese internal affairs," said military intelligence chief Major General Khin Nyunt, believed to be the behind-the-scenes strongman of the military government. The attack came in a special press conference carried on Burmese radio Friday and monitored here.

Maj. Gen. Khin Nyunt also gave for the first time details about British High Commission (embassy) information officer Nita Yin Yin May who was jailed for three years after a secret trial in Rangoon last month. The embassy officially requested details of the trial and the charges against Mrs. Nita Yin Yin May, but got no immediate response.

On Friday, Maj. Gen. Khin Nyunt accused her of arranging a meeting between Rangoon-based U.S. diplomat Martin Adams and a dissident student leader in Mandalay shortly before the May general elections.

He also said Mrs. Nita Yin Yin May passed on documents to the outside world from pro-democracy groups but he did not say if either of these events were why she was jailed.

Maj. Gen. Khin Nyunt's public attack against the U.S. Embassy, by far the most outspoken since the junta seized power in a bloody coup two years ago, comes a week after a United Nations draft resolution that harshly criticised the government was withdrawn.

Sweden, whose resolution was supported by 20 countries including the 12 members of the European Community and the United States, withdrew it at the request of the Japanese.

Japan had claimed that the resolution could affect a special report on Burma's human rights being prepared by professor Sadako Ogata. Her report is to be delivered to the next U.N. Human Rights Commission meeting early next year.

Burma watchers here were debating whether Friday's attack on diplomats was the opening of a campaign to try and silence them. "The junta has silenced anyone who opposes it through intimidation, arrests and prison. Friday's attack may be the first move to silence the only independent voice left in the country, the embassies," said one observer.

Since the National League for Democracy (NLD) swept the May elections, the junta has refused to hand over power and arrested most of the NLD leaders on the charge of plotting to overthrow the military.

"Blinded by the hunger for power, these people are willing to go to any lengths including violence and illegal means to gain their ends," Maj. Gen. Khin Nyunt said Friday.

Travellers who have recently returned from Burma report there is anger in the country over the government's refusal to hand over power to the NLD. "People I spoke to are totally opposed to the junta but with the crackdown on all opposition they are afraid to speak out publicly. They know that one wrong word and they will end up being arrested and probably tortured," said one traveller.

Last month Amnesty International, the London-based human rights group, accused the junta of turning the country into a secret state of terror where arrests and torture were commonplace. It described Burma as a country where people live in a climate of fear, knowing that any criticsm of the junta risks immediate arrest.

"The military arrest people anywhere - in homes, buses, cafes - and have relentlessly tortured government critics. Hundreds of people have simply vanished into the prison system," said the Amnesty report.

Amnesty was also highly critical of the military intelligence unit headed by Maj. Gen. Khin Nyunt. He has been described by critics as a shadowy figure who spreads fear throughout the country.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 8) - The Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip were paralyzed Saturday by a general strike called by Palestinian groups and curfews slapped on most of the regions, Arab and military sources said.

The clandestine Unified Leadership of the Uprising in the territories and the Islamic resistance movement Hamas had each called for a general strike Saturday and Sunday to mark the third anniversary on December 9 of the intifada, or anti-Israeli uprising.

Israeli authorities imposed curfews Friday on a large part of the occupied territories, affecting about a million people, to contain violence and prevent demonstrations ahead of the anniversary. Saturday's general strike also marked the killing by Israeli security forces two months ago of 17 Palestinians at the Temple Mount.

Authorities declared the northern West Bank towns of Ramallah and Tulkarm "closed military zones" and halted access to journalists, military sources said. The army also bolstered its forces and beefed up its presence on all roads from the West Bank and Gaza Strip to Israel proper, they said.

A military spokesman said Saturday that unknown assailants had lobbed a grenade late Friday at an empty office of the military administration in Rafah in the southern Gaza Strip, along the border with Egypt, but that there were no casualties. In Beirut, the Islamic Jihad in Palestine organization claimed the attack, saying sentries at the building were wounded.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 8) - Israel has seized the military and political initiative during the third year of the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation, prominent Palestinians concede.

"In 1990, the Isrealis took the initiative and we reacted. What's more, our people have become weary after three continuous years of repression," said Riad Malki, an engineer close to George Habash's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine.

"We often forget that the year was also marked by the massive influx of Soviet Jews who threaten the very existence of Palestinians by setting up home on our land," he added.

But he said "we have brought the battle to Jerusalem which has become, contrary to all Israeli efforts, a flashpoint for the intifada," adding that unity among Palestinian factions had been reinforced in the field.

The intifada, (uprising in Arabic) began in the Gaza Strip on December 9, 1987 a day after an Israeli military truck crashed into two taxis carrying Palestinian workers, killing several of them. Moslem fundamentalists say the uprising was sparked a few days earlier when Israeli authorities killed some of their colleagues.

"Nineteen-ninety was a war of attrition between Israelis and Palestinians, and the latter have lost the initiative," said Sari Nusseibeh, an instructor at the West Bank's Bir Zeit University and who is close to Fatah, the PLO's main component.

Overall, 100 Palestinians suspected of collaborating with the Israelis were killed, while clashes with Israeli authorities left 100 Palestinians dead, a decrease from the two previous years. Palestinian attacks against Israelis rose sharply toward the end of 1990.

Many clashes this year took place in Jerusalem, which had been spared in the past, while attacks on Israelis, although supported by different Palestinian organizations, appeared to be isolated acts.

Palestinians apparently acting alone stabbed to death four Israelis in the wake of the October 8 massacre of 17 Palestinians at the Temple Mount in Jerusalem.

Nusseibeh said the Palestinians mainly failed to combine civil disobedience with the building of a future state. "The strategic error" is that the leaders failed, after a year and a half of clashes, to decree a provisional Palestinian government.

Such a body would bring together all the representatives of Palestinian institutions within the territories and the Palestine Liberation Organization abroad.

Malki said he believes the intifada was not sufficiently coordinated in the last few years. He said he favors "the creation of a wider Palestinian front, allowing institutions to participate in political decisions." Ghassan al-Khatib, a professor close to the Palestinian Communist Party, also stressed the need for the Palestinians to retake the initiative.

The Israeli tactic of imposing endless curfews and making preventive arrests gave the impression during the first six months that the intifada was losing steam.

Then the uprising appeared to regain its momentum. "But in fact it's not the intifada ... which has become violent, but Israeli attempts to crush it that have caused a series of desperate acts by individuals," he said.

Only Dr. Abdel Aziz Rantisi of the Moslem fundamentalist movement Hamas in Gaza said the uprising had been a total success this year. "The intifada has allowed the development of Islam within the Palestinian nation," he said. "People are better Moslems today."

He declined to say if his movement would this year join the Unified Leadership of the Uprising in the Occupied Territories, which groups the main Palestine Liberation Organization factions. Prominent Palestinians also agree that a negotiated settlement to the Gulf crisis would help their cause, while a war could harm it.

WARSAW (DEC. 8) - Veteran labor leader Lech Walesa is the odds-on favorite to win the second and final round of Poland's presidential elections Sunday against Stan Tyminski, a businessman who returned to his homeland after 21 years in Canada.

Latest polls predict that with a turnout of 60 percent of Poland's 27 million voters, the 47-year-old Solidarity leader will win between 58 percent and 73 percent of the vote against 16 percent to 23 percent for his 42-year-old rival who was unknown to the public at large before the campaign began.

The pollsters say, however, that Walesa's margin in these first democratic presidential elections since the end of communism in Poland may be reduced if voter turn-out is smaller than expected.

Political debate in the campaign degenerated into competing promises and smears. Tyminski accused foreign companies of taking advantage of Poland's ravaged economy and threatened to publicize documents which he claimed would compromise Walesa. Walesa, in turn, accused Tyminski of having had links with the communist old guard and the now disbanded secret police.

Voters made it clear during the campaign, 15 months after the installation of Poland's post-communist government, that they reject the austerity measures imposed with the support of Solidarity's leaders in a bid to catapult Poland into the world free market economy.

The fact that Tyminski has significant, if minority, support demonstrates a crisis in Polish society, according to outgoing Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki.

The powerful Roman Catholic church threw its weight behind Walesa, saying it was abandoning its traditional political neutrality "for the good of the nation."

Walesa also received support in the second round from Mazowiecki, who ran for president but was eliminated in the first round after receiving only 18 percent of the votes, against 23 percent for Tyminski and 40 percent for Walesa. Mazowiecki nevertheless accused the Nobel peace laureate of having destroyed the Solidarity labor grouping and its ideals.

Lech Kaczynski, a close aide to Walesa, excluded any possibility of a coalition government. He said the new prime minister was likely to be 60-year-old lawyer Jan Olszewski.

Outgoing President Wojciech Jaruzelski, 67, is expected to hand over the office to his successor before the end of the year. First results are expected Sunday shortly after voting booths close at 1900 GMT.

AMMAN (DEC. 8) - Forty-one Japanese hostages, authorized to leave Iraq before an announcement that all foreigners would be freed, arrived in the Jordanian capital Saturday aboard an Iraqi Airways flight.

The hostages, 36 of whom had been held in Kuwait and five in Baghdad, were freed with the help of Japanese Senator Antonio Inoki. Inoki arrived at the airport aboard the same flight with a 29-member delegation that had accompanied him to Iraq and 36 spouses of the hostages.

The hostages' departure came a day after the Iraqi parliament ratified a decision by President Saddam Hussein to release all foreigners held since Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Japan Airlines said earlier that a JAL DC-10 had left Tokyo Saturday for Amman to pick up the hostages and their family members here. On Saturday, Iraq said all foreigners would be allowed to leave the country aboard Iraqi Airways flights.

Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz on Friday told the U.S. television network ABC that all foreigners - including those in Kuwait, where some are said to be still in hiding - would be allowed to leave Iraq.

DUESSELDORF, GERMANY (DEC. 8) - Metal-workers in three Laender (states) are sure to strike following the failure of 15 hours of talks between management and the powerful IG Metall labor union, union sources said.

The strike by some 135,000 metal-workers might come as early as Monday, they said, in the Laender of North Rhine-Westphalia, Lower Saxony and Bremen. The steel and metal-working companies are offering a six percent wage increase, retroactive to November 1, and a shift to a 35-hour week all at once, rather than in phases.

IG Metall wants a 9.3 percent wage hike and a reduction in wage differentials between metal-workers and steel-workers. A metal-worker in North Rhine-Westphalia now earns an average of 14.45 Deutsche marks (9.72 dollars) an hour, against 13.22 marks (8.90 dollars) for a steel-worker there.

FREETOWN (DEC. 8) - Diplomats arriving in Sierra Leone from Monrovia say the Liberian capital is returning to normal after a bloody, year-long civil war, but Liberian radio monitored here urged an end Saturday to a black market in ration coupons.

Special Emergency Life Food program director Blamo Nelson told the Liberian Broadcasting Corporation there was enough food to go round. He urged Liberians to be "orderly and honest" and to give up selling ration coupons.

Food distribution was halted last week as enumerators went house-to-house to register people for ration books in a bid to reduce fraud. That action came amid criticism that distribution of food, including rice, had broken down.

A doctor meanwhile told the radio station that about ten people in Monrovia had died after drinking "unidentified liquor" apparently stolen from a damaged container at Monrovia's port.

The radio quoted Bishop Ronald Diggs, vice president of Liberia's interim government, as telling Customs officers Friday that the government "does not intend to dismiss former government employees without cause."

The diplomats arriving here said taxis and buses were circulating in Monrovia and that a cease-fire continued to hold. One said traders would return to their stalls in the central market Monday.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 8) EFE - Sex-symbol Brooke Shields' plans to cheer up U.S. troops in the Gulf this Christmas got a slap in the face when Saudi authorities urged her to withdraw her visa application, a U.S. daily reported Saturday.

Citing unnamed government officials, The Washington Post said Riyadh had asked that the actress-model's visa application be withdrawn since her presence in the strictly Moslem country might cause offense.

The Saudis gave no explanation for the move, the daily said.

Shields, a highly-paid model who starred in the racy love story Blue Lagoon, was to be among a number of entertainers to visit the 250,000 U.S. troops massed in the Gulf region.

(DEC. 8) UPI - Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the threat of war ''still exists as strong as ever.'' But Fitzwater adds that the latest developments are an indication that U-N resolutions against Iraq have placed- in Fitzwater's words- ''a new degree of pressure and urgency on Saddam Hussein.''

The negotiations will resume Saturday... with NON-align nations calling for an international peace conference on the Arab- Israeli dispute in Middle East.

(DEC. 8) UPI - Is there anyone in the NBA who can stop the Portland Trailblazers? Portland, the hottest team in the league, rolled through Indianapolis Friday night and had little trouble disposing of the Pacers, 127-105, to improve its record to a league-best 17-1.

"Our guys are playing a very focused game right now," said Portland Coach Rick Adelman. "These guys are playing as good as they can play and we are ready to play with the best."

The Trailblazers get a test Saturday against Michael Jordan and the red-hot Chicago Bulls, who won their seventh straight game by beating the New York Knicks 108-98. Chicago is 5-2 at home this season.

The Trailblazers fell behind 12-8 early, then scored ten of the next 12 points to take a 18-14 lead and never trailed again. They opened their largest lead at 119-93 on a Buck Williams layup with 3:36 remaining.

Clyde Drexler paced the Blazers with 23 points while Chuck Person scored 22 for the Pacers, who fell to 7-12. Indianapolis sank just 11 of 18 free throws compared with 31 of 42 for Portand. "If we would have gotten the home whistle tonight, it might have been the difference," said Indiana coach Dick Versace.

-- AROUND THE NBA --

In other games, Milwaukee edges Atlanta 104-103, Orlando topped Seattle 106-100, Phoenix knocked off New Jersey 129-110, Philadelphia beat Denver 135-126, Boston won at Dallas 112-104, Utah ended the Los Angeles Lakers' eight-game win streak with a 101-79 win, and Golden State handled defending champion Detroit 113-110.

Bucks 104, Hawks 103

In Atlanta, Fred Roberts' 19-footer at the buzzer lifted Milwaukee. Atlanta led by 12 early in the fourth quarter, but Milwaukee tied the score at 100-100 with a minute left. Sidney Moncrief hit a three-pointer for Atlanta, Jay Humphries answered with a jumper for the Bucks and Roberts followed with the game winner. Bucks assistant coach Frank Hamblen filled in for head coach Del Harris, who was out with the flu.

Bulls 108, Knicks 98

In Chicago, Jordan scored 33 points and ignited the decisive spurt at the end of the first half to send Chicago to its seventh straight victory. New York was within 51-49 when Chicago responded with a 10-1 surge over the last 2:55 of the second quarter to gain control. The loss was the second straight for new Knicks head coach John MacLeod.

Celtics 112, Mavericks 104

In Dallas, Robert Parish scored 26 points for the Celtics, who hold an 18-3 series lead over Dallas. Boston shot 57 percent in the first half for a 50-48 halftime edge and led by at least five points the rest of the way. The Mavericks have lost four straight and nine of their last 11 since Roy Tarpley and Fat Lever were sidelined with knee injuries.

Jazz 101, Lakers 79

At Salt Lake City, John Stockton's 20 points and 17 assists helped Utah snap the Lakers' eight game win streak. The Lakers were held to their lowest output of the season. The Jazz are 9-1 when holding teams under 100 points, have won eight of their last nine games, and have held opponents under 80 points in three of their last seven.

76ers 135, Nuggets 126

In Philadelphia, Charles Barkley's 40 points and season-high 22 rebounds enabled the 76ers to win their third straight game. Denver dropped to 0-9 on the road, one of only two teams in the NBA that is winless away from home. The 76ers never trailed and led by as many as 19 points. Orlando Woolridge led Denver with 36 points.

Suns 129, Nets 110

At East Rutherford, N.J., Jeff Hornacek scored 28 points and Tom Chambers added 18 to help Phoenix snap a three-game losing streak. Phoenix blew the game open in the third period, outscoring New Jersey 37-25 to lead 101-77 entering the fourth quarter. New Jersey played without forward Derrick Coleman out with a strained left ankle.

Magic 106, SuperSonics 100

In Orlando, Otis Smith matched a career-best 33 points and the Magic hit 12 of 14 free throws in the fourth period. Smith's dunk with 3:47 left gave the Magic a 93-92 lead and they never trailed again. Seattle made its first appearance after dealing veteran forward Xavier McDaniel to Phoenix for forward Eddie Johnson and two first-round draft picks.

Warriors 113, Pistons 110

In Oakland, Chris Mullin, Tim Hardaway and Mitch Richmond combined for 72 points, but Detroit's Isiah Thomas missed a game-tying shot at the buzzer that preserved the Golden State victory. It was Detroit's fourth straight loss. With the Warriors ahead by three, Joe Dumars intentionally missed the second of two free throw attempts. Thomas got the long rebound but missed a shot from three-point range as time ran out. Dumars, Mark Aguirre and Thomas accounted for 81 points.

(DEC. 8) UPI - Only one thing could have improved on Indiana's victory Friday night: To have it be the last game of the NCAAs instead of an early-season tournament. Calbert Cheaney scored 19 points and sparked two key runs, leading Indiana to a 101-64 thrashing of Niagara in the opening game of the 17th Indiana Classic.

The victory was Indiana's 33rd straight in the event, in which the Hoosiers have never lost a game. Indiana goes for its 17th straight title Saturday night against San Diego, which rolled to a 75-51 victory over North Carolina-Wilmington in the other first round game.

Pat Holbert scored ten of his game-high 19 points in a decisive first-half run that allowed San Diego to defeat NC-Wilmington.

"The only thing I would find to be a little bit displeased about was Niagara really attacked the basket well in the latter part of the game," Indiana Coach Bobby Knight said. "We made defensive errors and we started trading points at that time. I didn't like to see that. We played too well to get to that point in the game and get sloppy."

Cheaney scored eight points for the Hoosiers in a 13-1 run that lasted 4:44 and left Indiana ahead 25-10 with 5:27 remaining in the first half. The Hoosiers extended their halftime advantage to 41-22. By then Niagara Coach Jack Armstrong was convinced how good Cheaney was.

"I would love to coach Calbert Cheaney. I think the guy is a terrific player," he said. "Indiana did a terrific job in the first half with its man-to-man defense. They took away our entry pass on the wing."

Cheaney sank a jump shot and consecutive 3-point shots to lead a 19-2 run early in the second half that boosted Indiana's advantage to 60-26 with 15:20 to play. Reserves later added a string of 12 straight points to earn their largest lead at 84-43 against the overmatched Purple Eagles.

Pat Graham added 16 for Indiana and Greg Graham contributed 14. David Bertram led Niagara with 13 points.

In other games, No. 4 Syracuse poundeed Alaska-Anchorage 103-85, New Mexico downed No. 21 New Mexico State 94-88, Illinois routed Oregon State 112-78, and Penn gunned down Navy 73-61.

At Syracuse, N.Y., Billy Owens and Conrad McRae each scored 16 points and the 6-0 Orangemen never trailed against the Division II Seawolves, who fell to 4-4. Syracuse led by as much as 25 points in the second half. The Seawolves were led by forward Jackie Johnson with 22 points and guard Mark Lenoir with 18.

At Albuquerque, Luc Longley scored 24 points, leading four other teammates in double figures and helping New Mexico knock No. 21 New Mexico State from the unbeaten ranks. Longley, 7-foot-2, led all scorers as well as pulling down 13

(DEC. 8) UPI - Harold Snepsts has scored his annual goal. Snepsts, playing in his 999th career NHL game, scored his first goal of the season Friday night in Detroit, and Brett Hull and Rich Sutter each tallied two goals to help the St. Louis Blues end a six-game winless streak with a 6-3 victory over the Red Wings.

"We were talking about how much we admired the way (retired New York Islanders star) Mike Bossy could get his shot off, but Brett gets his shot off quicker than Bossy's," said Snepsts, a defenseman who has scored a total of 38 goals in 17 NHL seasons. "He comes out early and the goals come in bunches for him. I score in bunches, too - one a season."

Hull, who leads the NHL with 29 goals, scored twice in the first period. Snepsts scored at 8:10 of the second period to give St. Louis a two-goal advantage.

Detroit cut the lead to 4-3 at 1:45 of the third period when Johan Garpenlov received credit for a power-play goal that Blues defenseman Scott Stevens put into his own net. Referee Don Koharski initially ruled no goal, but he reversed his decision after conferring with the linesmen and goal judge. The game was delayed several minutes while the Blues argued the ruling.

"When you score to cut the lead to one goal you have the momentum," said Detroit Coach Bryan Murray. "Because of the conference we didn't have a chance to take the emotion and carry it anyplace." Sutter sealed the victory for the Blues when he scored ten seconds apart midway through the third period.

Shawn Burr and Steve Yzerman each scored in the first period to give Detroit a 2-0 lead. St. Louis began its comeback on Hull's first goal. Glen Featherstone tied the score with a power-play goal at 10:59 that ended an 0-for-24 string of man-advantage chances for the Blues.

"Our specialty teams have been hurting us of late," said Snepsts. "We didn't score on 24 straight power plays and during that time we gave up three short-handed goals. It makes a difference when you give goals away without getting anything back."

The Red Wings also have been struggling on the power play, scoring only once in their last 17 opportunities. "We refuse to shoot the puck," Murray said. "Nobody's going to the net. There's no confidence there. We're setting up plays, but we don't shoot the puck. It's become a real issue now. All we can do is hope somebody takes charge and scores a couple goals."

-- AROUND THE NHL --

In other games, Vancouver tied Pittsburgh 2-2, Hartford beat Buffalo 4-3 in overtime, Washington defeated New Jersey 5-2, Quebec took Calgary 5-3, and Edmonton edged the New York Rangers 4-3.

Canucks 2, Penguins 2

At Pittsburgh, Kevin Stevens scored with 5:26 left to lift the Penguins to the tie. Stevens picked up the rebound of a shot off the boards by John Cullen about 15 feet in the slot and fired the puck by goaltender Kirk McLean for his 17th goal.

Whalers 4, Sabres 3, OT

At Buffalo, N.Y., Scott Young scored 53 seconds into overtime to lift the Whalers. Young picked up a loose puck in the slot and fired a 10- foot wrist shot past Buffalo goaltender Clint Malarchuk. Hartford's Pat Verbeek had scored his second goal of the game with 30 seconds left in regulation time to tie the game.

Capitals 5, Devils 2

At Landover, Md., Mike Ridley scored three goals, including two short-handed tallies, to power the Capitals. The triumph moved Washington into a third-place tie in the Patrick Division with the Devils. The loss snapped New Jersey's six-game unbeaten streak.

Nordiques 5, Flames 3

At Calgary, Tony McKegney scored twice and added an assist to pace Quebec. McKegney's second power-play goal in the final minute ended Calgary's comeback hopes after the Flames had cut the lead to one goal after trailing 4-0.

Oilers 4, New York Rangers 3

At Edmonton, Joe Murphy's second goal of the game in the third period sparked the Oilers to their fourth straight victory and helped them vacate last place in the Symthe division. The slumping Rangers are now winless in their last three games.

CORPUS CHRISTI, TX (DEC. 8) UPI - A newspaper reporter has been jailed for refusing to answer questions about her interviews with a murder suspect, and an appeals court denied a request to free the journalist on bond.

State District Judge Eric Brown ruled Friday that Libby Averyt, 26, a reporter for the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, was in contempt of court and ordered her confined to the Nueces County Jail. The judge held that the interests of a fair trial outweighed Averyt's First Amendment guarantees to freedom of the press.

A lawyer for the newspaper, Jorge Rangel, immediately appealed the ruling to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals in Austin, and asked the higher court to allow Averyt's release on bond while the case was pending.

But the court late Friday denied Rangel's request that Averyt be freed. Caller-Times executive editor Larry Rose vowed to pursue every legal avenue to back his reporter.

"It's our position that we don't want any reporter to be used as the investigative arm of any attorneys," Rose said. "Libby herself has said she doesn't want to go to jail, but she believes she has to stand up for what she believes in."

Her imprisonment marks the second time this year a reporter in Texas has been jailed for refusing to answer questions about an interview of a murder suspect.

San Antonio television station KMOL reporter Brian Karem was jailed 13 days earlier this year for refusing to turn over his notes to defense attorneys and prosecutors, who wanted to know who helped him arrange a telephone interview with a suspect. He only was freed when the sources came forward, freeing Karem from his promise not to reveal their names.

In Averyt's case, a defense lawyer for capital murder suspect Jermarr Arnold wanted information Averyt supposedly obtained in an interview but did not publish in articles that appeared in the Caller-Times Nov. 4 and Nov. 5.

In the articles, Arnold was quoted as saying he shot Corpus Christi jewelry store clerk Christina Marie Sanchez during a 1983 robbery and that he believes he deserves the death penalty. Arnold asked the reporter to interview him.

"The reason Libby's in jail is because she did such a good job of reporting, and the reporting she did was at the invitation of the defendant," Rose said.

Averyt at hearings Thursday and Friday refused to answer questions, saying unpublished information was privileged under freedom-of-the-press clauses of the U.S. and Texas constitutions. But Brown held the privilege was not absolute, saying in this case the right to a fair trial outweighed free press rights.

Averyt told reporters after Thursday's hearing she did not want to go to jail, but believed she had no choice. "If every time I interview someone, the entire conversation could be scrutinized by attorneys, then significantly fewer people would be willing to talk to me. And if they will not talk to me, then I cannot fulfill my role as a reporter and inform the public," Averyt was quoted as saying.

"Also, I would be less eager to pursue stories such as this if I thought that every time I did so, I could be questioned freely by attorneys about my interviews with a person," she said. Meanwhile, lawyers completed jury selection Friday, and Arnold's capital murder trial was scheduled to begin Wednesday.

BARI, ITALY (DEC. 8) UPI - An explosion believed caused by a gas heating system badly damaged the two top floors of a seven-story apartment building, injuring 21 residents, one of them seriously, police said Saturday.

The explosion took place in a sixth-floor apartment shortly before midnight Friday, causing the partial collapse of apartments on the sixth and seventh floors and damaging some apartments on the floor below, fire service officials said.

Scores of firemen and police worked in pouring rain to evacuate the top floors of the building on the outskirts of Bari, a seaport in southeastern Italy.

Ambulances rushed the injured men, women, and children to two city hospitals, but most of them were allowed to go home after treatment for cuts and bruises. Doctors reported Giuseppe Gernone, 17, was in serious condition and reserved their prognosis.

Fire service experts said the explosion was apparently caused by a new methane heating system, installed in the building only a few days ago and put into operation Friday morning.

(DEC. 8) UPI - Many Americans awoke Saturday to chilly air that dipped into Dixie, drove the mercury below freezing in New Mexico and Arkansas, and colored the ground white with frost in West Virginia and Maryland.

The National Weather Service released its list of before-dawn temperatures, and many big cities had readings of 32 degrees and below: Albuquerque, N.M., 25; Nashville, Tenn., 25; Little Rock, Ark., 32; Cincinnati, Ohio, 27; Pittsburgh, Pa., 30; and Las Vegas, Nev., 33.

The weather service said the ground turned white in patches of western Mayland and eastern West Virginia because of thick frost that came as temperatures settled into the mid- to lower 20s.

Morning fog was reported in places across the country. It was particularly dense in the Kanawha Valley of western West Virginia. Visibility was reduced to near zero in the capital city of Charleston and its surroundings. Ice particles formed in the fog and motorists were advised to use caution.

(DEC. 8) UPI - High-level meetings between Iraq and the United States will begin the second half of December and culminate with a visit by Secretary of State James Baker to Baghdad the first week in January, news reports said Saturday.

Meanwhile, Iraq indicated it would only allow chartered Iraqi airliners to fly hostages home when it refused a British Airways plane permission to land in Baghdad late Friday.

The British plane, diverted to neighboring Jordan, had been dispatched from London Friday following an Iraqi National Assembly vote lifting travel restrictions on all foreigners in Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait.

The United States was prepared to charter Iraqi planes to fly hostages from Kuwait and has urged Iraq to dispense with exit visas and passport requirements to avoid bureaucratic delays, State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said.

Also the United States, departing from its previous diplomatic stance, has announced it will vacate the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait once all U.S. hostages held in the emirate invaded Aug. 2 by Iraq are allowed to leave.

The State Department had previously insisted its diplomats remain in place indefinitely to assist U.S. nationals trapped in Kuwait and as a sympolic repudiation of Iraq's annexation of its neighbor.

Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency, in a report Saturday based on high-level diplomatic sources in Baghdad, said an Iraqi delegation led by Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz would arrive in Washington in the second half of December for meetings with President Bush.

It said Baker would then fly to Baghdad the first week of January ahead of a U.N.-imposed Jan. 15 deadline on Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait or face a confrontation with U.S.-led troops deployed in the Persian Gulf region.

State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler reportedly said Iraq had proposed Aziz come to the White House on Dec. 17. But Tutwiler, according to the Washington Post, said the United States had not yet agreed.

Meanwhile, Aziz appeared on ABC television's "Nightline" Friday and reportedly said the State Department had proposed he come to Washington Dec. 20-22 and Baker go to Iraq on Jan. 3. Aziz said Iraq would respond soon.

Bush had called for direct meetings with Iraq after the U.N. vote more than a week ago to authorize use of force in the gulf, and Iraq accepted with the condition the Palestinian question also be on the agenda.

The release of all hostages held as shields against attack would meet one of three U.N. conditions for peacefully resolving the four-month-old crisis, but White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told reporters traveling with Bush in South America that the threat of war "still exists as strong as ever."

Baghdad has given no formal indication of exactly when and how the estimated 6,000 Westerners and Japanese remaining involuntarily in Kuwait and Iraq will be permitted to return home. Aziz, in the television interview, said he hoped the hostages would be free by Christmas, saying, "I think that by Christmas, everybody could leave."

The State Department and the British Foreign Office have advised citizens who remained in hiding in the two gulf nations to stay out of sight until the details of their release were made clearer. But Aziz said the foreigners no longer "have to be in ... hiding." "They can appear and leave the city of Kuwait, or come to Baghdad and take the plane from Baghdad," he said.

Tutwiler said if all Americans in Kuwait are freed as promised, the remaining staff of the U.S. Embassy there would be vacated, but the embassy would not be formally closed.

Ten diplomats and about 15 others have been holed up inside the compound since mid-August, living on canned tuna and rice and forced to boil water from the embassy swimming pool for cooking, drinking, and bathing.

Wilson has pressed Iraq to permit American diplomats to freely enter and leave the embassy so they can assist with the departures, and has asked that water, electricity, and fuel be restored to the compound, Tutwiler said.

She said the decision to vacate the embassy was made because its primary function will have been fulfilled once the Americans it was assigned to stay in contact with leave. In a previous statement during the gulf crisis, Tutwiler said the diplomats at the embassy "will return when the legitimate government of Kuwait returns."

Aziz said if the embassy is vacated, the United States "will be given all the guarantees they are asking for. The building will be secure and there would be no problem about that ...."

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (DEC. 8) UPI - U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills said Saturday there is "no guarantee" the collapsed world trade talks will resume next month in Geneva.

The 107-nation talks, held under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, disbanded in turmoil Friday in a bitter dispute over agriculture subsidies between the United States and the European Community. Although GATT officials said the talks were formally "adjourned," Hills said there was no reason to resume the talks unless progress was possible.

"There's no guarantee of a resumption of talks," Hills told United Press International in an interview at the Brussels airport before leaving for the United States. First, she said, officials at the Geneva-based GATT will confer with various parties to determine if there is any purpose in resuming formal negotiations.

Asked whether there was any reason for optimism, Hills said, "I can't make an instant assessment at this point. We have to go home and see where things stand."

The Uruguay Round of GATT talks, named after the country where it began in 1986, was supposed to end Friday with a sweeping trade-liberalization agreement. Instead, trade ministers spent five days hopelessly deadlocked over farm supports.

The 12-nation EC rejected calls by the United States and other farm-exporting countries to significantly lower its farm subsidies, which create surpluses and distort world-market prices.

EC negotiators stuck to their earlier offer to reduce subsidies by 30 percent. U.S. officials sought an overall reduction of 75 percent and a 90 percent slash in export subsidies.

Due to the agriculture impasse, negotiations barely began in several other critical areas. The talks were designed to extend GATT rules on merchandise trade to new areas such as services, investment, agriculture, and copyright protection.

Hills denied suggestions by some Europeans that the United States failed to appreciate the political clout of the EC's ten million farmers. "We didn't underestimate it," she said in the interview. "Our commitment when we began this round of talks was for fundamental reform in agriculture."

"We know there are interests that want protection," she said. "I have tremendous opposition at home to some trade reforms. That does not mean that trade stands still." About 25,000 farmers protested in Brussels on Monday, when the meeting of trade ministers began.

JERUSALEM (DEC. 8) UPI - The military maintained curfews on dozens of Palestinian communities in the Israeli-occupied territories Saturday, while Arabs closed their shops to commemorate two months since police killed at least 17 Moslems in Jerusalem's Old City.

In the Israeli Arab municipality of Umm el Fahm, approximately 1,000 people marched in honor of the third anniversary of the Palestinian uprising. The uprising, known in Arabic as the intifada, erupted Dec. 9, 1987.

Since the uprising's start, 625 Palestinians were killed by Israeli soldiers and 24 Israelis were killed during violence in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, according to figures released by the army.

Minister of Science and Technology Yuval Ne'eman, of the right-wing Tehiya Party, said he believed Israeli Arab solidarity with the intifada and its purposes was a dangerous process. "Those who want to be citizens must be loyal to their state and cannot cheer and applaud those who kill and stab Israeli citizens," Ne'eman said.

"Those who push them to do so must understand that this process would lead to the return of the history of 1948, when all those who tried to prevent the Jewish people from establishing their state found themselves refugees in other countries," he said.

About 800 Israeli Arabs in the town of Nazareth also held a procession Friday in solidarity with the Palestinians in the occupied territories. They carried slogans reading, "One country for two states" and "Let us establish a Palestinian state alongside Israel."

In the occupied territories Saturday, Palestinians closed their shops and observed a general strike to commemorate two months since Israeli police opened fire on the Temple Mount in Jerusalem and killed at least 17 Palestinians. The Temple Mount, known in Arabic as the Haram el Sharif or the Noble Sanctuary, is Islam's third holiest site and the site of the destroyed Jewish Temple.

The military maintained curfews Saturday on much of the Gaza Strip, most Palestinian refugee camps and several of the largest West Bank communities in advance of the uprising's third anniversary Sunday. More than 600,000 Palestinians were confined to their homes.

Despite the curfews and relative calm leading up to the uprising anniversary, police Saturday reported shots fired toward a patrol of the paramilitary Border Guard late Friday in the Shu'afat refugee camp near Jerusalem.

The latest leaflet of the intifada's underground leadership called on Palestinians to "advance the uprising and to undergo a metamorphosis into a phase of greater struggle." "This will be through the use of all forms of struggle, as was the experience of the recent months of the uprising has proven," the leaflet said.

Some Israeli analysts have interpreted the statement to condone the use of guns and other weapons. During the uprising, Palestinians generally have refrained from using guns against Israelis, although a spate of stabbing attacks began after the Temple Mount slayings.

Israeli soldiers have reinforced their presence in the territories in an effort to stem violence on the uprising anniversary. But a senior military source told the Hebrew newspaper Ma'ariv "all this activity cannot prevent a lone attack by a single person taking a weapon in hand and acting."

#90342u0321 12/08/1990 ~United Press International

CARACAS, VENEZUELA (DEC. 8) UPI - President Bush said Saturday the expected release of U.S. and other hostages from Iraq and Kuwait does not decrease the chance of war but in fact "facilitates" the possible decision to use force to drive Saddam Hussein's troops out of the occupied emirate. "When you don't have Americans there and if force is required, that's just one less worry I've got," Bush said.

Bush, who wrapped up his five-nation South American tour with a brief visit to oil-rich Venezuela, made the remarks at a joint news conference with Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez outside the presidential palace.

Asked if Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's decision to release the hostages decrease the likelihood of war in the Persian Gulf, Bush replied, "I want a peaceful solution. I don't feel we are closer to a peaceful solution. And the reason I don't is that Saddam Hussein keeps insisting that Kuwait is a province of Iraq and he will not get out of Kuwait.

"When you kidnap somebody you should not expect a reward when you let them go." He added the release of hostages "makes it no more difficult at all" to convince other countries of the actions that might be taken against Iraq. "This facilitates the difficult decisions that might lie ahead," Bush said.

While waiting for word on the release of the hostages, Bush gave thanks Saturday to Venezuela for backing his moves against Iraq by increasing its oil production.

Unlike his previous stops in Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, and Chile, where free trade, investment, and debt reduction were the main issues, Bush's discussions with Perez focused on oil.

Caracas was added to the itinerary in large part as a gesture to Perez, once a frequent critic of the United States who since his February 1989 inauguration for a second term has backed Bush at critical times.

Perez repeated that support Saturday, telling Bush, "We small countries such as Venezuela cannot truly accept for anybody to be able to remove by force the boundaries of an existing nation," referring to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

With the United States as its biggest customer, Venezuela upped its oil production by some 500,000 barrels a day - with plans to go even higher - to offset the absence of Iraqi and Kuwaiti exports from the world market.

It has hardly been an act of charity. The surge in world prices and the increased production are estimated to generate as much as $600 million a month in additional oil revenues, which in the last few months has helped Venezuela cut its budget deficit and improve its trade surplus.

That stands in stark contrast to what Bush has heard elsewhere in recent weeks: estimates that disrupted oil supplies, higher prices and lost trade would cost $1.5 billion for Czechoslovakia, $5 billion for Brazil and a lesser amount for Uruguay.

While bad news for others has been good business for Venezuela, Perez has not lost sight of the possibility that good times could be short, as they were when the boom days of the energy crisis of the late 1970s turned to bust with a sharp drop in prices in the early 1980s.

He has used the current crisis to underscore the need to diversify the Venezuelan economy and seek U.S. support for a Venezuela-based strategic petroleum reserve to arm nations of the Western Hemisphere against dependence on Middle East oil.

"The conflict in the Middle East has put into perspective the importance and significance of Venezuela as an oil producer," Perez said Friday night, "and we believe that now more than ever our proposal for hemispheric oil independence is evident and valid."

Bush said Saturday he agrees that the hemisphere needs to be better prepared, but said the United States was not ready to back the formation of a strategic reserve in Venezuela. The United States maintains its own emergency reserve of nearly 600 million barrels of oil.

Opposition to U.S. intervention in the gulf and resentment of U.S. influence in Latin America sparked student protests in Caracas before and during the Bush visit. In the cities of Merida and Barcelona, cars were overturned, shops were looted and American flags were burned. Dozens of students and several police officers were injured, and more than 100 people were arrested Thursday and Friday.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 8) UPI - The home of the brave may soon become the land of the fee. The Immigration and Naturalization Service is drafting a plan to charge people who enter the United States on foot or by car. The proposal, which is still on the drawing board, already has critics lining up like weekend travelers at the Tijuana border crossing.

"That's a hell of a way to balance their budget," scoffs Mario Moreno, regional counsel of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Educational Fund. "Charging fees at the border is not the way to take care of the gross mismanagement of the INS."

Says Jill Scheldrup, state and local programs manager for the U.S. Chamber of Commerce: "It would appear that it would create yet another barrier to persons coming into this country."

The experimental plan was included in a Justice Department appropriations measure passed by Congress earlier this year. It calls for the INS to conduct a three-year test of charging fees at congested border crossings.

Last year, 429,028,310 residents and aliens were admitted to the United States through official ports of entry, the INS says. The numbers do not include those who entered the country illegally.

In Washington state alone, nearly 25 million people, including 18 million aliens, passed through the state's 18 points of entry. The most congested crossing is Blaine, Wash., which borders Vancouver, Canada. More than 11 million people crossed into the United States through Blaine in 1989.

Many of the busiest checkpoints have experienced a sharp increase in traffic in recent years. The seemingly endless lines of idling cars during holiday weekends at the Tijuana-San Ysidro border crossing is a Southern California legend.

The money generated by the fees would be used to pay for more INS agents and facilities with the goal of cutting down on congestion. At the end of the three-year period, a decision will be made on whether to continue or expand the fee project.

Duke Austin, INS spokesman, is quick to point out that fees for entering the United States are not new. For several years the INS and the Customs Service have been adding a $5 surcharge on international plane tickets to pay for inspections. There are also several toll bridges connecting the United States with Canada and with Mexico.

"The motivation for doing this is we have impacted areas on our northern and southern borders where there are huge backlogs, unacceptable backlogs," Austin says. Absent additional funding from the federal government, "How do you put new resources there?"

Austin says the INS is looking at various options for putting the fee program into place, and that the plan should be ready to present to Congress sometime in January. Congress then has 60 days to review it. As it stands now, it appears the INS will create a toll "express lane" at as yet undetermined border crossings. Other lanes would remain free.

Still undecided, Austin said, is how exactly to collect the fee and whether to offer a monthly pass for migrant workers and other frequent crossers. But Moreno and others fear the program will ultimately lead to a regressive tax on anyone entering or leaving the country. Such fees would be an economic hardship on poor migrant workers and border town businesses.

Moreno, a former city planner of Brownsville, Texas, said people crossing the border to and from Mexico "were the lifeline" of local commerce. Dismissing the argument that fees are already in place for plane tickets, he said, "You're talking about a different class of people coming to this country by airplane. Some of these people (walking or driving) have never been on an airplane. These people are very poor."

And the U.S. Chamber of Commerce considers the plan bad for business, according to Scheldrup. "We view immigration as being very beneficial to U.S. employment and the U.S. economy," she said. "Anything that is designed to inhibit foreign nationals from entering the country should not be on the books."

But others praise the idea as a way to keep America's often chaotic border situation under control. "We think it's a marvelous and outstanding idea whose time has come," said Dan Stein, executive director of the Federation for American Immigration Reform. The group has long been a supporter of strict control of border areas and "user fees" for entry into the United States.

"We think it makes a lot of sense," Stein says. "It's designed to improve inspections. Who can object to that? Everybody should want good, smooth inspections."

Stein's group estimates that a $2 fee could generate up to $600 million annually. The INS, which has a $900 million budget in fiscal 1991, says it has no estimate on how much money the fees will bring in.

Malcolm McKechnie, press attache to the Canadian Embassy in Washington, says his country has been watching the proposal very carefully. "We're trying to find a way of cooperating with U.S. authorities to ease border congestion." The current plan, McKechnie says, "would benefit Canadians as well as Americans."

WASHINGTON (DEC. 8) UPI - U.S. officials said the United States and the Soviet Union are very close to final agreement on a historic treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons, but after some recent disappointments nobody is flatly predicting a final breakthrough in this week's talks in Houston.

The strategic reduction arms talks - or START - would cut the total number of nuclear warheads and missiles by an overall total of about 35 percent, including a 50 percent cut in the largest and most accurate of Soviet missiles.

A senior administration official, speaking on the basis of no further identification, said that the treaty could be put away at the talks Monday and Tuesday in Houston between Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

But the official said, "The deadline is not as important as the quality of the eventual treaty and there is an immense amount of sheer volume, 500 pages of highly technical documents with every word having to be checked and translated."

The biggest remaining problem, said the official, is the specifics of verifying the limits. There are about a dozen different inspection and verification techniques, including surprise on-site visits to missile sites and production facilities.

The verification is far more complex than the Intermediate Nuclear Forces treaty signed three years ago at the Ronald Reagan-Mikhail Gorbachev summit in Washington. In INF, a whole class of missiles was eliminated so the confirmed existence of a single missile of that class would be a clear violation of the treaty.

In START, only a proportion of each type of weapon would be eliminated. So, in order to confirm a violation, every weapon of that class has to be located and counted to see if one side has too many. But the INF treaty set an important precedent - the Soviets giving in to the principle of intrusive on-site inspections by U.S. inspectors.

The toughest single verification problem, the official said, is the mobile intercontinental ballistic missiles. The Soviets have two such classes of missiles, the SS-24 and SS-25. The United States has none, but is keeping the option open of building them in the future.

Another difficult weapon to control are air-launched cruise missiles, small jet-powered pilotless planes with nuclear warheads that are launched from manned bombers. The problem is that the inspectors actually have to look under the wings and in the bomb bays of the planes to make sure that they are not equipped to carry an illegal number of ALCMs. Still another difficulty is how to count and verify so-called "non-deployed" weapons, spare missiles that are in storage and are not in the active arsenal.

One of the frustrations in the long negotiations, going back to 1977, are the recent changes and upheavals in the Soviet Union. While the current Soviet civilian leadership is clearly eager to move ahead with a strong treaty, U.S. negotiators have picked up signs of dissension within the Soviet government.

In one case, Gorbachev gave his personal word on allowing the United States to keep a special type of cruise missile. But in the talks the next day, the Soviet military negotiators reneged on that handshake promise from Gorbachev. Secretary of State James Baker had to go back to Gorbachev a second time to nail down the deal.

Similar switches have happened at other stages of the talks, suggesting that the Soviet high military command is not as eager as Gorbachev to cut back on strategic arms and to allow an unprecedented number of American inspectors to go poking around in the most secret military installations.

U.S. officials think that the evident dissension is an outer sign of a deeper philosophical dispute in the Soviet Union. One U.S. official thinks that the Soviet military are trying to follow the example set in the United States during the Eisenhower administration.

When President Dwight Eisenhower decided that a large conventional army was too expensive for the United States to maintain after the end of the Korean War, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles came up with the strategy of massive retaliation, relying on cheaper strategic nuclear weapons as the ultimate defense shield.

U.S. officials see some evidence that the Soviet military may be following the Dulles philosophy and therefore are reluctant to slash their nuclear arsenals at a time when conventional forces are going to be reduced. Supporting that theory is the intelligence assessment that the Soviets continue to turn out missile submarines and strategic bombers at a steady rate, despite the imminent prospect that the START treaty would cut those same weapons back.

HOUSTON (DEC. 8) UPI - Former Gov. John Connally flew out of Baghdad Saturday with some 30 Texans who were held hostage by Saddam Hussein and ordered freed with all other foreign captives last week, a spokesman for Connally said. Barry Silverman said that Connally and fellow businessman Oscar Wyatt left the Middle Eastern nation with the hostages and their families.

"Oscar Wyatt Jr., chairman of the Coastal Corp., and John Connally, a Coastal director, will return to Houston early Sunday morning from Iraq with a planeload of approximately 30 hostages," a company statement said.

The Coastal Corporation Boeing 707 is tentatively scheduled to arrive at Ellington Field at approximately 4 a.m., the statement said. Ellington Field is a former Air Force base now used as a private airfield. Connally's wife Nellie spoke with her husband Friday. "She said he was very excited and happy " Silverman said.

Connally, who is a former U.S. treasury secretary and now a member of the Coastal Corp. board of directors, and Wyatt flew to Baghdad to talk to Saddam and gain release of some hostages. The Texans took with them a planeload of medical supplies for negotiating purposes, and met with Saddam Wednesday. The Iraqi leader issued a surprise decision Thursday effectively releasing all foreign hostages in Iraq and Kuwait.

Before the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and the U.S. embargo on Iraqi exports, Coastal was one of Iraq's largest customers. It was unclear why they were allowed to leave Saturday on the Coastal plane. There were reports that Baghdad had insisted foreign nationals could be flown out only on Iraqi airliners, and that a British Airways Boeing 767 sent to pick up British hostages was refused permission to land in Iraq.

Coastal, which has interests in natural gas pipelines, oil and gas production and refining, had been buying an average 250,000 barrels a day of Iraqi oil for use at its Corpus Christi refinery and also for resale through its trading company.

Coastal spokesmen said the company had no employees who were Saddam's "guests" during the gulf crisis. Wyatt has dealt with Saddam before through his business dealings with Middle East oil producers.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (DEC. 8) UPI - The Columbia astronauts likely will end their glitch-plagued astronomy flight one or two days early because of a clogged line keeping from flushing a tank holding waste water from their toilet, officials said Saturday. "The plumbing's stopped up and there is no Roto-Rooter," chief flight director Randy Stone told reporters.

While he refused to rule out the possibility of Columbia logging a full-duration ten-day mission, he was not optimistic, saying the astronauts likely would be ordered to land Monday or, in a worst-case scenario, Sunday. The shuttle was originally scheduled to land Tuesday.

"Where we stand right now, I'm not terribly optimistic we can make it to the ten-day ... capability," Stone said. "But we're not giving up on that." In the meantime, Columbia's seven astronauts were ordered to stop using the ship's toilet for urination and to instead use Apollo-era plastic bags called "urine collection devices," or UCDs.

"To preserve all the waste water volume that we have, we'd like you to go on the male UCDs now, you've got 54 of them available," astronaut Story Musgrave radioed the crew from mission control. "You may not have to stay on those, but it will give us a better hack on calculating the capability we've got. "And we do recommend using each bag as often as you think is reasonable to fill the bag up," he added.

On board are commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42, John "Mike" Lounge, 44, Robert Parker, 53, Jeffrey Hoffman, 46, and civilian astronomers Ronald Parise, 39, and Samuel Durrance, 47.

Landing originally was scheduled at 9:46 p.m. PST Tuesday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. Bringing the crew home a day early would result in a landing at 9:53 p.m. PST Monday. A landing Sunday, while not considered likely, also was a possibility.

The blocked waste water line was the latest in a series of glitches to threaten a long-awaited flight to study the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe with a $150 million battery of telescopes sensitive to X-rays and ultraviolet light.

After working around two failed computers, a broken data recorder and problems getting a $50 million telescope pointing system up and running, the "Astro-1" astronomy mission was finally in high gear when the waste water problem cropped up Saturday.

Project officials said the astronauts were on track to have observed 160 to 170 of a planned 200 targets in a full-duration ten-day mission. Despite the threat of an early end to the 38th shuttle mission, astronomers on Earth were understanding.

"We feel now things are going very well and we would be very disappointed (about an early landing)," said astronomer Warren Moos. "But ... if there's something that endangers the spacecraft, there's simply no choice." In the meantime, the astronauts pressed on with around-the-clock observations.

"Now that we are finally up and running, I think we're going to be getting some really great data," said astronomer Frank Marshall. "We're really looking forward to every day we have remaining in the mission."

The problem came to light early Saturday when the astronauts attempted to dump the contents of their waste water tank overboard. Data showed the line was at least partially blocked and attempts to blow air through the line to clear it out were not successful.

The waste water tank measures 35.5 inches long by 15.5 inches wide and weighs 165 pounds. It is used throughout a shuttle flight to store waste water from the shuttle's toilet and and to collect humidity removed from the crew cabin air supply.

"The crew is in absolutely no danger," Stone said. "We have a logistical problem with dealing with waste water aboard the orbiter. It's at worst an inconvenience and it could potentially shorten the flight. But there is absolutely no hazard to the crew with this situation."

The tank was 66 percent full when the problem was discovered and without taking any action, it would be full by Sunday morning. By using a rubberized nylon bag to supplement the normal tank, the crew can get 60 hours of operation out of the tanks, not counting the use of the UCDs.

"We're working it hard," Musgrave radioed the crew from Houston. "Right now ... we think there is no dump capability. Currently you have 60 hours when you look at ullage in the tank and your contingency container." "OK, that's good to know," Brand replied. "That'll give them a little time to work it."

In the meantime, Brand and his six crewmates pressed on with a full slate of astronomical observations, aiming Columbia's telescopes at a variety of high-priority stars and galaxies to learn more about the structure and evolution of the universe.

"Everything's going very well. We're getting a lot of good science," said mission manager Jack Jones. "We have no problems with the payload at this time that we're working."

LONDON (DEC. 8) UPI - The British government said Saturday that Britons hiding in Kuwait can come out of hiding and prepare to leave the country. The Foreign Office announcement broadcast over the British Broadcasting Corp.'s World Service said because of pledges by the Iraqi government they were no longer advising people to stay in hiding.

The government's reversal of its advice since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait came after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein said Thursday that all foreigners wishing to leave would be free to do so. The number of Britons who have eluded Iraqi patrols in Kuwait is estimated at 440 by the British Foreign Office. Another 750 Britons are held in Iraq.

"Following the Iraqi decision to allow all foreign nationals to leave Iraq and Kuwait and the assurances given by the Iraqi authorities in Kuwait that there is no reason why all foreign nationals should not move around freely, we see no need to maintain our advice to stay in hiding," a Foreign Office spokesman said.

The announcement on the BBC said Britons should prepare to leave and await further directions over the World Service. If possible, they were urged to contact the British embassy in Kuwait or one of the people in the network of contacts the embassy had set up.

In contrast, the U.S. State Department meanwhile advised American hostages to "stay where you are," indicating those in hiding should not come out. A State Department statement Saturday said the embassy in Baghdad had chartered a plane to travel from Baghdad to Kuwait, then return to Baghdad and then leave for Frankfurt, Germany.

The British Foreign Office spokesman said British embassy officials also were attempting to arrange for flights from Iraq, but no details had been settled. Friday, a British Airways plane dispatched from London and loaded with champagne for the returning freed hostages was barred from entering Iraq. Iraqi officals have said Iraqi Airways will handle the exodus of the estimated 6,000 Westerners and Japanese held involuntarily in Iraq and Kuwait.

BBC television reported some Britons had received exit visas and were expected to leave Iraq Sunday. It also said Britons, including two who had hid under a watertank atop an apartment building, were beginning to arrive in Baghdad from Kuwait.

"People here in Baghdad have certainly been getting exit visas, ordinary residents here," British Ambassador to Iraq Harold Walker said. "What we haven't seen is a large number of poeple in from the installations and we haven't actually fixed anything for contingent in Kuwait."

Golf

Australian Steve Elkington shot a 4-under-par 68 to forge a three-way tie with German Bernhard Langer and South African David Frost in the Sun City Million Dollar Challenge in South Africa. Elkington shot his second straight 68 after a dismal opening-round 77. Langer made five birdies and three bogeys for a 70 and Frost, the defending champion, scored his third straight 71 at the Gary Player Country Club course. They'll take a three-stroke lead into Sunday's final round of one of the world's richest golf tournaments.

... Ian Baker-Finch tied a record with an 8-under 63 to grab a two- shot lead after three rounds of the $770,000 Johnnie Walker Golf Classic in Australia. Baker-Finch mixed an eagle, seven birdies and a bogey to match the course mark set by Roger Mackay during the 1988 World Cup.

The owners met over a three-day period in Palm Springs, Fla., before giving up on a realignment plan to include the Tampa Bay Lightning and the Ottawa Senators. A committee will work on the problem until next December's league meetings.

Stock, 32, who gained his biggest competitive glory a decade ago when he took the 1980 Olympic downhill gold medal, shot out of the 27th starting position to snatch victory on the 1.98-mile OK Course with a time of 1:57.43.

... Katrin Gutensohn-Knopf of Germany made up for a small error on the top of the course and snatched the first women's downhill of the season in Altenmarkt Austria. She clocked 1:52.93 on the new Kaelberloch course and was 16-hundredths of a second faster than home favorite Petra Kronberger. Canada's Kerrin Lee-Gartner celebrated her career best World Cup result in third.

Diego Maradona showed up to Napoli practice Saturday for the first time in almost a week, one day after the Italian club appealed to the national soccer federation and the Players' Association to bring the Argentine superstar into line. Maradona often has missed practice this season and has failed to play for the club in non-league games. Napoli announced Tuesday it had started a law suit against the company that handles Maradona's commercial affairs. The suit could cost Maradona more than $6 million in lost income if Napoli goes through with the case and wins it. After telling a Naples newspaper the Napoli action was a ''stab in the back'', Maradona vanished until Saturday morning.

CAIRO, EGYPT (DEC. 8) UPI - The Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries decided at a meeting Saturday not to suspend Iraq's membership and to maintain an OAPEC training institute in Baghdad, sources said.

The meeting of the ten Arab oil states is expected to set the tone for an OPEC meeting starting Monday in Vienna, where delegates from Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait will again meet across a conference table.

Oil ministers and officials of the Arab group said prior to Saturday's meeting at a Cairo hotel that they hoped to discuss purely administrative and not political matters, but sources said the oil ministers had considered suspending Iraq's membership in the organization.

The sources said the idea was dropped prior to Saturday's meeting. Instead, the ministers in the one day conference agreed to move OAPEC headquarters temporarily from occupied Kuwait to Cairo and approved the organization's $4.3 million 1991 budget.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Rashid Salem Ameeri said at a news conference after the OAPEC meeting that Kuwait would consider any proposal to kick Iraq out of OPEC but did not say if Kuwait would propose the measure itself at the Vienna OPEC meeting next week. "Kuwait is willing to consider any proposal supported by a majority of members," he said.

The OAPEC ministers at Saturday's meeting did not discuss oil prices or production quotas - the domain of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries which includes non-Arab state members. OAPEC, separate from the older OPEC, was set up to promote and coordinate developments in the Arab oil industry.

"It was close to an administrative meeting, keeping in mind this is a very political issue and very tense times," said one source close to the OAPEC discussions.

OAPEC Secretary-General Abdul Aziz al Turki read a statement after the meeting saying OAPEC headquarters would be moved from Kuwait city to Cairo at the beginning of January. But, the organization has already been operating out of Jeddah, Saudi Arabia and Cairo since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

The statement also said the ministers agreed to maintain the Baghdad-based Arab Oil Training Institute's $3.5 million budget until a 1991 budget can be approved.

Observers said the move was an effort by OAPEC members not to close the institute, but not to promote it either. The multi-million dollar facility trains Arab nationals for jobs in the oil industry.

All ten members - the United Arab Emirates, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Kuwait, Qatar, Iraq, Libya, Algeria, Syria, and Egypt - sent their oil ministers or delegates to the conference. Iraq was represented by its ambassador to Cairo and occupied Kuwait was represented by Kuwaiti oil minister Ameeri.

The Kuwaiti minister-in-exile repeated charges at his news conference that Iraqis had looted Kuwait's oil equipment and reiterated the emirate's government did not want to give up "even an inch" of Kuwaiti territory to Iraq. He estimated Iraqi damage to Kuwaiti oil facilities at $5 billion and repeated that Kuwait would ask Iraq for compensation for the damages.

Egyptian Oil Minister Abdel Hadi Qandil, current president of OAPEC, presided over the meeting.

MOSCOW (DEC. 8) UPI - Moscow's deputy mayor said Saturday that foreign economic help will be needed "at least until spring," especially for Russia's big industrial cities which are suffering from shortages of food and other supplies.

Sergei Stankevich also told a news conference that despite the need for aid, the Soviet Union is not Ethiopia and the capital is not on the verge of famine.

"Foodstocks are enough in Moscow to guarantee there will not be a situation as in Ethiopia," he said. "That is why I try to avoid terms like famine, civil war, and food riots."

The deputy mayor said 200 tons of medicines, baby food, dry milk, and other foodstuffs had arrived from different countries, and four airplanes with supplies landed from Germany Friday night.

Observers have blamed slow adaptation to market economy, an outdated transportation and a breakdown in distribution for the shortages. Stankevich indicated he did not expect a dramatic improvement in supplies in the near future. "At least until spring, economic aid is extremely necessary in Moscow, Ryazansk, Leningrad, and other industrial areas of Russia," he said.

Stankevich reiterated that nine regions that always supplied milk suddenly halted deliveries this winter, causing shortages of 100,000 tons of milk. "This was reason enough for Moscow to require international aid," he said.

The daily Izvestia government newspaper said Saturday the capital had enough milk only for 2 1/2 days. It said on Dec. 5, planned deliveries for Moscow were 2,240 tons, while supplies delivered only 1,500 tons.

Stankevich, who quit the Communist Party this year, also charged that political motives might also be behind the shortages with conservatives preventing supplies from getting to Moscow.

But this summer Stankevich and his boss, Mayor Gavriil Popov, limited shopping in Moscow's stores to residents of Moscow, setting off howls of protests who come from other cities to buy food in the capital. Stankevich said in the capital of nine million people, there were 1.2 million low-income people, of whom 500,000 are in need of urgent aid.

The Soviet capital, however, is also packed with officials and bureaucrats, and has always been a place of relative plenty in the country. Official Soviet television Saturday night the distribution system was "paralyzed."

(DEC. 8) UPI - President Bush flies to Washington this afternoon to end a trip to South America where he has tried to promote political and economic development. His last stop is Venezuela... which already has what Bush is trying to promote. Venezuela has a strong democracy and a healthy economy, although since it is based on oil it could be vulnerable. Bush is in Caracas to thank President Carlos Andres Perez for backing U-S policy in the Persian Gulf.

The United States is trying to arrange transportation out of Iraq and Kuwait for Americans trapped there since the Persian Gulf crisis began in August. Iraq says they are free to go, but has not said exactly when and how. Cable News Network says Baghdad insists they leave only on Iraqi airliners. The network says Iraq refused landing permission to a British airplane sent to pick up British hostages.

Three years ago this weekend a Palestinian uprising called the ''intifada'' began in the territories occupied by Israel. 625 Palestinians have been killed by soldiers since then. Palestinians have proclaimed general strikes to mark the anniversary. Israeli authorities in turn imposed curfews on Palestinian communities.

The shuttle Columbia astronauts have been studying distant objects- stars and galaxies giving off X-rays and ultra-violet light. Today they will try to spot something closer- NASA's Galileo spaceprobe that will come about 21-hundred miles from Columbia's path. Galileo was launched in October 1989, has been in the neighborhood of Venus and should be flung toward Jupiter by today's encounter with Earth's gravity.

Just one witness appeared yesterday before the Senate committee which is considering ethics charges against five senators. She was Arizona Governor Rose Mofford, a character witness for Senator Dennis DeConcini . Mofford said DeConcini ''has an excellent reputation.'' She says the savings and loan he tried to help was important to Arizona's economy and that its operator, Charles Keating, was NOT considered a villain when DeConcini tried to help.

The Philippines most militant unions have scheduled a general strike Monday to protest the increased prices for oil. The unions hope to force the Manila government to roll back the price increases. Security officials in Manila warned rebels, both left and right, NOT to try to exploit the situation. Communist guerrillas in October backed another general strike by burning buses and bombing gasoline stations.

There is a place in Central Park in Manhattan called Strawberry Fields, named for a John Lennon song. It will have a special significance today- the 10th anniversary of Lennon's murder. MIAMI (DEC. 8) UPI - A Drug Enforcement Administration informant may be responsible for turning over the taped jailhouse telephone conversations of deposed Panamanian leader Manuel Noriega to the Cable News Network.

The FBI probe into the leak is focusing on Jose Blandon, a political opponent of Noriega's who may be called upon to testify against the deposed dictator, The Miami Herald reported Saturday, citing anonymous sources.

Broadcast of the tapes last month by the network, including one that contained conversations between Noriega and his attorney's office, triggered a court battle over CNN's right to publish versus Noriega's right to a fair trial.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler determined there was nothing in the tapes that if published would jeopardize Noriega's right to a fair trial and transcripts of the tapes were released Thursday.

CNN has refused to say how its reporter in Panama obtained the tapes. Prison officials as a matter of policy record the telephone conversations of all inmates, except those between the prisoner and his attorneys which are protected by attorney-client privilege.

Since his incarceration in the Metropolitan Correctional Center near Miami in January following his surrender to U.S. military forces in Panama, Noriega has spent up to ten hours a day on the telephone. Between Feb. 1 and Nov. 8, Noriega made some 1,400 calls, the newspaper reported.

The Drug Enforcement Administration subpoenaed 162 tapes in its efforts to obtain more evidence against Noriega and asked Blandon, whose testimoney to a Miami federal grand jury helped obtain the 1988 drug-trafficking indictment against Noriega, to review 22 of the tapes.

The deposed dictators conversations were filled with code words that the DEA hoped Blandon could help crack. "He was asked to listen to the tapes," a source said. "He also would know the code words Noriega was using." Investigators felt Noriega "was obviously moving money around," the source told the newspaper.

Noriega's attorneys have filed affidavits with the court saying the general is indigent because the U.S. government has had his bank accounts frozen here and elsewhere on the grounds the money was obtained from drug profits.

While the FBI, DEA, and U.S. attorney's office in Miami refused to confirm that Blandon was the target of the probe, another source said the FBI searched Blandon's home in Houston Thursday night looking for phone logs and documents.

"It's an FBI investigatin in which we have cooperated 100 percent and we have absolutely no information as to the findings," Thomas Cash, special agent in charge of the DEA's Miami field division said.

"The prosecutors will not discuss any matter involving search warrants, grand jury matters or evidence gathered in this or any other investigation," said Diane Cossin, a spokeswoman for the U.S. attorney's office in Miami.

Blandon, a onetime senior intelligence officer in Panama and former consul-general in New York, told a U.S. Senate committe in 1988 that his former boss protected U.S.-bound cocaine shipments for the Medellin cartel. Blandon was viewed as a key prosecutin witness before others involved in the scheme began cooperating with the U.S. government.

On Thursday, Lt. Col. Luis del Cid, believed to be Noriega's right-hand man in Panama and a co-defendant, pleaded guilty and agreed to testify against Noriega.

In court documents filed Friday, assistant U.S. attorneys Norman Moscowitz and Sonya O'Donnell confirmed that the DEA had studied the Noriega phone calls and had asked an unnamed assistant to review them as well. The attorneys said nothing was found that would prove useful at trial and the examination was halted in August.

It is not known how Blandon obtained the tapes, but sources told the newspaper Blandon played portions of those tapes for two officials of the Panamanian government in a Miami hotel room in March.

Noriega's attorneys have filed a defense motion with Hoeveler asking that the indictment be dismissed on the grounds the government eavesdropped on a privileged attorney-client phone call, froze Noriega's money so he couldn't pay for his defense and tried to entrap his attorneys with a bribery offer.

In the prosecution's response filed on Friday, U.S. attorneys said the defense provided no evidence on the bribery charge and the government was acting in good faith to unfreeze some money that could be used to pay Noriega's attorneys fees.

(DEC. 8) UPI - The semi-official Middle East News Agency says high-level meetings between the United States and Iraq will begin in the second half of December. The report in Cairo quotes high-ranking diplomatic sources in Baghdad as saying the talks with culminate in a visit to the Iraqi capital by Secretary of State Baker in the first week of January. That's just a week before the January 15th deadline set for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait. There is NO official confirmation of the report.

Iraq has indicated that it will allow only chartered Iraqi jetliners to carry freed foreign hostages out of the country. Iraq refused to allow a British Airways plane to land in Baghdad, forcing it to land in Amman, Jordan, instead. U-S officials say they are prepared to use chartered Iraqi planes to fly Americans out of Iraq. The United States also departed from its previous diplomatic stance on the Embassy in Kuwait, saying it will vacate the facility after all U-S hostages are allowed to leave the occupied emirate.

NEW YORK (DEC. 9) UPI - Jurors Saturday scrutinized the videotaped confession of one of two youths on trial for raping and beating a woman jogger, watching his graphic account of the violence in 15 minute segments.

In its ninth day of deliberations, the panel at state Supreme Court in Manhattan sent a note to Justice Thomas Galligan asking to see again the first of two videotapes made by Kharey Wise. Jurors asked to view the 105-minute tape in 15-minute segments and deliberate in between.

Wise, 18, and Kevin Richardson, 16, allegedly joined as many as 30 youths who roamed Central Park in a violent crime spree on April 19, 1989. Police say the pack of youths attacked nine victims - the most seriously injured a 30-year-old investment banker who was gang raped, beaten into a coma and left for dead in a muddy gully.

Wise and Richardson are charged with attempted murder and rape in the attack on the woman. Three other youths last summer were convicted of rape, assault and lesser charges but aquitted of attempted murder in the attack.

Wise made two videotapes during questioning by authorities. In the first, he says he witnessed the attack on the woman but said he was hiding behind a tree and never participated himself.

In the second, he admits he was involved in the attack. He says he was ''playing with her leg'' while another youth raped her.

The prosecutor's most powerful tools in the trial consist of that tape and Richardson's videotaped statements. In his videotape, Richardson admits getting scratched by the woman, but claims he was trying to stop the attack.

Richardson is free on $25,000 bail. Wise has been held at Rikers Island on $50,000 bail since his arrest days after the attack.

As the five-man, seven-woman jury entered its second weekend of deliberation, the lawyers, reporters and the families of the youths milled about the hallways, waiting for a verdict. Scrabble games, playing cards and stacks of Christmas cards dotted the benches in the courtroom as observers whiled away the long, tense hours.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (DEC. 9) UPI - The Galileo probe streaked past Earth Saturday, snapping spectacular photos as it zoomed just 600 miles above the Atlantic in the first of two such historic flybys needed to put the craft on course for distant Jupiter .

''Galileo just completed a virtually perfect Earth gravity assist,'' project manager William O'Neil said at a news conference. ''We hit our target altitude within 5 miles and our arrival time within a half a second. That's not bad for a 14-month trip over two thirds of a billion miles.''

Nine minutes after close approach, the robotic explorer passed about 2,495 miles above the shuttle Columbia over the Pacific Ocean west of Chile, but it was not immediately known if the ship's crew was able to see the unmanned craft, which would have appeared as a fast-moving, very dim ''star.''

''Even if we can't see it, it's nice to know it's (flying) by us and doing its job well,'' astronaut Jeffrey Hoffman radioed mission control in Houston before the flyby.

NASA did not have a booster powerful enough to fire Galileo directly to Jupiter. Instead, the probe was launched from the shuttle Atlantis on Oct. 18, 1989, and fired to Venus for an Oct. 10, 1990, flyby that whipped the craft back to Earth for Saturday's encounter.

With its state-of-the-art instruments gathering data about Earth and the moon, the $1.5 billion Galileo passed about 594 miles above the Atlantic Ocean east of Florida at 3:35 p.m. EST, using Earth's gravity to whip it into a new orbit boosting the probe's velocity by 11,620 mph - from 67,240 mph to 78,860 mph - fast enough to fly around the world more than three times in a single hour.

Elated scientists unveiled two extremely sharp photographs taken Saturday by Galileo, one of the Earth and one of the moon, giving researchers a hint of the wealth of information they can expect when they sift through all the data recorded by the probe during the flyby.

Astronomer Carl Sagan said scientists eventually hoped to assemble Galileo's photos into a movie, showing Earth ''rotating before us, sitting in the blackness of space.''

Earth flyby No. 1 put Galileo into a new two-year orbit around the sun that will carry the spacecraft past the asteroid Gaspra in October 1991 and back to Earth in exactly two years, on Dec. 8, 1992.

''This is the first time any spacecraft has returned to fly by the Earth after visiting another planet,'' O'Neil said of Galileo's flyby Saturday. ''We are now on our way to Gaspra.''

The second Earth flyby, at an altitude of just 200 miles above South Africa, will boost Galileo's velocity to 87,190 mph and change its orbit once again, putting the craft on course for a 1995 encounter with Jupiter, some 480 million miles away.

''The whole reason that we launched Galileo to Venus and received a gravity assist from Venus was to cause Galileo to fly past the Earth today,'' O'Neil said. ''The final gravity assist from Earth will put Galileo in a direct trajectory to Jupiter.''

Former astronaut Michael McCulley, who served as Atlantis's co-pilot for Galileo's deployment, congratulated the engineers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., saying the mission was a tribute to their ingenuity.

''It was a great spacecraft when we turned it loose and it's obviously still a great spacecraft,'' he said Saturday.

The process of ''stealing'' energy from the gravity of Venus and Earth is analogous to a parent pushing a child on a swing. With each push, the swing carries the child higher. Likewise, with each planetary encounter, Galileo's velocity will be ''pumped up'' in a carefully controlled manner.

As it closes in on Jupiter in the summer of 1995, Galileo will drop a probe into the planet's stormy atmosphere before going into orbit for a 20-month tour, humanity's first long-term study of the solar system's largest planet.

Sailing through a ballet of ever-changing orbits, Galileo's electronic ears and eyes will study Jupiter's atmosphere, its whirling moons and its space environment in exquisite detail, beaming back close- up photographs 20 to 1,000 times better than the spectacular pictures taken by the Voyager probes.

NASA originally intended to fire Galileo directly to Jupiter using a hydrogen-fueled Centaur rocket, but the program was canceled in the wake of the Challenger disaster, forcing mission planners to rely instead on a less-powerful solid-fuel ''inertial upper stage'' booster.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (DEC. 9) UPI - The Columbia astronauts might end their glitch-plagued astronomy flight Monday, one day early, because of a clogged line keeping them from flushing the contents of the ship's septic tank into space, officials said Saturday.

''The plumbing's stopped up and there is no Roto-Rooter,'' chief flight director Randy Stone told reporters.

Flight director Granvil Pennington said late Saturday the mission would last at least nine days, which would result in a landing Monday, and if work to find additional storage space for the shuttle's waste water is successful, the astronauts could get in a full-duration 10-day flight.

''We can guarantee you waste water capability of nine ... days,'' astronaut Story Musgrave radioed the crew from mission control in Houston. ''We might be able to get you out to a 10 (day) mission. But right now we're guaranteeing, in terms of waste water, a nine (day mission).''

''Well Story, we appreciate you guys working so hard getting us the full mission,'' replied astronaut John ''Mike'' Lounge. ''Hope we can do that.''

Material already in the shuttle's waste storage tank was flushed into a rubber bag in the crew module and Columbia's seven astronauts were ordered to stop using the ship's toilet for urination and to instead use plastic bags called ''urine collection devices,'' or UCDs. The waste water is normally flushed into space.

''To preserve all the waste water volume that we have, we'd like you to go on the male UCDs now, you've got 54 of them available,'' Musgrave told the crew. ''And we do recommend using each bag as often as you think is reasonable to fill the bag up.''

On board are Lounge, 44, commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42, Robert Parker, 53, Jeffrey Hoffman, 46, and civilian astronomers Ronald Parise 39, and Samuel Durrance, 47.

Landing originally was scheduled at 9:46 p.m. PST Tuesday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. Bringing the crew home a day early would result in a landing at 9:53 p.m. PST Monday.

The blocked waste water line was the latest in a series of glitches to threaten a long-awaited flight to study the most violent stars and galaxies in the universe with a $150 million battery of telescopes sensitive to X-rays and ultraviolet light.

After working around two failed computers, a broken data recorder and problems getting a $50 million telescope pointing system up and running, the ''Astro-1'' astronomy mission was finally in high gear when the waste water problem cropoped up Saturday.

Project officials said the astronauts were on track to have observed 160 to 170 of a planned 200 targets in a full-duration 10-day mission. Despite the threat of an early end to the 38th shuttle mission, astronomers on Earth were understanding.

''We feel now things are going very well and we would be very disappointed (about an early landing),'' said astronomer Warren Moos. ''But ... if there's something that endangers the spacecraft, there's simply no choice.''

In the meantime, the astronauts pressed on with around-the-clock observations.

''Now that we are finally up and running, I think we're going to be getting some really great data,'' said astronomer Frank Marshall. ''We're really looking forward to every day we have remaining in the mission.''

The problem came to light early Saturday when the astronauts attempted to dump the contents of their waste water tank overboard. Data showed the line was at least partially blocked and attempts to blow air through the line to clear it out were not successful.

The waste water tank measures 35.5 inches long by 15.5 inches wide and weighs 165 pounds. It is used throughout a shuttle flight to store waste water from the shuttle's toilet and and to collect humidity removed from the crew cabin air supply.

''The crew is in absolutely no danger,'' Stone said. ''We have a logistical problem with dealing with waste water aboard the orbiter. It's at worst an inconvenience and it could potentially shorten the flight. But there is absolutely no hazard to the crew with this situation.''

The tank was 66 percent full when the problem was discovered and without taking any action, it would be full by Sunday morning. By using a rubberized nylon bag to supplement the normal tank, the crew can get 60 hours of operation out of the tanks, not counting the use of the UCDs.

MADRID, Spain (DEC. 9) UPI - A car bomb believed planted by Basque separatists exploded Saturday near a soccer stadium, killing six police officers and injuring at least nine other people, the Barcelona Civil Governor's office said.

The police were killed while on their way to crowd control duty at the stadium in Sabadell, an industrial town just north of Barcelona, officials said.

The car bomb, a red Citroen with its trunk packed with explosives, was detonated as the police drove past, the officials said.

Four officers were killed instantly by the blast and two others died shortly after being pulled from the wreckage, officials said.

Three other police officers and six other people on their way to the game also were injured, officials said.

No immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing was made, but authorities said the attack had the hallmark of the Basque separatist organization ETA.

ETA, which represents a small minority of Basques who live mainly in four northern Spanish provinces, has been using car bombs as its main weapon against government forces in its fight for independence for the Basque region.

Two policemen were killed in a similar ambush three weeks ago while they were returning from crowd duty at a soccer match near Bilbao.

Police also speculated that the explosion was designed to disrupt preparations for the 1992 Olympic Games to be held in Barcelona.

The Basque separatists announced in June that they planned such attacks throughout Spain in advance of three major international events set for 1992, the Olympics, the World's Fair at Seville and the celebration of the 500th anniversary of Columbus's voyage to America.

The separatists also said they planned to blow up rail lines in advance of these events.

(DEC. 8) UPI - U-S Trade Representative Carla Hills says there is- her words here- ''NO guarantee'' that the collapsed world trade talks will resume next month in Geneva, Switzerland. Hills told United Press International at the Brussels airport in Belgium that there is NO reason to resume the talks unless progress is possible. The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade negotiations involve 107 nations. The discussions collapsed in turmoil yesterday in a bitter dispute over agricultural subsidies.

There still is NO word on the exact dates of the Iraq-U-S talks on the Persian Gulf crisis. But the semi-official Middle East News Agency reported in Cairo today that high-ranking diplomatic sources told it that the Iraqi foreign minister will visit Washington, D-C, in the last half of December. The report says American Secretary of State Baker will fly to Baghdad in the first week of January.

There is NO confirmation today of word yesterday from former Texas Governor John Connally, who told his wife in a telephone call that he was returning to Houston with a number of newly freed American hostages. Connally flew to Baghdad with Coastal Corporation Chairman Oscar Wyatt. Nellie Connally said the short phone call from her husband did NOT include many details.

Libya charged today that the United States has taken 200 Libyan prisoners of war from Chad and flown them to an unknown destination. The official Libyan news agency charged that the United States is going to use the Libyan troops are hostages- quoting now- ''to achieve political ends.'' There is NO indication of what those plans involve. The report also charged that 17 of the Libyan P-O-W's were executed because they refused to board U-S planes for the evacuation. The report does NOT say how the United States got control of the prisoners.

(DEC. 8) UPI - The official Iraq News Agency reported today that Iraq told the United States that it wants to send Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz to Washington, D-C, on December 17th. The report says the Iraqis also proposed that Secretary of State Baker meet with Iraqi officials in Baghdad on January 12th... just three days before the deadline set by the U-N Security Council for Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait. The report says the dates differ from those perferred by the United States, but it does NOT specify the American dates.

The I-N-A dispatch also quoted Iraqi officials as saying the Iraqi delegation to the talks would be committed to the nation's rights, including what it termed ''its rights in the governorate of Kuwait.'' And once again, the Iraqis are calling for a ''dialogue'' in the discussions, and the statement again linked the Palestinian question to the Persian Gulf situation.

President Bush is wrapping up his South American visit in Venezuela today. At a news confernce in Caracas, Bush told reporters that the release of hostages from Iraq and Kuwait does NOT reduce the chance of war in the Persian Gulf. Bush said that in fact, the release of the hostages eliminates one worry from the planning for a military offensive. Bush reiterated that he wants a peaceful solution to the Gulf crisis but added that- quoting now- ''I don't feel we are closer to a peaceful solution.''

Libya is accusing the United States of forcibly airlifting Libyans out of Chad and it charged that 17 Libyan prisoners of the Chadian civil war were executed for refusing to board U-S planes. The official Libyan news agency says the American planes carried the Libyan P-O-W's to an undisclosed location. It says the Libyan foreign secretary plans to fly to Lagos, Nigeria, to hold talks on returning the prisoners. But the report does NOT specifically say that the P-O-W's have been flown to Nigeria.

The commander of Philippine security forces for the Manila region is warning left- and right-wing rebels against trying to exploit a general strike called for Monday by militant trade unions. The walkout has been called to protest a more than 45 percent increase in petroleum prices in the Philippines. The Filipino military chief says special operating units of police are ready to block any attempts to use the strike to destabilize the Philippines government.

NO special commemoration is planned today in New York City to mark the 10th anniversary of the slaying of former Beatle John Lennon. But a city Parks Department official says that by custom, fans of Lennon and his music gather in the two and one-half-acre ''Strawberry Fields'' garden created in Central Park by Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono. Others are expected to gather outside the West Side apartment building where Lennon was shot to death by Mark David Chapman, a former mental patient who is serving a 20-year to life sentence in an upstate New York prison.

TYRE, Lebanon (DEC. 9) UPI - Thousands of Palestinians demonstrated Saturday in southern Lebanon to commemorate the third anniversary of the uprising in the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Some 40,000 Palestinians including women, children and elderly marched through the streets of the port city of Tyre, 46 miles south of Beirut, denouncing the Israeli ''oppressive measures'' in the occupied territories.

The demonstrators, raising Palestinian and Lebanese flags, chanted anti-Israeli and anti-U.S. slogans and called on the United Nations to ensure the protection of West Bank and Gaza residents.

PLO representative in Lebanon Zeid Wehbeh handed a memorandum to the commander of the United Nations Interim Force In Lebanon, calling for ''an international protection of the Palestinians and the implementation of all Security Council resolutions.''

Earlier Saturday, Palestinian guerrillas attacked a position of the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army at the edge of the border zone but no casualties were reported.

The ''Voice of the South'' radio station, which is run by the Israeli-backed SLA, said SLA militiamen and guerrillas exchanged machine gun fire and rocket-propelled grenades near the Zumrayeh gate at the edge of the Israeli self-declared ''security zone.''

The radio said following a 30-minute clash, SLA militiamen combed the area and found machine guns and blood stains on the ground.

The Syrian-backed breakaway Al Fatah Uprising Movement headed by Saeed Mousa, known for his nom de guerre Abu Mousa, claimed responsibility for the attack.

The group said in a communique that ''the operation was carried out to celebrate the start of the fourth year of the uprising in Palestine.''

The communique said all members of the attacking force returned safely to their base.

Al Fatah Uprising claimed responsibility for a series of bombings in Jerusalem and the West bank in 1984 and 1985.

Abu Mousa broke away from the mainstream Al Fatah movement of PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat in 1983 and allied himself with Syria.

After Israel withdrew the bulk of its troops from Lebanon in 1985, it established the ''security zone'' to prevent cross border attacks. The 9-to-15-mile buffer zone is patrolled by Israeli troops and the SLA.

(DEC. 8) UPI - A Coastal Corporation spokesman in Houston says former Texas Governor John Connally and Coastal Chairman Oscar Wyatt are on their way back to the United States with as many as 34 newly freed Iraqi hostages. A Connally spokesman says the pair left Baghdad today with the hostages aboard a plane owned by Coastal, which formerly was one of Iraq's largest oil customers.

In Baghdad, the official Iraq News Agency says officials are proposing that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz visit Washington on December 17th to meet with President Bush. The report says the Iraqis also are proposing that Secretary of State Baker fly to Baghdad on January 12th to meet with Saddam Hussein. The report says the date are NOT those preferred by the United States.

President Bush was questioned about the Persian Gulf crisis at a news conference today in Caracas, where he is wrapping up his week-long visit to South America in Venezuela. Bush said the release of hostages from Iraq and Kuwait does NOT reduce the chance of war in the region. He says he does NOT feel the region is closer to peace because Iraq still is insisting that Kuwait is a province of Iraq.

But at the same time, a chartered flight left Baghdad with 41 Japanese nationals aboard... the first hostages to be released under the order to free all foreign nationals from Iraq and Kuwait. The release was reported by the semi-official Middle East News Agency.

NASA reported this morning that the shuttle Columbia mission could be cut short because of a clogged water line. A spokesman says the crew members-reporting good progress on their astronomy mission despite computer failures-tried to clear the line by blowing air through it, but the attempt failed.

A senior Bush administration official says the United States and the Soviet Union are very close to an agreement on a historic treaty to reduce strategic nuclear weapons. But the official says the sheer complexity of the question prevents anyone from flatly predicting that a final break-through will come at talks in Houston on Monday and Tuesday.

Witnesses reported today that an apparent bomb blast destroyed a crowded bus in the capital of Sichuan province in central China, killing at least two people and possibly many more. Some reports put the death toll at 30 in the blast, which flew the top off the bus and shattered windows in the vicinity.

Indonesian authorities say a helicopter carrying 12 people exploded and crashed on a shuttle flight to an American oil rig in the South China Sea. They say the crash killed four people and left six others missing.

The Israeli military maintained curfews in dozens of Arab communities in the occupied territories today, as Arabs closed their shops to mark the two-month anniversary of the violence that rocked Temple Mount in Jerusalem. At least 19 Palestinians were killed by Israeli security forces in the outburst.

CHICAGO (DEC. 9) UPI - Two private planes hit each other in mid-air near Joliet Saturday afternoon, damaging at least one but causing no injuries, aviation and fire officials said.

Both were single-engine planes. One landed at Frankfort Airport, just west of Joliet, and the other landed at Lockport Lewis Airport, north of Joliet, officials said.

The names of the pilots were not available.

The accident happened at about 1:30 p.m., said Charles Reed, a Frankfort firefighter and paramedic. He said the plane that landed at Frankfort suffered damage to its tail section, indicating it may have been hit from above.

It was not known if the other craft was damaged. Romeoville firefighters, who respond to calls from Lewis Lockport, said they were not notified of any accident.

FAA officials said they would investigate the report.

(DEC. 8) UPI - Iraq today proposed that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz meet with President Bush on December 17th. And they said Secretary of State Baker should meet with Saddam Hussein on January 12th in Baghdad. That's just three days before the U-N Security Council deadline for Iraq to get out of Kuwait.

The State Department advised Americans in Iraq and Kuwait to ''stay where you are,'' indicating that those who are in hiding should remain out of sight. But British officials advised their nationals in the two countries to come out of hiding and report to Iraqi authorities for their release.

President Bush told reporters in Caracas, Venezuela, that the hostage release ordered by Saddam does NOT reduce the threat of war in the Persian Gulf because Iraq still refuses to withdrawal from Kuwait.

The State Department says it provided transportation for Libyans soldiers who were captured during the Chadian civil war and did NOT want to return to their homeland. A spokesman says the Libyans are heading for various countries.

Earlier, Libya charged that the United States had kidnapped Libyan P- O-W's and was holding them hostage.

(DEC. 8) UPI - The official Soviet news agency says the date of the super-power summit scheduled for January may have to be changed because of developments in the Persian Gulf crisis.

Iraq today proposed that Foreign Secretary Tariq Aziz meet with President Bush on December 17th and that Secretary of State Baker visit Baghdad on January 12th... three days before the U-N deadline for an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

Sources in Cairo report that the Organization of Arab Petroleum Exporting Countries decided against suspending Iraqi membership today and to continue the group's training institute in Baghdad. The meeting of the 10 Arab oil-exporting states is expected to set the tone for a full meeting of the OPEC oil cartel in Vienna on Monday.

The deputy mayor of Moscow says foreign help will be needed ''at least until spring'' because of shortages of food and other supplies. The official says help will be needed especially in the big industrial cities of the Soviet Union and that 200 tons of supplies had arrived in the Soviet capital last night.

(DEC. 8) UPI - President Bush says the Iraqi decision to release all foreign hostages makes the decision to use force against Iraq in Kuwait easier. Bush told reporters in Caracas, Venezuela, that military planners will NOT have to worry about hitting their own people in any attack. As Bush spoke, the first group of foreign nationals released under the everyone- out order boarded a chartered Iraqi airliner. The semi-official Middle East News Agency said 41 Japanese nationals left Baghdad for home.

Also in Baghdad, the official Iraq News Agency said officials proposed that Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz meet with President Bush on December 17th in Washington. The Iraqis also proposed that Secretary of State Baker fly to Baghdad on January 12th for his meeting with Saddam Hussein. The report says the dates are NOT those preferred by the United States but it did NOT specify what the U-S proposal was.

A senior Bush administration official says nobody is flatly predicting a final break-through next week in the talks to reduce strategic nuclear weapons. Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze will meet in Houston on Monday and Tuesday to work on the historic agreement. But the senior official said the issue is so complex that NO one wants to predict that the treaty will be settled.

In Moscow today, the official Soviet news agency reported that the super-power summit scheduled for January may have to be delayed because of the Persian Gulf crisis. The new agency says developments in the Persian Gulf could occupy American officials to such an extent that preparations for the summit could NOT be made. It says the situation will be discussed when Baker and Shevardnadze meet in Houston on Monday and Tuesday.

The Galileo space probe swooped past the Earth today, taking spectacular pictures as it zoomed by about 600 miles above the Atlantic Ocean. It was the first of two historic fly-bys needed to put Galileo on a course for Jupiter. Project managers say mission controllers were within five miles of their target altitude and one-half second of the arrival time for the fly-by.

The news from the shuttle Columbia was NOT as good. The return of the shuttle and its seven-man crew likely will be one day earlier than planned because of a problem with a water line.

The State Department says the United States provided transportation to Libyan prisoners of war in Chad who did NOT want to return home. Department spokesman Dave Denny described the move as a ''humanitarian gesture,'' but did NOT say how many Libyans were involved or where they were taken. Earlier today, Libya accused Washington of flying Libyans out of Chad by force. Libya also claims 17 Libyans were executed for refusing to leave.

(DEC. 8) UPI - Iraq wants Secretary of State Baker to meet with Saddam Hussein January 12th, just three days before a U-N deadline for Iraq to withdrawal from Kuwait or be forced out. Iraq's official news agency also described dates proposed by Washington as ''NOT suitable.'' IRNA did NOT, however, say what dates the Bush administration is suggesting. In Washington, the State Department says the dates for talks between U-S and Iraqi officials are- quote- ''still under discussion.''

The Columbia astronauts are contending with yet another problem that may result in their ending the mission one day earlier than planned. NASA says a clogged line is keeping the astronauts from flushing the contents of the ship's septic tank into space. (DEC. 8) UPI - President Bush says Iraqi moves to free foreigners held hostage in Iraq and occupied Kuwait will make it easier to go to war against Iraq. However, Bush says war remains an option as long as Iraqi troops remain in Kuwait.

MOSCOW (DEC. 9) - Soviet officials are admitting massive problems in shipping goods throughout the country, with bottlenecks at warehouses, railroad terminals and ports hurting the distribution of thousands of tonnes of goods, Pravda reported Sunday.

The communist party paper cited Nikolai Gavryushin, head of the the Soviet railways department for container and commerical traffic as describing the situation as ''catastrophic''.

He told the newspaper that ''20,000 containers and 300 railway wagons with consumer goods and industrial equipment were standing unloaded at Moscow's freight railway stations''.

Goods with a total weight of 23,500 tonnes ''were buried'' at some warehouses, Gavryushin said. Amid a shortage of trucks and drivers, only one-fifth of cargoes were being moved.

The newspaper said that 101 wagons with meat brought mainly from abroad had been standing at the Moscow Tovarnaya station since November 25.

''One of the reasons given for freight congestion is a shortage of storage facilities,'' Pravda said. ''All warehouses of trading establishments are packed to capacity.

''On the other hand, shop shelves are empty.'' Pravda said. The paper said the reasons for the situation should be asked of ''the leaders of the Moscow city council who have been carried away with rallies and meetings''.

DUBLIN (DEC. 9) - A majority of Irish citizens are favorable to a constitutional reform which would end the republic's ban on divorce, according to a poll published by the Sunday Independent in Dublin.

A majority also backed a renunciation of the republic's claim of sovereignty over Northern Ireland, which is included in the country's 1937 constitution and which has been a constant source of conflict with protestants in Ulster.

The poll showed that 56 per cent of Irish citizens wanted divorce legalized, against 38 per cent opposed and six per cent undecided. Irish voters decisively rejected a referendum four years ago proposing to permit divorce.

Prime Minister Charles Haughey, whose Fianna Fail party was defeated in presidential elections last month, promised last week to present a draft law which could lead to the legalization of divorce.

New Irish President Mary Robinson, a liberal feminist lawyer, backed the right to divorce during her campaign.

Of those polled, 53 per cent supported replacing the constitutional claim of sovereignty over Northern Ireland, which is part of the United Kingdom, with a more general declaration of the unity of the Irish people; 29 per cent were opposed and 18 per cent undecided.

SEOUL (DEC. 9) - North Korea's prime minister is to arrive here Tuesday for a third round of talks in four months with his Southern counterpart in a bid to reach a rapprochement accord, but analysts here said the prospects were dim.

Yon Hyong-Muk is to travel from Pyongyang through the border truce village of Panmunjom with six delegates, a 33-member staff and 50-member press corps, and meet with South Korean Prime Minister Kang Young-Hoon Wednesday and Thursday.

At their last meeting in the North Korean capital in October, Mr. Kang refused Pyongyang's demand that the two sides immediately sign a joint non-aggression treaty.

Mr. Kang insisted the two feuding states should first sign a basic agreement of mutual recognition before taking on the issues of non-aggression, exchanges and cooperation.

The two Koreas opened prime ministerial talks here in September with the aim of discussing "the problems of solving political and military confrontations, and of executing multi-angled exchanges and cooperation."

When the two leaders met for the first time -- four decades after a bitter fratricidal war -- both called for joint efforts toward an early reunification of the divided Korean Peninsula in response to the yearning of 70 million people on either side of the border.

But amicable handshakes and eloquent dinner speeches failed to erase deep mutual distrust.

Mr. Kang argues that the North wants a non-aggression agreement that would compel the withdrawal of 40,000 U.S. troops stationed in the South, whom Seoul still views as a deterrent to a military attack from the North.

Washington is set to gradually withdraw some of the troops.

Some critics here accuse the South of backing down as the North is calling for the very non-aggression agreement that South Korean President Roh Tae-Woo proposed in a speech to the United Nations last year.

Dissidents here demand that the South sign the agreement promptly to allow progress in the current inter-Korean dialogue.

Ostensibly, the North Korean prime minister is to arrive in a more amicable atmosphere following exchanges of soccer teams and musical troupes in the last two months, in the professed conviction that such exchanges could pave the way for national unification.

DHAKA (DEC. 9) - Bangladesh's acting President Shahabuddin Ahmed is drawing fire after only three days in office for allegedly involving himself in deep-seated political controversies, opposition sources and observers said Sunday.

The 60-year-old chief justice, installed Thursday to head an interim caretaker government after the resignation of president Hussain Mohammad Ershad, passed his first official working day Saturday appointing advisors to help him and meeting the chiefs of the armed services.

But he also held meetings with major opposition politicians and visited the graves of Bangladesh's two assassinated presidents -- Sheikh Mujibur Rahman and General Ziaur Rahman -- who had played contoversial roles in the brief but turbulent history of Bangladesh.

Mr. Ahmed became the first president to fly to the remote village of Tungipara 100 kilometres (60 miles) south of here, where Bangladesh's founder president Sheikh Mujib was buried after being killed, together with most of his family, in a bloody August 15, 1975, coup.

A nationwide telecast of the visit showed the acting president flying by helicopter to the village and, with his personal military and civil staff behind him, laying a wreath at Sheikh Mujib's grave .

On his return to the capital, he also drove to the grave of General Zia, the former president who was assassinated on May 30, 1981 in an abortive coup, the television said.

Mr. Ahmed later said he had visited the graves to express his personal respect for the country's two former national leaders.

Sheikh Mujib was the father of Sheikh Hasina Wajed of the Awami League and Gen. Zia was the husband of the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP) leader Begum Khaleda Zia.

Both the Awami League and BNP were ruling parties under Sheikh Mujib and Gen. Zia respectively and are now the main contenders in the elections Mr. Ahmed is charged with organizing.

SYDNEY (DEC. 9) - Prime Minister Bob Hawke, celebrating his 61st birthday, was told by four of Australia's five leading Sunday newspapers that his deputy and Treasurer Paul Keating wants his job before the next election.

Renewed speculation about a likely leadership challenge followed a speech by Mr. Keating to a supposedly private press gallery dinner at the National Press Club in Canberra on Friday night.

A full account of the speech, in which Mr. Keating is reported to have specifically attacked the goverment's leadership, was said to have been given to journalists not at the dinner.

Only two weeks ago, Mr. Hawke and Mr. Keating firmly put down similar speculation that followed an opinion poll slump in the prime minister's personal popularity.

But front-page reports Sunday were much more definite, with banner headlines such as: "Keating Starts Leadership Run" or "Keating Renews Push to Be PM."

One Melbourne paper quoted sources "close to Mr. Keating" saying he was

"strengthening his statements in private that Australia needed a new leader to take the rough decisions rather than one based on popularity."

Mr. Keating, who was attending Labor centenary celebrations at Blackall in Queensland, could not be contacted for comment.

A spokesman for Mr. Hawke, who celebrated his birthday with his family in Canberra, said he would not comment either.

One report quoted Mr. Keating as saying Australia never had leadership of the calibre of three great U.S. leaders -- George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Franlin D. Roosevelt -- and that "it shows."

Although Mr. Keating did not mention Mr. Hawke's name, journalists at the dinner were said to have regarded the remark as a thinly veiled attack on his leadership abilities.

Mr. Keating's reported description of Mr. Hawke's hero, wartime prime minister John Curtin, as a "trier" was similarly regarded.

Mr. Keating said leadership was all about doing what was right and strong, not "tripping over TV cables in shopping centres trying to get their pictures in the media."

One of Mr. Hawke's most successful campaign tactics, used to his advantage in the last election in March this year, is his meet-the-people walks through shopping malls.

Mr. Hawke has said repeatedly that he would contest the next election, due in 1993.

But Labor's record low stakes in the opinion polls led to recent speculation that he might stand down before the next election to allow Mr. Keating to take over the leadership reins and try to improve Labor's electoral stocks.

One problem for Mr. Keating, however, is that his own popularity in the polls is lower even than Mr. Hawke's.

This is generally assumed in Labor circles to be because as treasurer for the last seven years Mr. Keating is always seen to be delivering the bad news.

But Communications Minister Kim Beazley's lead over Mr. Keating in popularity may also be forcing Mr. Keating to reconsider the leadership issue, although Mr. Beazley has said he would not challenge Mr. Keating in a future contest.

Mr. Keating, who was widely reported to have expected to be given the top job after the 1987 election, later reconciled himself to a few more years as treasurer after Mr. Hawke dug his heels in.

The Labor Party's long-term pollster said recently that its best chance of winning the next election would be with the existing leadership combination of Mr. Hawke and Mr. Keating.

The latest media reports have suggested Mr. Keating's renewed push has been spurred by the sudden death last week of his close associate, secretary to the Treasury Chris Higgins, 47.

Mr. Higgins' death "had brought home with a jolt the thought that life was short," said one report. Mr. Keating will be 47 next month.

LONDON (DEC. 9) - Two Iraqi Airways aircraft chartered by the Foreign Office will leave Baghdad Monday afternoon and probably Tuesday with hundreds of British subjects, a Foreign Office spokesman said on Sunday.

More than 1,100 Britons are still in Iraq and Kuwait, he noted.

The first plane, which might bring out around 350 Britons, is scheduled to depart at 1300 GMT on Monday, the spokesman said.

Two other special flights will be arranged on Tuesday from Kuwait to Baghdad to bring the approximately 440 Britons still in Kuwait to the Iraqi capital. The majority of them will then be taken to London on another Iraqi Airways aircraft, the same day if possible.

On Sunday, the Foreign Office again advised Britons in Iraq and Kuwait to make themselves known to the British embassies or consular officers, who will see to their departure.

It said that the majority of the 342 Britons who had been held at strategic sites in Iraq to help deter an attack on Iraq have now been transferred to the Iraqi capital.

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (DEC. 9) - Saudi Arabia will pay the United States at least two billion dollars by the end of the year to cover some of the cost of the U.S. military buildup here, a U.S. general said on Sunday.

Major General Gus Pagonis, deputy commander for logistics in Saudi Arabia, said the figure was "conservative" as it did not take into account supplies for extra troops being moved here. They will bring U.S. forces from the original deployment of 200,000 personnel to more than 400,000.

Maj. Gen. Pagonis said that since November 1, the Saudis were paying for all food and water, fuel, billeting of U.S. troops, construction and transport provided from Saudi Arabia itself.

He said he knew of two payments already made, one for 670 million dollars covering August, September and part of October.

Maj. Gen. Pagonis said the U.S. deployment, which was now as big an operation as Vietnam, had been facilitated by Saudi Arabia's road system, oil refineries military bases and ports, which were all built much bigger than warranted for the country's immediate needs.

There were numerous oil industry air strips in the desert which could be used by C-130 military transports to re-supply troops in case of war, he said.

Maj. Gen. Pagonis would not say if he could complete deployment of the fresh U.S. troops in time for a U.N. Security Council January 15 deadline authorising the use of force after then to push Iraqi troops out of Kuwait.

He said deployment of the first contingent had been achieved ahead of the timetable, but the new deployment was "a little bit different if only the fact that we're going to do it faster".

He added that regular North Atlantic Treaty Organisation exercises -- Reforger in Europe and Bright Star in South Korea -- had paid off, though they were nowhere near the scale of Operation Desert Shield here.

"No one has ever done it all at one time at this magnitude," he said. But if you're all trained, all you have to do is bring it together. It's a return on the investment in Reforger and Bright Star."

VIENNA (DEC. 9) - Albanian police broke up a demonstration in the Albanian capital on Sunday by students angry over a power failure in two student dormitories in Tirana, the Albanian news agency ATA reported.

The official news agency, in a rare report on unrest in Albania, said "some students attempted to exploit this discontent for political ends" and "provoked the forces of public order and assembled in violation of the law."

"In consequence the forces of public order were obliged to intervene to disperse them," ATA said. It did not say if anyone was injured when police broke up the demonstration.

ATA said that Education Minister Skener Gjinushi and the rector of their university held talks with the students, and that a special government commission would investigate the reasons for the power failure.

ATA did not provide any details on the number of demonstrators or their political demands.

Albania has practiced a rigid form of communism for the past 40 years and is the hardline Marxist state in Eastern Europea. It has implemented a policy of relative openness and liberalization since the beginning of the year.

The first parliamentary elections involving more than one candidate for a single post are to be held in February.

In July last year, several thousand Albanians took refuge in several embassies in the Albanian capital and were eventually allowed to leave the country.

WASHINGTON (DEC. 9) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker Sunday demanded that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein meet with him by early January at the latest, rejecting the January 12 date proposed by Iraq.

In an interview on the ABC television network, Mr. Baker labeled the January 12 date "basically unacceptable to us," stressing that if Iraq clung to that date, President George Bush would have to make a decision on the meeting's timing.

Mr. Baker said the January 12 Iraqi request simply was too close to the January 15 deadline for Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait. The United Nations has authorized the use of force against Iraq after that date if Baghdad has not complied with U.N. resolutions demanding its withdrawal.

"We will not be a party to circumventing the January 15 deadline," the U.S. secretary of state said. Mr. Baker reiterated that his visit to Iraq would not be to negotiate, but rather to demand Iraq's "complete withdrawal from Kuwait."

Iraq's U.N. ambassador Abdul Amir Anbari said earlier in an interview with the NBC television network that "it should not be a problem to find a suitable date" for the talks between Mr. Baker and Mr. Hussein. The Iraqi ambassador said differences were minor between the two countries on the timing of Mr. Baker's trip to the Iraqi capital and the visit of Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz to Washington.

Mr. Baker said in the same interview he was not aware of Iraq's construction of a new border line that would allow Iraq to withdraw from Kuwait while giving itself control over the contested Rumallah oil field.

The secretary of state said, however, that the United States and its allies would demand nothing short of a complete Iraqi withdrawal and that any other response would suggest that aggression does pay.

"After there is compliance (with U.N. resolutions demanding Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait), then Iraq and Kuwait can discuss their differences," Mr. Baker stressed. He added that he anticipated "some sort of a security arrangement" would be necessary in the future to safeguard against Baghdad's military superiority.

Mr. Baker cited as concerns Iraq's chemical weapons arsenal and its efforts to obtain nuclear weapons. In an interview Sunday with NBC, White House National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft emphasized the need to place "weapons of mass destruction under strict international supervision."

The U.S. secretary of state again rejected categorically any linkage of the Gulf crisis to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

He said that the United States therefore would not accept at this time a U.N. resolution before the Security Council that mentions a possible international conference on the Palestinian issue.

HYDERABAD, India (DEC. 9) - Troops were deployed in two cities Sunday after three days of violence left nearly 100 people dead in Hindu-Moslem clashes, Indian officials said.

A total of 67 died here in this capital of the southern state of Andhra Pradesh, including 10 killed in police shootings, officials said.

In the northern city of Aligarh, 11 more died, taking the toll up to 30, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said.

National television said security forces in Aligarh had been ordered to shoot on sight anyone resorting to violence.

The army was called out in Hyderabad and Aligarh, which is administered by Uttar Pradesh state, after renewed violence erupted despite an indefinite curfew in force since Friday. It was the worst outbreak of ethnic violence in Hyderabad in half a century.

PTI said about six of those killed in Aligarh were burnt alive in houses set on fire by mobs. A rash of bombings rocked Aligarh, the agency said, but gave no details.

Soldiers in armoured personnel carriers moved into Hyderabad's Moslem-majority old quarters after thousands of Hindus began fleeing their homes in panic following attacks by frenzied Moslem mobs overnight Saturday, officials said.

Sporadic incidents of violence were still reported to be continuing in the districts despite an indefinite curfew and the deployment of hundreds of police and paramilitary personnel, witnesses said.

"We are giving the city to the army in order to bring the situation under control," Andhra Pradesh state Chief Minister Chenna Reddy declared here at the end of an emergency meeting of his cabinet.

At least 57 people were killed here when thousands of Moslems poured into the streets late Saturday, attacking and looting Hindu homes and shops, witnesses and police said.

Many of the rioters went on a stabbing spree, dragging Hindus out of their homes and slashing them, virtually taking over the thickly-populated commerical and residential areas, police and witnesses said.

Dozens of homes and other buildings were also set on fire.

Police opened fire on the crowds in 18 places to quell the violence, killing 10 rioters. But the violence erupted again Sunday morning.

A seven-year-old Hindu girl, Saraswati, related how her father, a shopkeeper, was forced out of his house and stabbed to death on Saturday. "They (also) attacked my brother and mother with swords."

Residents said a mob torched a house elsewhere, and when two women tried to escape they were caught and pushed back into the fire.

More than 100 people were injured overnight, mostly from stabbing. Fifteen suffered bullet wounds when police opened fire. Some 30 people were injured Sunday in stabbings and police actions.

Hindus and Moslems live in roughly equal numbers in Hyderabad, which has a population of four million and is a reputed centre of learning and the arts. But Moslems outnumber the Hindus in the walled city, or the old quarters.

Police Commissioner Bhaskar Rao said the Moslem attack was a sequel to Wednesday's attack by Hindus on a Moslem politician, Majid Khan, who belongs to the influential Majlis Ittehadul-Muslimeen party. He survived the attack.

But others said it was in apparent retaliation for the Hindu attack on Moslems Friday in which 21 people died, and that the violence was linked to a Hindu-Moslem row over a religious site in the town of Ayodhya in northern India.

On Sunday, the Hindu-revivalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) pressed New Delhi to sack Mr. Reddy's administration and take direct control of the coastal province to check the "worsening law and order situation" here.

BAGHDAD (DEC. 9) - An advisor to former Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi arrived here Sunday with a message for President Saddam Hussein, the Iraqi News Agency reported.

It said Mr. Gandhi's note, delivered by Romich Bandari, covered bilateral relations and the situation in the Gulf.

Mr. Bandari is scheduled to stay in Baghdad "for several days," according to INA.

India last week hailed the prospect of direct U.S.-Iraqi talks to resolve the Gulf crisis, which was sparked by Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

LAGOS (DEC. 9) - Nigeria's conservative National Republican Convention (NRC) is leading the Social Democratic Convention (SDP), according to early results of Saturday's nationwide local government elections, official radio announced Sunday.

The results showed 75 per cent of NRC candidates for municipal chairmen as successful against 55 per cent for the SDP, the radio said.

These incomplete results showed NRC candidates recording more success in the northern part of the country and their rivals doing better in the south.

But unlike former elections, the voting pattern showed a "spread beyond geographical or ethnic boundaries", spokesman for the National Electoral Commission Tonnie Iredia said.

Full results are not expected until Wednesday.

The formation of the two officially approved parties contesting the poll was announced last year by President Ibrahim Babangida, who rejected all 13 political groups that had applied for registration.

To vote, electors had to stand in line before the photograph of their candidate.

The poll was the first on the way to restored civilian rule, which Gen. Babangida has pledged to introduce by October 1992.

NEW YORK (DEC. 9) - Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter, in a magazine article scheduled to hit the newstands Monday, says President George Bush should be more flexible in planned talks with Iraqi officials.

Writing in Newsweek magazine, Mr. Carter said: "If the exchanges are to be genuine, it will be necessary not to lay down patently unacceptable preconditions or unalterable demands.

"Meetings just to deliver an ultimatum will not be productive; they will likely lead to war."
